4 That nothing contained herein shall preclude the Com-
5 missioner from issuing a commitment to insure and 6 insuring a mortgage pursuant thereto where the mort-
7 gator is not the owner and occupant and the property is 8 to be built for sale and the insured mortgage financing is 9 required to facilitate the construction of the dwelling and 10 provide financing pending the subsequent sale thereof
11 to a qualified owner-occupant, and in such instances the 12 mortgage shall not exceed 85 per centum of the ap-

17 eral or State laws or by political subdivisions of State
18 or agencies thereof, as to rents, charges, and method of 19 operation, in such form and in such manner as, in the 20 opinion of the Commissioner, will effectuate the purposes
21 of this section, the mortgage may involve a principal
22 obligation not in excess of $5,000,000; and not in excess
23 of $7,000 per family unit for such part of such prop-

5 “(4) provide for complete amortization by periodic 6 payments within such terms as the Commissioner may 7 prescribe, but not to exceed forty years from the date

11 the amount of the principal obligation outstanding at 12 any time, or not to exceed such per centum per annum
13 not in excess of 6 per centum as the Commissioner finds 14 necessary to meet the mortgage market; and contain 15 such terms and provisions with respect to the applica-
16 tion of the mortgagor's periodic payment to amortiza-
17 tion of the principal of the mortgage, insurance, re-
18 pairs, alterations, payment of taxes, default reserves,
19 delinquency charges, foreclosure proceedings, anticipa-
20 tion of maturity, additional and secondary liens, and 21 other matters as the Commissioner may in his discretion
22 prescribe.

23 “(e) The Commissioner may at any time, under such 24 terms and conditions as he may prescribe, consent to the

3 of the mortgage.

4 “(f) The property or project shall comply with such
5 standards and conditions as the Commissioner may prescribe
6 to establish the acceptability of such property for mortgage
7 insurance.

8 “(g) The mortgagee shall be entitled to receive the 9 benefits of the insurance as hereinafter provided—

10 “(1) as to mortgages meeting the requirements of 11 paragraph (2) of subsection (d) of this section, as 12 provided in section 204 (a) of this Act with respect to 13 mortgages insured under section 203; and the provisions
14 of subsections (b), (c), (d), (e), (f), (g), and (h)
15 of section 204 of this Act shall be applicable to such 16 mortgages insured under this section, except that all
17 references therein to the Mutual Mortgage Insurance
18 Fund or the Fund shall be construed to refer to the 19 Section 221 Housing Insurance Fund and all references
20 therein to section 203 shall be construed to refer to this 21 section; or

22 “(2) as to mortgages meeting the requirements of
23 paragraph (3) of subsection (d) of this section, as

2 section 207 of this Act shall be applicable to such mort-

4 therein to the Housing Insurance Fund or the Housing
5 Fund shall be construed to refer to the Section 221
6 Housing Insurance Fund; or

7 “(3) in the event any mortgage insured under this
8 section is not in default at the expiration of twenty years
9 from the date the mortgage was endorsed for insurance,
10 the mortgagee shall, within a period thereafter to be de-11 termined by the Commissioner, have the option to as-12 sign, transfer, and deliver to the Commissioner the 13 original credit instrument and the mortgage securing 14 the same and receive the benefits of the insurance as 15 hereinafter provided in this paragraph, upon compliance
16 with such requirements and conditions as to the validity
17 of the mortgage as a first lien and such other matters
18 as may be prescribed by the Commissioner at the time
19 the loan is endorsed for insurance. Upon such assign-

21 gagee to pay the premium charges for insurance shall 22 cease, and the Commissioner shall, subject to the cash
23 adjustment provided herein, issue to the mortgagee
24 debentures having a total face value equal to the amount
25 of the original principal obligation of the mortgage

1 which was unpaid on the date of the assignment, plus

12 of interest which the Secretary of the Treasury shall 13 specify as applicable to the six-month period (consisting 14 of January through June or July through December)
15 which includes the issuance date of such debentures,
16 which applicable rate for each such six-month period
17 shall be determined by the Secretary of the Treasury
18 by estimating the average yield to maturity, on the 19 basis of daily closing market bid quotations or prices
20 during the month of May or the month of November, as 21 the case may be, next preceding such six-month period, 22 on all outstanding marketable obligations of the United 23 States having a maturity date of eight to twelve years
24 from the first day of such month of May or November,
25 and by adjusting such estimated average annual yield

1 to the nearest one-eighth of 1 per centum. The Com-
2 missioner shall have the same authority with respect to 3 mortgages assigned to him under this paragraph as con-
4 tained in section 207 (k) and section 207 (l) as to 5 mortgages insured by the Commissioner and assigned to 6 him under section 207 of this Act.

7 “(h) There is hereby created a Section 221 Housing
8 Insurance Fund which shall be used by the Commissioner
9 as a revolving fund for carrying out the provisions of this 10 section, and the Commissioner is hereby authorized to 11 transfer to such Fund the sum of $1,000,000 from the War
12 Housing Insurance Fund established pursuant to the pro-

24 proval of the Secretary of the Treasury, purchase in the open
25 market debentures issued under the provisions of this section.
26 Such purchases shall be made at a price which will provide

1 an investment yield of not less than the yield obtainable from 2 other investments authorized by this section. Debentures
3 so purchased shall be canceled and not reissued.

4 “Premium charges, adjusted premium charges, and ap-
5 praisal and other fees received on account of the insurance
6 of any mortgage accepted for insurance under this section,
7 the receipts derived from the property covered by such mort-
8 gage and claims assigned to the Commissioner in connection
9 therewith shall be credited to the Section 221 Housing
10 Insurance Fund. The principal of, and interest paid and to 11 be paid on debentures issued under this section, cash adjust-
12 ments, and expenses incurred in the handling, management, 13 renovation, and disposal of properties acquired under this 14 section shall be charged to such Fund.”

20 gage loans eligible for assistance under the National 21 Housing Act, as amended, or the Servicemen's Read-
22 justment Act of 1944, as amended, and the maximum
23 dollar amount limitation per room or per family unit
24 with respect to such mortgage loans eligible for assistance
25 under the National Housing Act, as amended: Provided,

1 That no such maximum ratio of loan to value and no
2 such maximum dollar amount limitation in the case of 3 mortgages insured under the National Housing Act,
4 as amended, shall be in excess of the applicable maximum
5 ratio of loan to value or the applicable maximum dollar
6 amount limitation per room or per family unit pre-
7 scribed by that Act, and no such maximum maturity
8 shall be in excess of the applicable maximum maturity
9 prescribed by the National Housing Act, as amended, 10 or the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944, as 11 amended: And provided further, That no action by the 12 President pursuant to this section shall apply with re-
13 spect to loans made, or loans with respect to which a 14 contract of insurance or guaranty or a firm commitment 15 to insure or guarantee has been entered into, under the 16 National Housing Act, as amended, or the Servicemen's 17 Readjustment Act of 1944, as amended, prior to such 18 action.

19 SEC. 202. The Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944, 20 as amended, is hereby amended by adding the following new 21 section at the end of title III:

22 "SEC. 515. With respect to mortgage loans for the pur-23 chase or construction of residential property (not including 24 farm homes) guaranteed, insured, or made pursuant to this 25 title, the Administrator shall make such rules and regulations

1 concerning (1) maximum rates of interest for such residen-
2 tial mortgage loans, (2) maximum ratios of loan to value
3 and maximum maturities with respect to such residential 4 mortgage loans, and (3) maximum fees and charges per-5 mitted to cover the costs of the origination of, and of the 6 supervision of construction loan disbursements in connection
7 with, such residential mortgage loans as may be necessary
8 to carry out limitations relating thereto established by the 9 President pursuant to the authority vested in him by section
10 201 of the Housing Act of 1954.”

11 SEC. 203. Section 504 of the Housing Act of 1950, as 12 amended, is hereby repealed.

13 TITLE III—FEDERAL NATIONAL MORTGAGE
14 ASSOCIATION

15 SEC. 301. Title III of the National Housing Act, as 16 amended, is hereby amended to read as follows:

18 ASSOCIATION

19 “PURPOSES

20 “SEC. 301. The Congress hereby declares that the pur-
21 poses of this title are to establish in the Federal Government
22 a secondary market facility for home mortgages, to provide 23 that the operations of such facility shall be financed by

1 private capital to the maximum extent feasible, and to 2 authorize such facility to—

3 “(a) provide supplementary assistance to the sec-
4 ondary market for home mortgages by providing a
5 degree of liquidity for mortgage investments, thereby
6 improving the distribution of investment capital avail-
7 able for home mortgage financing;

8 “(b) provide special assistance (when, and to the 9 extent that, the President has determined that it is in 10 the public interest) for the financing of (1) selected 11 types of home mortgages (pending the establishment of 12 their marketability) originated under special housing
13 programs designed to provide housing of acceptable
14 standards at full economic costs for segments of the 15 national population which are unable to obtain adequate 16 housing under established home financing programs, and 17 (2) home mortgages generally as a means of retarding
18 or stopping a decline in mortgage lending and home
19 building activities which threatens materially the sta-20 bility of a high level national economy; and 21 “(c) manage and liquidate the existing mortgage

22 portfolio of the Federal National Mortgage Association
23 in an orderly manner, with a minimum of adverse effect

1 upon the home mortgage market and minimum loss to 2 the Federal Government.

3 “CREATION OF ASSOCIATION

4 “SEC. 302. (a) There is hereby created a body corpo-
5 rate to be known as the ‘Federal National Mortgage Asso-
6 ciation’ (hereinafter referred to as the ‘Association’), which 7 shall be a constituent agency of the Housing and Home
8 Finance Agency. The Association shall have succession
9 until dissolved by Act of Congress. It shall maintain its 10 principal office in the District of Columbia and shall be 11 deemed, for purposes of venue in civil actions, to be a resi-12 dent thereof. Agencies or offices may be established by the 13 Association in such other place or places as it may deem nec-
14 essary or appropriate in the conduct of its business.

15 “(b) For the purposes set forth in section 301 and 16 subject to the limitations and restrictions of this title, the 17 Association is authorized to make commitments to purchase
18 and to purchase, service, or sell, any residential or home
19 mortgages (or participations therein) which are insured
20 under this Act, as amended, or which are insured or guar-
21 anteed under the Servicemen’s Readjustment Act of 1944,
22 as amended: Provided, That (1) no mortgage may be pur-
23 chased at a price exceeding 100 per centum of the unpaid
24 principal amount thereof at the time of purchase, with ad-
25 justments for interest and any comparable items; and (2)

1 the Association may not purchase any mortgage if (i) it is
2 offered by, or covers property held by, a Federal, State,
3 territorial, or municipal instrumentality or (ii) the original
4 principal obligation thereof exceeds or exceeded $12,500
5 for each family residence or dwelling unit covered by the 6 mortgage.

7 "CAPITALIZATION

8 "SEC. 303. (a) The Association shall have nonvoting
9 capital stock, to which the Secretary of the Treasury initially
10 shall subscribe as provided in subsections (d) and (e) of 11 this section. The stock of the Association shall have a par
12 value of $100 per share, and shall not be transferable ex-
13 cept on the books of the Association. At the option of the 14 Association such stock shall be retireable at par value at any 15 time, except that retirements of stock (other than stock
16 held by the Secretary of the Treasury) shall not be made if,
17 as a consequence thereof, the amount remaining outstand-
18 ing would be less than $100,000,000. With respect to such 19 stock held by him, the Secretary of the Treasury shall be 20 entitled to cumulative dividends for each fiscal year until 21 such stock is retired, at rates determined by him at the be-22 ginning of each such fiscal year, taking into consideration the 23 current average interest rate on outstanding marketable 24 obligations of the United States as of the last day of the 25 preceding fiscal year. The Secretary of the Treasury shall

1 permit the retirement of the stock held by him in the manner
2 provided in this section. Funds of the capital surplus and 3 the general surplus accounts of the Association shall be
4 available to retire the capital stock held by the Secretary
5 of the Treasury as rapidly as the Association shall deem 6 feasible.

7 “(b) The Association shall accumulate funds for its
8 capital surplus account from private sources by requiring
9 each mortgage seller to make payments of nonrefundable
10 capital contributions equal to not less than 3 per centum of 11 the unpaid principal amount of mortgages therein involved
12 in purchases or contracts for purchases between such seller
13 and the Association, or such greater percentage as may from 14 time to time be determined by the Association. In addition,
15 the Association may impose charges or fees for its services
16 with the objective that all costs and expenses of its operations
17 should be within its income derived from such operations
18 and that such operations should be fully self-supporting.
19 All earnings from the operations of the Association shall 20 annually be transferred to its general surplus account. At 21 any time, funds of the general surplus account may, in the 22 discretion of the board of directors, be transferred to reserves.
23 All dividends shall be charged against the general surplus
24 account. This subsection (b) shall not apply to the special
25 assistance functions of the Association under section 305 of

1 this title or to the management and liquidating functions of
2 the Association under section 306 of this title.

3 “(c) Until such time as all of the stock held by the Sec-
4 retary of the Treasury has been retired, the Association shall 5 issue, from time to time, to each mortgage seller its converti-
6 ble certificates (only in denominations of $100 or multiples
7 thereof) evidencing any capital contributions made by such 8 seller pursuant to subsection (b) of this section, which 9 certificates shall not be transferable except on the books of 10 the Association. Subject to such terms and conditions as 11 may be prescribed by the board of directors, such certificates
12 shall be convertible into capital stock of the Association hav-
13 ing an equal par value, but no such conversion shall be per-
14 mitted or made until such time as all of the outstanding capi-
15 tal stock of the Association held by the Secretary of the 16 Treasury has been retired and the Secretary of the Treasury
17 does not hold any of the obligations of the Association pur-
18 chased under section 304 (c) of this title. After all of the
19 stock held by the Secretary of the Treasury has been retired,
20 the Association may effect the direct issuance of stock in lieu
21 of and in the same manner as is provided in this subsection
22 for the issuance of convertible certificates. Such dividends
23 as may be declared by the board of directors in its discretion
24 shall be paid by the Association to its stockholders, but in any

1 one fiscal year the general surplus account of the Association
2 shall not be reduced through the payment of dividends (other
3 than to the Secretary of the Treasury) which exceed in the
4 aggregate 5 per centum of the par value of the outstanding
5 stock of the Association.

6 “(d) Within sixty days following the effective date of
7 the Housing Act of 1954, as of the day following a cutoff
8 date to be determined by the Association, the Association is
9 authorized and directed to issue and deliver to the Secretary
10 of the Treasury, and the Secretary of the Treasury is au-
11 thorized and directed to accept capital stock of the Associa-
12 tion having an aggregate par value equal to the sum of (1)
13 the amount of $21,000,000 (being the amount of the origi-
14 nal subscription for capital stock of $20,000,000 and paid-in 15 surplus of $1,000,000 of the Association) and (2) an
16 amount equal to the Association's surplus, surplus reserves,
17 and undistributed earnings, computed as of the close of the 18 cutoff date.

19 “(e) The capital stock of the Association delivered to 20 the Secretary of the Treasury pursuant to subsection (d) of 21 this section shall be in exchange for (1) the note or notes
22 evidencing the aforesaid original $21,000,000 (upon which 23 the accrued interest shall have been paid through the cutoff
24 date referred to in subsection (d) of this section), and (2)
25 the release to the Association of any and all rights or claims

1 which the United States might otherwise have or claim in
2 and to the Association's capital, surplus, surplus reserves, and
3 undistributed earnings, computed as of the close of the afore-
4 said cutoff date.

5 “(f) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, any
6 institution, including a national bank or State member bank
7 of the Federal Reserve System, trust company, or other bank-
8 ing organization, organized under any law of the United
9 States, including the laws relating to the District of Columbia,
10 shall be authorized to make payments to the Association of the 11 nonrefundable capital contributions referred to in subsection
12 (b) of this section, to receive stock or convertible certificates
13 of the Association evidencing such capital contributions, and 14 to hold or dispose of such stock or certificates, subject to the 15 provisions of this title.

16 “(g) As promptly as practicable after all of the capital
17 stock of the Association held by the Secretary of the Treasury
18 has been retired, the Housing and Home Finance Adminis-
19 trator shall transmit to the President for submission to the 20 Congress recommendations for such legislation as may be 21 necessary or desirable to make appropriate provisions to 22 transfer to the owners of the outstanding capital stock of the 23 Association the assets and liabilities of the Association in con-
24 nection with, and the control and management of, the second-
25 ary market operations of the Association under section 304

1 of this title in order that such operations may thereafter be
2 carried out by a privately owned and privately financed
3 corporation.

4 "SECONDARY MARKET OPERATIONS

5 "SEC. 304. (a) To carry out the purposes set forth in
6 paragraph (a) of section 301, the operations of the Asso-
7 ciation under this section shall be confined, so far as prac-
8 ticable, to mortgages which are deemed by the Association
9 to be of such quality, type, and class as to meet, generally,
10 the purchase standards imposed by private institutional mort-
11 gage investors. In the interest of assuring sound operation,
12 the prices to be paid by the Association for mortgages pur-
13 chased in its secondary market operations under this section,
14 should be established, from time to time, at or below the mar-
15 ket price for the particular class of mortgages involved, as
16 determined by the Association. The volume of the Asso-
17 ciation's purchases and sales, and the establishment of the 18 purchase prices, sale prices, and charges or fees, in its sec-
19 ondary market operations under this section, should be deter-
20 mined by the Association from time to time, and such de-
21 terminations should be consistent with the objectives that 22 such purchases and sales should be effected only at such
23 prices and on such terms as will reasonably prevent excessive
24 use of the Association's facilities, and that the operations of 25 the Association under this section should be within its in-

1 come derived from such operations and that such operations
2 should be fully self-supporting.

3 “(b) For the purposes of this section, the Association
4 is authorized to issue, upon the approval of the Secretary of
5 the Treasury, and have outstanding at any one time obliga-
6 tions in an aggregate amount sufficient to enable it to carry
7 out its functions under this section, such obligations to have 8 such maturities and to bear such rate or rates of interest as 9 may be determined by the Association with the approval of 10 the Secretary of the Treasury, and to be redeemable at the 11 option of the Association before maturity in such manner
12 as may be stipulated in such obligations; but the aggregate
13 amount of obligations of the Association under this sub-
14 section outstanding at any one time shall not exceed ten times
15 the sum of its capital, capital surplus, general surplus, re-
16 serves, and undistributed earnings, and in no event shall any 17 such obligations be issued if, at the time of such proposed
18 issuance, and as a consequence thereof, the resulting aggre-
19 gate amount of its outstanding obligations under this sub-
20 section would exceed the amount of the Association’s owner-
21 ship pursuant to this section, free from any liens or encum-
22 brances, of cash, mortgages, and bonds or other obligations
23 of, or bonds or other obligations guaranteed as to principal
24 and interest by, the United States. The Association shall
25 insert appropriate language in all of its obligations issued

1 under this subsection clearly indicating that such obligations,
2 together with the interest thereon, are not guaranteed by
3 the United States and do not constitute a debt or obligation
4 of the United States or of any agency or instrumentality
5 thereof other than the Association. The Association is
6 authorized to purchase in the open market any of its obli-
7 gations outstanding under this subsection at any time and
8 at any price.

9 “(c) The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized in 10 his discretion to purchase any obligations issued pursuant
11 to subsection (b) of this section, as now or hereafter in force,
12 and for such purpose the Secretary of the Treasury is au-
13 thorized to use as a public debt transaction the proceeds of 14 the sale of any securities hereafter issued under the Second
15 Liberty Bond Act, as now or hereafter in force, and the pur-
16 poses for which securities may be issued under the Second
17 Liberty Bond Act, as now or hereafter in force, are ex-
18 tended to include such purchases. The Secretary of the 19 Treasury shall not at any time purchase any obligations
20 under this subsection if (1) all of the capital stock of the 21 Association held by the Secretary of the Treasury has been
22 retired, or (2) such purchase would increase the aggregate
23 principal amount of his then outstanding holdings of such 24 obligations under this subsection to an amount greater than 25 $500,000,000 plus an amount equal to the total of such

1 reductions in the maximum dollar amount prescribed by
2 section 306 (c) as have theretofore been effected pursuant
3 to that section: Provided, That such aggregate principal
4 amount under this subsection (c) shall in no event exceed
5 $1,000,000,000. Each purchase of obligations by the Sec-
6 retary of the Treasury under this subsection shall be upon
7 such terms and conditions as to yield a return at a rate
8 determined by the Secretary of the Treasury, taking into
9 consideration the current average rate on outstanding market-
10 able obligations of the United States as of the last day of 11 the month preceding the making of such purchase. The Sec-
12 retary of the Treasury may, at any time, sell, upon such 13 terms and conditions and at such price or prices as he shall 14 determine, any of the obligations acquired by him under 15 this subsection. All redemptions, purchases, and sales by 16 the Secretary of the Treasury of such obligations under this 17 subsection shall be treated as public debt transactions of the 18 United States.

19 “(d) The Association may not purchase participations
20 or make any advance contracts or commitments to purchase
21 mortgages for its operations under this section, except that
22 the Association may, in the discretion of its board of directors,
23 issue a purchase contract (which shall not be assignable or 24 transferable except with the consent of the Association) in 25 an amount not exceeding the amount of the sale of mortgages

1 purchased from the Association, entitling the holder thereof
2 to sell to the Association mortgages in the amount of the
3 contract, upon such terms and conditions as the Association
4 may prescribe.

5 "SPECIAL ASSISTANCE FUNCTIONS

6 "SEC. 305. (a) To carry out the purposes set forth in
7 paragraph (b) of section 301, the President, after taking
8 into account (1) the conditions in the building industry and
9 the national economy and (2) conditions affecting the home
10 mortgage investment market, generally, or affecting various 11 types or classifications of home mortgages, or both, and 12 after determining that such action is in the public interest,
13 may under this section authorize the Association, for such 14 period of time and to such extent as he shall prescribe, to 15 exercise its powers to make commitments to purchase and
16 to purchase such types, classes, or categories of home mort-
17 gages (including participations therein) as he shall 18 determine.

19 "(b) The operations of the Association under this sec-
20 tion shall be confined, so far as practicable, to mortgages
21 (including participations) which are deemed by the Asso-
22 ciation to be of such quality as to meet, substantially and
23 generally, the purchase standards imposed by private insti-
24 tutional mortgage investors but which, at the time of sub-
25 mission of the mortgages to the Association for purchase, are

1 not necessarily readily acceptable to such investors. Sub-
2 ject to the provisions of this section, the prices to be paid
3 by the Association for mortgages purchased in its opera-
4 tions under this section shall be established from time to
5 time by the Association. The Association shall impose
6 charges or fees for its services under this section with the 7 objective that all costs and expenses of its operations under
8 this section should be within its income derived from such 9 operations and that such operations should be fully self-
10 supporting.

11 “(c) The total amount of purchases and commitments
12 authorized by the President pursuant to subsection (a) of 13 this section shall not exceed $200,000,000 outstanding at
14 any one time: Provided, That, notwithstanding such limi-
15 tation, the President pursuant to subsection (a) of this 16 section may also authorize the Association to exercise its 17 powers to enter into commitments to purchase immediate 18 participations and to make related deferred participation
19 agreements as hereinafter in this subsection provided, but 20 only to the extent that the total amount of such immediate 21 participation commitments and purchases pursuant thereto
22 (but not including the amount of any related deferred par-23 ticipation agreements or purchases pursuant thereto) shall 24 not in any event exceed $100,000,000 outstanding at any 25 one time, and any such deferred participation agreements

1 shall be made by the Association only on the basis of a
2 commitment by it to purchase an immediate participation
3 of a 20 per centum undivided interest in each mortgage and
4 a related deferred participation agreement by the Asso-
5 ciation to purchase the remaining outstanding interest in
6 such mortgage conditional upon the occurrence of such a
7 default as gives rise to the right to foreclose.

8 “(d) The Association may issue to the Secretary of 9 the Treasury its obligations in an amount outstanding at any
10 one time sufficient to enable the Association to carry out
11 its functions under this section, such obligations to mature
12 not more than five years from their respective dates of issue,
13 to be redeemable at the option of the Association before
14 maturity in such manner as may be stipulated in such obliga-
15 tions. Each such obligation shall bear interest at a rate
16 determined by the Secretary of the Treasury, taking into
17 consideration the current average rate on outstanding mar-
18 ketable obligations of the United States as of the last day
19 of the month preceding the issuance of the obligation of the 20 Association. The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to 21 purchase any obligations of the Association to be issued under
22 this section, and for such purpose the Secretary of the Treas-
23 ury is authorized to use as a public debt transaction the 24 proceeds from the sale of any securities issued under the
25 Second Liberty Bond Act, as now or hereafter in force, and

1 the purposes for which securities may be issued under the
2 Second Liberty Bond Act, as now or hereafter in force, are
3 extended to include any purchases of the Association's
4 obligations hereunder.

5 "MANAGEMENT AND LIQUIDATING FUNCTIONS

6 "SEC. 306. (a) To carry out the purposes set forth in
7 paragraph (c) of section 301, the Association is authorized
8 and directed, as of the close of the cutoff date determined
9 by the Association pursuant to section 303 (d) of this title,
10 to establish separate accountability for all of its assets and 11 liabilities (exclusive of capital, surplus, surplus reserves, and 12 undistributed earnings to be evidenced by capital stock as 13 provided in section 303 (d) hereof, but inclusive of all rights
14 and obligations under any outstanding contracts), and to 15 maintain such separate accountability for the management
16 and orderly liquidation of such assets and liabilities as pro-
17 vided in this section.

18 "(b) For the purposes of this section and to assure that,
19 to the maximum extent, and as rapidly as possible, private
20 financing will be substituted for Treasury borrowings other-
21 wise required to carry mortgages held under the aforesaid
22 separate accountability, the Association is authorized to issue,
23 upon the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, and have
24 outstanding at any one time obligations in an aggregate
25 amount sufficient to enable it to carry out its functions under

1 this section, such obligations to have such maturities and to
2 bear such rate or rates of interest as may be determined by
3 the Association with the approval of the Secretary of the
4 Treasury, and to be redeemable at the option of the Associa-
5 tion before maturity in such manner as may be stipulated in
6 such obligations; but in no event shall any such obligations be
7 issued if, at the time of such proposed issuance, and as a
8 consequence thereof, the resulting aggregate amount of its
9 outstanding obligations under this subsection would exceed 10 the amount of the Association's ownership under the 11 aforesaid separate accountability, free from any liens or 12 encumbrances, of cash, mortgages, and bonds or other
13 obligations of, or bonds or other obligations guaranteed
14 as to principal and interest by, the United States. The pro-
15 ceeds of any private financing effected under this subsection
16 shall be paid to the Secretary of the Treasury in reduction of 17 the indebtedness of the Association to the Secretary of the 18 Treasury under the aforesaid separate accountability. The 19 Association shall insert appropriate language in all of its 20 obligations issued under this subsection clearly indicating 21 that such obligations, together with the interest thereon, are
22 not guaranteed by the United States and do not constitute a 23 debt or obligation of the United States or of any agency or 24 instrumentality thereof other than the Association. The 25 Association is authorized to purchase in the open market any

1 of its obligations outstanding under this subsection at any
2 time and at any price.

3 “(c) No mortgage shall be purchased by the Associa-
4 tion in its operations under this section except pursuant
5 to and in accordance with the terms of a contract or commit-
6 ment to purchase the same made prior to the cutoff date
7 provided for in section 303 (d), which contract or commit-
8 ment became a part of the aforesaid separate accountability,
9 and the total amount of mortgages and commitments held by
10 the Association under this section shall not, in any event,
11 exceed $3,350,000,000: Provided, That such maximum
12 amount shall be progressively reduced by the amount of 13 cash realizations on account of principal of mortgages held
14 under the aforesaid separate accountability and by cancella-
15 tion of any commitments to purchase mortgages thereunder,
16 as reflected by the books of the Association, with the objective
17 that the entire aforesaid maximum amount shall be eliminated
18 with the orderly liquidation of all mortgages held under the 19 aforesaid separate accountability: And provided further,
20 That nothing in this subsection shall preclude the Association
21 from granting such usual and customary increases in the 22 amounts of outstanding commitments (resulting from in-
23 creased costs or otherwise) as have theretofore been covered
24 by like increases in commitments granted by the agencies of 25 the Federal Government insuring or guaranteeing the mort-

1 gages. There shall be excluded from the total amounts set
2 forth in this subsection and subsection (e) of this section
3 the amounts of any mortgages otherwise transferred by law
4 to the Association and held under the aforesaid separate
5 accountability.

6 “(d) The Association may issue to the Secretary of the 7 Treasury its obligations in an amount outstanding at any
8 one time sufficient to enable the Association to carry out its 9 functions under this section, such obligations to mature not 10 more than five years from their respective dates of issue, to 11 be redeemable at the option of the Association before ma-
12 turity in such manner as may be stipulated in such obliga-
13 tions. Each such obligation shall bear interest at a rate
14 determined by the Secretary of the Treasury, taking into
15 consideration the current average rate on outstanding mar-
16 ketable obligations of the United States as of the last day of 17 the month preceding the issuance of the obligation of the 18 Association. The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to 19 purchase any obligations of the Association to be issued
20 under this section, and for such purpose the Secretary of the 21 Treasury is authorized to use as a public debt transaction
22 the proceeds from the sale of any securities issued under the
23 Second Liberty Bond Act, as now or hereafter in force, and
24 the purposes for which securities may be issued under the
25 Second Liberty Bond Act, as now or hereafter in force, are

1 extended to include any purchases of the Association's obliga-
2 tions hereunder.

3 “(e) Of the $3,650,000,000 total amount of invest-
4 ments, loans, purchases, and commitments heretofore au-
5 thorized to be outstanding at any one time under this title
6 III prior to the enactment of the Housing Act of 1954, a
7 total of not to exceed $300,000,000 shall be applicable as
8 provided in section 305 of this title, and a total of not to ex-
9 ceed $3,350,000,000 shall be applicable as provided in sub-
10 section (c) of this section.

11 “SEPARATE ACCOUNTABILITY

12 “SEC. 307. The Association shall establish and at all
13 times maintain separate accountability for (a) its secondary
14 market operations authorized by section 304 hereof, (b) its
15 special assistance functions authorized by section 305 hereof,
16 and (c) its management and liquidating functions authorized
17 by section 306 hereof.

18 “BOARD OF DIRECTORS

19 public facility as the Administrator determines to be appro-
20 priate: And provided further, That for the purpose of com-
21 puting the amount of local grants-in-aid under this section
22 110 (d), the estimated cost (as determined by the Admin-23 istrator) of parks, playgrounds, public buildings, or other
24 public facilities may be deemed to be the actual cost thereof
25 if (i) the construction or provision thereof is not completed

1 at the time of final disposition of land in the project to be 2 acquired and disposed of under the urban renewal plan, and
3 (ii) the Administrator has received assurances satisfactory
4 to him that such park, playground, public building, or other
5 public facility will be constructed or completed when needed
6 and within a time prescribed by him. With respect to any 7 demolition or removal work, improvement, or facility for 8 which a State, municipality, or other public body has received 9 or has contracted to receive any grant or subsidy from the 10 United States, or any agency or instrumentality thereof, the 11 portion of the cost thereof defrayed or estimated by the 12 Administrator to be defrayed with such subsidy or grant shall 13 not be eligible for inclusion as a local grant-in-aid.

14 “(e) ‘Gross project cost’ shall comprise (1) the amount
15 of the expenditures by the local public agency with respect 16 to any and all undertakings necessary to carry out the 17 project (including the payment of carrying charges, but not

19 the amount of such local grants-in-aid as are furnished in 20 forms other than cash.

21 “(f) ‘Net project cost’ shall mean the difference be-22 tween the gross project cost and the aggregate of (1) the 23 total sales prices of all land or other property sold, and (2)
24 the total capital values (i) imputed, on a basis approved by 25 the Administrator, to all land or other property leased, and

1 (ii) used as a basis for determining the amounts to be trans-
2 ferred to the project from other funds of the local public
3 agency to compensate for any land or other property re-
4 tained by it for use in accordance with the urban renewal
5 plan.

6 “(g) ‘Going Federal rate’ means (with respect to any 7 contract for a loan or advance entered into after the first
8 annual rate has been specified as provided in this sentence)
9 the annual rate of interest which the Secretary of the Treas-
10 ury shall specify as applicable to the six-month period (be-11 ginning with the six-month period ending December 31,
12 1953) during which the contract for loan or advance is made,
13 which applicable rate for each six-month period shall be
14 determined by the Secretary of the Treasury by estimating
15 the average yield to maturity, on the basis of daily closing
16 market bid quotations or prices during the month of May
17 or the month of November, as the case may be, next preced-
18 ing such six-month period, on all outstanding marketable
19 obligations of the United States having a maturity date of 20 fifteen or more years from the first day of such month of May 21 or November, and by adjusting such estimated average an-
22 nual yield to the nearest one-eighth of 1 per centum. Any
23 contract for loan made may be revised or superseded by a
24 later contract, so that the going Federal rate, on the basis
25 of which the interest rate on the loan is fixed, shall mean

1 the going Federal rate, as herein defined, on the date that
2 such contract is revised or superseded by such later contract.

3 “(h) ‘Local public agency’ means any State, county,
4 municipality, or other governmental entity or public body,
5 or two or more such entities or bodies, authorized to under-

8 territories and possessions of the United States.

9 “(i) ‘Land’ means any real property, including im-

15 SEC. 412. Notwithstanding the amendments in this title 16 to title I of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended, the 17 Administrator, with respect to any project covered by any 18 Federal aid contract executed, or prior approval granted, by 19 him under said title I before the effective date of this Act, 20 may extend financial assistance for the completion of such 21 project in accordance with the provisions of said title I in

23 SEC. 413. The provisos with respect to the appropria-

6 cities and other political subdivisions, to assist them in de-7 veloping, testing, and reporting methods and techniques, and 8 carrying out demonstrations and other activities for the pre-
9 vention and the elimination of slums and urban blight. No
10 such grant shall exceed two-thirds of the cost, as determined
11 or estimated by said Administrator, of such activities or 12 undertakings. In administering this section, said Adminis-
13 trator shall give preference to those undertakings which in 14 his judgment can reasonably be expected to (1) contribute
15 most significantly to the improvement of methods and tech-
16 niques for the elimination and prevention of slums and blight,
17 and (2) best serve to guide renewal programs in other com-
18 munities. Said Administrator may make advance or prog-19 ress payments on account of any grant contracted to be 20 made pursuant to this section, notwithstanding the provisions
21 of section 3648 of the Revised Statutes, as amended. The 22 aggregate amount of grants made under this section shall not

3 amended, is hereby amended—

4 (1) by striking the words following the first colon
5 up to and including the words “such families” in sub-6 section 10 (g) and inserting the following: “First, to 7 families which are to be displaced by any low-rent hous-

10 public body or court, either through the enforcement
11 of housing standards or through the demolition, closing,
12 or improvement of dwelling units, or which were so dis-
13 placed within three years prior to making application to 14 such public housing agency for admission to any low-

16 or actions the public housing agency may from time to 17 time extend a prior preference or preferences: And pro-
18 vided further, That, as among families within any such 19 preference group”; and 20 (2) by striking the words “or was to be displaced

21 by another low-rent housing project or by a public slum-22 clearance or redevelopment project” in clause (ii) of 23 subsection 15 (8) (b) and inserting the following: “or 24 was to be displaced by any low-rent housing project or 25 by any public slum-clearance, redevelopment or urban

1 renewal project, or through action of a public body or 2 court, either through the enforcement of housing stand-
3 ards or through the demolition, closing, or improvement
4 of a dwelling unit or units”.

5 SEC. 502. Subsection 10 (h) of said Act, as amended, is 6 hereby amended to read as follows:

7 “(h) Every contract made pursuant to this Act for 8 annual contributions for any low-rent housing project ini-

10 contributions by the Authority shall be made available for 11 such project unless such project is exempt from all real and 12 personal property taxes levied or imposed by the State, city, 13 county, or other political subdivisions, but such contract shall 14 require the public housing agency to make payments in lieu 15 of taxes equal to 10 per centum of the annual shelter rents 16 charged in such project or such lesser amount as (i) is 17 prescribed by State law, or (ii) is agreed to by the local 18 governing body in its agreement for local cooperation with 19 the public housing agency required under subsection 15 (7)
20 (b) (i) of this Act, or (iii) is due to failure of a local public 21 body or bodies other than the public housing agency to per-22 form any obligation under such agreement: Provided, That,
23 if at the time such agreement for local cooperation is entered 24 into it appears that such 10 per centum payments in lieu of 25 taxes will not result in a contribution to the project through

1 tax exemption by the State, city, county, or other political
2 subdivisions in which the project is situated of at least 20
3 per centum of the annual contributions to be paid by the
4 Authority, the amounts of such payments in lieu of taxes shall 5 be limited by the agreement to amounts, if any, which would 6 not reduce the local contribution below such 20 per centum:
7 Provided further, That, with respect to any such project
8 which is not exempt from all real and personal property taxes
9 levied or imposed by the State, city, county, or other political 10 subdivisions, such contract shall provide, in lieu of the re-
11 quirement for tax exemption and payments in lieu of taxes,
12 that no annual contributions by the Authority shall be made
13 available for such project unless and until the State, city, 14 county, or other political subdivisions in which such project is 15 situated shall contribute, in the form of cash or tax remission 16 an amount equal to the greater of (i) the amount by which 17 the taxes paid with respect to the project exceeds 10 per 18 centum of the annual shelter rents charged in such project
19 or (ii) 20 per centum of the annual contributions paid by 20 the Authority (but not in excess of the taxes levied) : And
21 provided further, That, prior to execution of the contract for 22 annual contributions the public housing agency shall, in the 23 case of a tax-exempt project, notify the governing body of 24 the locality of its estimate of the annual amount of such pay-25 ments in lieu of taxes and of the amount of taxes which would

1 be levied if the property were privately owned, or, in the
2 case where the project is taxed, its estimate of the annual
3 amount of the local cash contribution, and shall thereafter
4 include the actual amounts in its annual reports. Contracts
5 for annual contributions entered into prior to the effective
6 date of the Housing Act of 1954 may be amended in accord-

11 annual contributions for any low-rent housing project for 12 which no such contract has been entered into prior to the 20 in connection with the project in excess of expenditures

21 necessary for management, operation, maintenance, or

23 paid annually to the Authority and to local public bodies
24 which have contributed to the project in the form of tax
25 exemption or otherwise, in proportion to the aggregate

1 contribution which the Authority and such local public
2 bodies have made to the project, and (b) no debt in 3 respect to the project, except for necessary expenditures
4 for the project, shall be incurred by the public housing
5 agency;

6 “(2) if, at any time, the project or any part thereof
7 is sold, such sale shall be to the highest responsible bid-
8 der after advertising, or at fair market value, and the pro-
9 ceeds of such sale together with any reserves, after ap-
10 plication to any outstanding debt of the public housing 11 agency in respect to such project, shall be paid to the 12 Authority and local public bodies as provided in clause
13 1 (a) of this subsection: Provided, That the amounts to 14 be paid to the Authority and the local public bodies shall 15 not exceed their respective total contribution to the 16 project.”.

17 SEC. 504. Paragraph (6) of section 16 of said Act, as 18 amended, is hereby repealed.

9 require certification as to compliance with the provisions of 10 this paragraph prior to making any payment under such 11 contract.”.

13 SEC. 602. The Federal Home Loan Bank Act, as 14 amended, is hereby amended by striking “$20,000” in sec-

16 SEC. 603. The Home Owners’ Loan Act of 1933, as

18 (1) by striking “$20,000” wherever it appears in 19 the first paragraph of subsection (c) of section 5 and 21 (2) by amending subsection (d) of section 5 to 22 read as follows:

23 “(d) (1) The Board shall have power to enforce 24 this section and rules and regulations made hereunder.
25 In the enforcement of any provision of this section or

1 rules and regulations made hereunder, or any other law
2 or regulation, and in the administration of conservator-
3 ships and receiverships as provided in subsection (d)
4 (2) hereof, the Board is authorized to act in its own
5 name and through its own attorneys. The Board shall 6 have power to sue and be sued, complain and defend in 7 any court of competent jurisdiction in the United States
8 or its territories or possessions. It shall by formal reso-
9 lution state any alleged violation of law or regulation
10 and give written notice to the association concerned 11 of the facts alleged to be such violation, except that the 12 appointment of a Supervisory Representative in Charge,
13 a conservator or a receiver shall be exclusively as pro-
14 vided in subsection (d) (2) hereof. Such association
15 shall have thirty days within which to correct the alleged 16 violation of law or regulation and to perform any legal 17 duty. If the association concerned does not comply with 18 the law or regulation within such period, then the Board
19 shall give such association twenty days written notice
20 of the charges against it and of a time and place at which

10 require compliance therewith. A record shall be made 11 of such hearing and any interested party shall be entitled 12 to a copy of such record to be furnished by the Board at 13 its reasonable cost. After such hearing and an adjudica-
14 tion by the Board, appeals shall lie as is provided by the 15 Administrative Procedure Act, and the review by the 16 court shall be upon the weight of the evidence. Upon 17 the giving of notice of alleged violation of law or regu-
18 lation as herein provided, either the Board or the asso-

12 ing a copy of process on any of its agents and mailing
13 a copy of such process by registered mail, to the Home
14 Loan Bank Board, Washington, District of Columbia.

15 “(2) The grounds for the appointment of a con-
16 servator or receiver for a Federal savings and loan
17 association shall be one or more of the following: (i)
18 insolvency in that the assets of such association are 19 less than its obligations to its creditors and others, in-20 cluding its members; (ii) violation of law or of a regu-
21 lation; (iii) the concealment of its books, records, or 22 assets or the refusal to submit its books, papers, records,
23 or affairs for inspection to any examiner or lawful agent
24 appointed by the Home Loan Bank Board; and (iv)
25 unsafe or unsound operation. The Board shall have

1 exclusive jurisdiction to appoint a Supervisory Repre-
2 sentative in Charge, conservator, or receiver. If, in the 3 opinion of the Board, a ground for the appointment of a
4 conservator or receiver as herein provided exists and 5 the Board determines that an emergency exists requiring 6 immediate action, the Board is authorized to appoint ex-
7 parte and without notice a Supervisory Representative in 8 Charge to take charge of said association and its affairs
9 who shall have and exercise all the powers herein pro-
10 vided for conservators and receivers. Unless sooner re-

12 Charge shall hold office until a conservator or receiver,
13 appointed by the Board after notice as herein provided,
14 takes charge of the association and its affairs, or for six 15 months, or until thirty days after the termination of the 16 administrative hearing and final proceedings herein pro-
17 vided, or until sixty days after the final termination of 18 any litigation affecting such temporary appointment,
19 whichever is longest. The Board shall have the power
20 to appoint a conservator or receiver but no such ap-
21 pointment of a conservator or receiver shall be made
22 except pursuant to a formal resolution of the Board
23 stating the grounds therefor and except notice thereof
24 is given to said association stating the grounds therefor
25 and until an opportunity for an administrative hearing

1 thereon is afforded to said association. Such hearing
2 shall be held in accordance with the provisions of the
3 Administrative Procedure Act and shall be subject to
4 review as therein provided and the review by the court
5 shall be upon the weight of the evidence. A conservator
6 shall have all the powers of the members, the directors,
7 and officers of the Federal association and shall be author-
8 ized to operate it in its own name or conserve its assets
9 in the manner and to the extent authorized by the Board.
10 The Board shall appoint only the Federal Savings and 11 Loan Insurance Corporation as receiver for any Federal
12 savings and loan association, which shall have power
13 as receiver to buy at its own sale subject to approval by 14 the Board. With the consent of the association expressed 15 by a resolution of the board of directors or of its mem-
16 bers, the Board is authorized to appoint a conservator or 17 receiver for a Federal association without notice and 18 without hearing. The Board shall have power to make 19 rules and regulations for the reorganization, merger, and 20 liquidation of Federal associations and for such associa-21 tions in conservatorship and receivership and for the 22 conduct of conservatorships and receiverships. When-
23 ever a Supervisory Representative in Charge, conservator, 24 or receiver, appointed by the Board pursuant to the 25 provisions of this section, demands possession of the

1 property, business and assets of any association, the 2 refusal of any officer, agent, employee, or director of 3 such association to comply with the demand shall be 4 punishable by a fine of not more than $1,000 or by 5 imprisonment for not more than one year or both by 6 such fine and imprisonment.”

18 ministrator is hereby authorized, during the period of three 19 years commencing on July 1, 1954, to make advances to 24 drawings, specifications, or other action preliminary to and

1 in preparation for the construction of public works: Provided,
2 That the making of advances hereunder shall not in any way

5 (b) No advance shall be made hereunder with respect
6 to any individual project unless it conforms to an overall
7 State, local, or regional plan approved by a competent State,
8 local, or regional authority, and unless the public agency
9 formally contracts with the Federal Government to com-
10 plete the plan preparation promptly and to repay such 11 advance when due.

12 (c) Advances under this section to any public agency
13 shall be repaid without interest by such agency when the 14 construction of the public works is undertaken or started:
15 Provided, That in the event repayment is not made promptly
16 such unpaid sum shall bear interest at the rate of four per 17 centum per annum from the date of the Government's de-18 mand for repayment to the date of payment thereof by the 19 public agency. All sums so repaid shall be covered into 20 the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts.

21 (d) The Administrator is authorized to prescribe rules
22 and regulations to carry out the purposes of this section.

23 (e) There is hereby authorized to be appropriated not 24 exceeding $10,000,000 to carry out the purposes of this sec-

HOUSING ACT OF 1954

MARCH 28, 1954.—Committed to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union and ordered to be printed

Mr. WOLCOTT, from the Committee on Banking and Currency, submitted the following

REPORT

[To accompany H. R. 7839]

The Committee on Banking and Currency, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 7839) to aid in the provision and improvement of housing, the elimination and prevention of slums, and the conservation and development of urban communities, having considered the same, report favorably thereon with an amendment and recommend that the bill do pass.

The amendment strikes all after the enacting clause of the introduced bill and inserts an amendment in the nature of a substitute. The text of the matter inserted appears in italic type in the bill herewith reported to the House.

I. INTRODUCTORY STATEMENT

This bill as reported, referred to as the Housing Act of 1954, is a comprehensive measure designed to promote the efforts of our people to acquire good homes, and to assist our communities to develop wholesome neighborhoods in which to live. It is the outgrowth of an intensive study inaugurated by President Eisenhower last fall when he appointed the Advisory Committee on Government Housing Policies and Programs consisting of leading citizens experienced in the problems of housing, mortgage finance, and community development. This Advisory Committee was requested to develop a new and revitalized housing program better adapted to current requirements, which would clearly identify the proper role of the Federal Government in the housing field and outline more economical and effective means for improving the housing conditions of our people. This study encompassed the entire scope of Federal legislative and administrative action to assist housing and improve the living conditions of our people.

The conclusions and recommendations of the Advisory Committee were set forth in the report which it submitted to the President on December 14 of last year. Most of those conclusions were reflected in the recommendations contained in the President's special housing message on January 25 of this year (H. Doc. No. 306) and are included in H. R. 7839. That report and the testimony of the many witnesses appearing before your committee furnished an unusually large and helpful background of current information and informed judgment for considering and acting on the proposals contained in this bill.

The provisions of the bill as reported, while relating to many phases of the housing programs of the Federal Government, are designed primarily to bring those programs in line with a few basic objectives, which include:

1. Maintaining a high volume of residential construction, with the assistance of mortgage insurance, secondary market, and other credit facilities of the Federal Government;

2. Providing a more even flow of home mortgage credit to all areas and assuring flexibility in home mortgage terms to keep pace with general economic conditions;

3. Placing much greater emphasis on improving and conserving our existing supply of housing through—

- (a) FHA insurance programs which will assist repair and rehabilitation work of homeowners, provide mortgage insurance for rehabilitation projects, and bring mortgage terms for existing housing up to those applicable to new housing; and

- (b) Financial assistance to help the community attack on a new broad basis its overall problem of urban blight and deterioration through rehabilitation and conservation, as well as slum clearance and urban redevelopment;

4. Providing mortgage insurance to assist in bringing new privately built housing within the financial reach of a larger segment of our increasing population; and

5. Substituting private sources of funds for Government expenditures wherever possible, especially in connection with the provision of a secondary market for home mortgages.

Your committee believes that one important feature of the bill, as reported, to be noted at this point is the coordination of functions relating to a community's attack on its overall problems of urban blight and deterioration, referred to in the bill as "slum clearance and urban renewal." Such an undertaking assisted by the Federal Government under the bill would have to be in accordance with a "workable program," approved by the Housing and Home Finance Administrator, for effectively using the public or private resources of the community to eliminate, and prevent the development or spread of, slums and urban blight. Until such a program of the community is approved, no loan or grant could be made for an urban renewal project under the bill as reported, no mortgage insurance commitment could be issued under the new special mortgage insurance programs provided in connection with urban renewal projects, and no future contract for annual contributions or capital grants for public housing under the United States Housing Act of 1937, as amended, could be entered into. This requires a broad and effective program to be undertaken by the community itself as a condition to such Federal assistance, and requires the community to marshal and coordinate its own facilities for meeting its problems of slums and deteriorating areas. It also requires a coordination of the Federal programs to assist the community in meeting these problems.

II. MAINTENANCE OF HIGH LEVEL OF CONSTRUCTION OF NEW HOUSES

A. FHA MORTGAGE LOAN AMOUNTS AND MATURITIES

Title I of the bill as reported would change the various statutory ceilings on amounts and maturities of FHA-insured mortgages. Your committee believes that these changes would greatly simplify the statutory provisions involved and would assist in maintaining a high level of new housing construction. This simplification of statutory mortgage terms is greatly needed, particularly with respect to section 203 covering the insurance of mortgages on 1- to 4-family homes. Also, since FHA- or VA-insured or guaranteed home mortgage loans represent a large segment of the home mortgage market and therefore exert a strong influence on the level of construction activity, your committee believes it desirable to permit the terms of such Government-guaranteed or insured home mortgage credit to be fully responsive to changing economic conditions, as would be permitted under the bill as reported.

A simplified system of statutory maximum mortgage amounts for section 203 would be provided by the bill as reported. The limits for 1- to 2-family structures would be increased to $20,000 from the present limit of $16,000 (which was first established in 1934), and the maximums for 3- and 4-family structures would be increased to $27,500 and $35,000, respectively, from present limits of $20,500 and $25,000. For both new and existing structures with 1- to 4-dwelling units, the bill as reported would provide that statutory maximum mortgage amounts be limited to 95 percent of the first $8,000 of value plus 75 percent of the value in excess of $8,000. This single formula would replace a very complex series of maximum mortgage limitations applicable under the present law to a variety of types of structure, sizes of units, and construction status of structures. The single formula would also remove the present statutory disadvantage of mortgage terms for existing construction.

These new provisions in section 203 would provide a more consistent schedule of maximum mortgage amounts. For example, a new home with a value of $11,000 is now eligible for a mortgage of $9,450, or 85.9 percent of value. Another new house of $11,800 is eligible only for that same maximum mortgage amount, and a house of $12,000 value is eligible for a mortgage of 80 percent of value, or only $9,600—merely $150 more than is available to the house valued at $1,000 less.

The following table shows the changes which would be made by the bill in the section 203 maximum mortgage amounts:

¹ Proposed sec. 203 (b) (2): Not to exceed 95 percent of $8,000 of appraised value and 75 percent of such value in excess of $8,000, and not to exceed a mortgage amount of $27,500 for a 3-family structure, or $35,000 on a 4-family structure.

² Current sec. 203 (b) (2) (A): Not to exceed 80 percent of appraised value, and not to exceed a mortgage of $20,500 for a 3-family structure, or $25,000 for a 4-family structure.

A single statutory maximum mortgage term of 30 years for application to all section 203 mortgages would be provided by the bill as reported, replacing present varying limits ranging from 20 to 30 years.

In many areas, school construction does not keep pace with new homebuilding required to meet the growing population. In some cases where the need for new school facilities is urgent because of a large amount of new home construction in a particular area, interim relief could be provided if builders were permitted temporarily to rent one or more of their houses to local school boards for school classroom use. The bill as reported gives the FHA the discretionary authority to permit this in cases where it deems such action appropriate.

The bill as reported would also modify the section 207 rental housing program of FHA by revising the maximum mortgage amount provisions to remove the present $10,000 ceiling and to allow mortgage amounts as high as $2,400 per room (or $7,500 per unit in projects with less than 4 rooms per unit) in projects of elevator type structures where FHA determines that construction cost levels require such mortgage amounts. These changes would not alter the basic limitation of these mortgages to 80 percent of FHA's estimated value of the property.

The maximum mortgage limits for FHA section 213 cooperative housing would be changed in several regards: (1) Mortgages up to $25 million would be insurable for mortgagors publicly regulated or supervised as to rents, charges, and methods of operation; (2) increases would be provided in maximum mortgage amounts on a per room and per unit basis (to $2,250 per room, or $8,100 per unit for projects averaging less than 4 rooms per unit, with related further increases for veterans' cooperatives); (3) additional increases in maximum mortgage amounts would be permitted with respect to elevator type structures (to $2,700 per room, or $8,400 per unit in projects with less than 4 rooms per unit, with related further increases for veterans' cooperatives); (4) mortgage limits would be based upon estimated values of properties instead of replacement cost, as formerly; and (5) uniform rather than graduated veterans' preferential mortgage limits would be made available, but only to projects having at least 65 percent of the membership composed of veterans.

Your committee wishes to emphasize that these, as well as the similar adjustments in the maximum amounts and maturities for other FHA programs, would represent the statutory maximums, but they would not automatically go into effect upon the enactment of the bill as reported. The authority to establish the actual terms under which the FHA would operate would be vested in the President. Testimony received by your committee indicated it is contemplated that the President would, when this legislation is enacted, put into effect a new scale of maximum mortgage loan amounts employing the new authority, but establishing the amounts somewhat below the various maximums permitted by the bill as reported.

B. FLEXIBILITY IN INTEREST RATES AND OTHER MORTGAGE TERMS

Title II of the bill as reported would authorize the President to establish, after receiving advice from a committee consisting of the Secretary of the Treasury as chairman and the Housing and Home Finance Administrator and the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs, the maximum rates of interest on FHA and VA home loans and to regulate other terms in connection with such mortgages. This authority would permit flexibility in interest rates and other mortgage terms in order to keep pace with the general economic conditions.

The bill as reported provides that maximum interest rates on FHA and VA home mortgages would be established by the President from time to time, on the basis of reviews to be made at his request by the aforementioned committee. Such reviews would be required to cover conditions affecting the mortgage investment market, and to take into consideration conditions in the building industry and the national economy generally. The maximum interest rate could in no event be established at a rate exceeding the average market yield on marketable Government bonds having a remaining maturity of 15 years or longer, plus $2\frac{1}{2}$ percentage points. This provision is not a formula which requires the interest rate to be set at $2\frac{1}{2}$ points above the average yield. It is a ceiling limitation permitting, within that limitation, the essential flexibility required for appropriate adjustment of the interest rate to changing economic conditions. Testimony received by your committee indicated that no increase in the present maximum interest rates is contemplated under present market conditions.

The chart following this paragraph shows the average market yields for the past 10 years on marketable Government bonds having a remaining maturity of 15 years or more, plus 2 and plus $2\frac{1}{2}$ percentage points, as compared with the maximum interest rates in effect on FHA section 203 loans. It is to be noted that a $2\frac{1}{2}$ percentage point spread over the yield on long-term Government bonds would have provided the necessary flexibility to have in effect maximum interest rates on FHA-insured section 203 loans which would be effective in the market. However, it also shows that, if the spread had been only 2 percentage points above the bond yield instead of the $2\frac{1}{2}$ provided by the bill as reported, the interest rate would have been limited to less than $4\frac{1}{2}$ percent in 1946, 1947, and in parts of 1945, 1948, 1949, and 1950. During these periods the maximum interest rate in effect for FHA-insured section 203 loans was $4\frac{1}{2}$ percent. In 1946 and 1947, a 4 percent rate on FHA-insured section 603 home loans under the veterans' emergency housing program was effective in producing an adequate supply of mortgage funds. However, during parts of 1948 and 1949, when a 2 percentage point spread would have precluded a $4\frac{1}{2}$ percent rate on FHA-insured section 203 loans, a lower rate probably would have been inadequate to induce a sufficient supply of funds for such loans. Thus, the 2 percentage point spread would not have provided the necessary flexibility to permit an effective interest rate on FHA-insured loans.

The bill as reported would also place authority in the President to establish the interest rates on FHA debentures to be issued in payment of mortgage insurance claims and to establish the maximum financing charges for FHA property improvement and repair loans which are insured under title I of the National Housing Act. The President could also establish maximum fees and charges in connection with FHA- and VA-aided residential mortgage loans, including any special service charges permitted under title II of the National Housing Act. These fees and charges could be established on the basis of factors impeding an adequate flow of credit, and could be established for areas on the basis of their remoteness from sources of credit, as well as the size or other characteristics of mortgages.

Subject to applicable provisions of law, the President would be authorized also to establish maximum mortgage maturities and maximum ratios of loan to value for FHA-insured and VA-guaranteed residential mortgage loans. In the case of loan to value ratios established in connection with loans guaranteed under the Servicemen's Readjustment Act, a minimum preference of 5 percent on the first $8,000 of value, plus 5 percent of the excess over $8,000 is required to be maintained.

The bill as reported contains a provision to make clear that action by the President under title II of the bill with respect to mortgage interest rates and terms can in no way impair any rights under existing contracts or commitments.

III. FHA INSURANCE FOR IMPROVEMENT AND CONSERVATION OF EXISTING HOUSING

A. HOME REPAIR AND IMPROVEMENTS

FHA title I loans.—To assist in the improvement and conservation of existing houses, the bill as reported would amend title I of the National Housing Act to increase the maximum insured loan for modernization and repair from $2,500 to $3,000 and the maximum maturity from 3 to 5 years. The latter provision would reduce the monthly charges required to carry such loans by about 35 percent. For example, the monthly charge required to carry a $1,000 loan having a 5-year maturity would be about $21, as compared with about $32 in the case of a 3-year maturity.

A related amendment would be made with respect to unsecured loans by Federal savings and loan associations. Under existing law, the associations may invest up to 15 percent of their assets in home repair or improvement loans insured under the FHA title I program or guaranteed or insured under the Servicemen's Readjustment Act or in other unsecured loans for property repair or improvement where the amount of the loan does not exceed $1,500. The bill as reported would increase this limitation to $3,000.

Certain changes would also be made with respect to title I loans to finance the improvement or conversion of existing structures used or to be used as dwellings for two or more families. The present maximum of $10,000 for this type of loan would be changed to $1,500 per family unit or $10,000, whichever is the greater, and the maximum maturity would be increased from 7 to 10 years. Testimony presented to your committee indicated that the expanded title I insurance program for improvement or conversion of multi-family projects is expected to be operated principally as a substitute for insured mortgage financing under other programs in those instances where existing indebtedness precludes the use of regular mortgage insurance programs.

The title I modernization and repair loans must be small and of short term because they are usually unsecured character loans, and the insurance of loans meeting the specified standards must be more or less automatic. The result, of course, is that the title I home modernization and repair loan program, while most useful and helpful in financing relatively less costly home repairs and improvements, is of limited assistance to families of modest income who need to finance major home improvements or modernization work. Assistance for such work, therefore, must be on a relatively long-term mortgage loan basis which permits lower monthly carrying charges.

In connection with its title I home repair and improvement program, the FHA presently requires, as an administrative limitation, that any such improvement must be located within the boundary lot lines of the property. A special situation has come to the attention of your committee in which this administrative limitation results in unusual hardship. In some communities homeowners are required by State and local law or codes and regulations to maintain their sewer lines beyond the boundaries of their lots to the point of their connection with the public sewer system. In cases where the individual homeowner's sewer line breaks, the necessary repairs can be financed with an FHA title I loan if the break happens to occur in the portion of his line located within the boundaries of his lot. However, if the break occurs in the portion of his sewer line located outside the boundaries of his lot, he cannot secure a title I loan to finance the needed repairs even though he is required by law to maintain that portion of his line and to make the repairs. Your committee is of the opinion that in such cases the present FHA administrative limitation works an unreasonable hardship upon the individual homeowners and should be waived.

Open-end mortgages.—As a further aid in financing needed home additions or improvements, the bill as reported would authorize FHA insurance of advances to a mortgagor made pursuant to provisions in an open-end FHA insured home mortgage. Open-end mortgages are mortgages which provide that the outstanding balance can be increased in order to advance additional loan funds to a mortgagor for improvement, alteration, or repair of the home covered by the mortgage without the necessity of executing a new mortgage. Your committee has been advised that in States where these mortgages can be used effectively, they eliminate the expenses of title search and recordings otherwise required in connection with placing a new mortgage for the additional loan funds. Also, it permits the homeowner to borrow for the improvements at the low rate of interest prescribed in the mortgage and generally for a longer term than otherwise available. The bill as reported would authorize the Federal Housing Administration to insure open-end mortgages only with respect to dwellings for four families or less. The Federal Housing Administration has advised that in administering this authority, it would perform whatever appraisal, credit analysis, and property inspections as may be necessary to assure the adequacy of the security to sustain the increased insurance liability, and that charges for use of the open-end provision will be computed to cover both processing cost and insurance risk.

Your committee wishes to point out that the mere enactment of this authority will not automatically make it operate effectively, and that a great deal of work and study, both within and without the Government, must be done to assure that it operates effectively and that housing consumers have an opportunity to obtain its full advantages. The Federal Housing Administration must take affirmative action to see that purchasers under insured mortgages are given this opportunity wherever possible under the laws of the particular State.

Under existing provisions of the Servicemen's Readjustment Act relating to the VA home loan guaranty program, open-end mortgage provisions may be utilized for home repairs or improvements, but additional guaranty coverage of the advances made under open-end mortgages is available only to the extent that the veteran has unused guaranty entitlement available. This is due to the fact that the Veterans' Administration cannot extend guaranty coverage comparable to the proposed FHA program without a change in the existing statute, since the $7,500 entitlement currently available to veterans under section 501 (b) of the act is restricted to loans for the purchase or construction of residential property to be occupied by the veteran as his home. Consequently, additional entitlement for supplemental loans for the alteration or improvement of the veteran's home is available only if he used less than $4,000 of his entitlement in connection with the purchase or construction of his home. Testimony was presented to your committee to the effect that in recent years most veteran home purchasers have used at least $4,000 of their entitlement in connection with the original purchase of the home, and, accordingly, have no entitlement available for alteration or improvement advances.

The bill as reported includes provisions to correct this situation by removing the existing limitation on the use of the currently authorized $7,500 maximum by a simple amendment to section 501 (b) of the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944, as amended (thus permitting the $7,500 maximum to apply to loans for alterations, improvements, and repairs, as well as the purchase and construction of residential property), and by removing the April 20, 1950, date limitation.

FHA title I program and the open-end mortgage.—In view of the fact that the bill as reported contains a provision authorizing the FHA to insure the advances under the so-called open-end mortgage, your committee deems it advisable to show the difference between the open-end mortgage and the alteration, repair, and improvement insurance program under FHA title I. The FHA title I alteration, repair, and improvement insurance program has been in effect since the inception of FHA and is designed to provide a method of financing alteration, repair, and improvement loans which are not secured by a lien on the property involved. These loans have been short term in character and the average loan has been approximately $570. This program offers homeowners an opportunity to secure this type of financing at reasonable costs.

The open-end mortgage is designed to permit homeowners to use the equity in their home as a basis for financing alterations, repairs, and improvements to their homes upon a more reasonable basis than otherwise would be required if it were necessary to refinance the entire mortgage in order to obtain the required loan funds. Although the authority for and the limitations of the open-end mortgage are determined by the laws of the individual States, a hypothetical example of the operation of the open-end mortgage would be as follows: A owns a home valued at $15,000 upon which there was an original mortgage for $12,000 containing an open-end provision permitting the mortgage to serve as a lien upon the property for future advances by the mortgagee to the mortgagor in an amount (including the then outstanding principal of the mortgage) not exceeding the original mortgage amount of $12,000. If the mortgagor had paid down his mortgage loan to $8,000 and required $3,500 to add an additional bedroom or bedrooms or to make other improvements or repairs to his property, the open-end mortgage would authorize the mortgaged property to serve as collateral for the amount of the advance plus the then unpaid principal, or $11,500. By using the open-end mortgage the mortgagor could finance this $3,500 loan at a much more reasonable cost than would be required if he otherwise had to refinance his whole loan. This saving would be obtained principally through a reduction in the cost of title search and title insurance, and recordation fees. In addition the mortgagor would be able to amortize the $3,500 loan at a reasonable monthly cost because the loan would carry the same rate of interest as the original mortgage loan and the term of the loan could run for the unexpired period of the term of the original mortgage. There may be cases in which a homeowner could use either the FHA title I program or the open-end mortgage in financing loans for the alteration, repair, and improvement of his property. The factors which a homeowner should review in determining which to use would be normally (1) the size of the loan required, (2) the purpose for which the loan is required, (3) the estimated life of the improvement, and (4) the difference in financing costs.

The committee desires also to point out that at the present time homeowners who own their property clear of any lien and who desire to make improvements or repairs to their property can either use the FHA title I program or obtain a mortgage loan upon their property. In determining which course to pursue such homeowners are now governed by the factors enumerated above.

B. REHABILITATION UNDER MORTGAGE INSURANCE PROGRAMS

Section 203 mortgage insurance.—As previously indicated, the bill as reported would increase insured maximum mortgage amounts and terms for existing houses to the terms and amounts applicable to new housing. The elimination of this disadvantage to mortgages on existing houses would provide an incentive to rehabilitation and conservation. Thus, it could be of assistance to families wishing to enlarge or modernize their homes. It could also be of important assistance to the rehabilitation of homes for sale.

These increases in mortgage amounts for existing houses can permit families to purchase homes better suited to their needs. For example, a newly constructed house with 2 bedrooms and an older house with 3 bedrooms may both be appraised at $8,000. Under the existing law, the FHA may insure a loan of $7,350 on the newly constructed house, so that a family could purchase it with a downpayment of $650. However, on the older house, even though the appraised value is the same, the FHA could not insure a loan of more than $6,400. The family purchasing the older house would have to make a downpayment of $1,600—$950 more than would be required to purchase a new house with the same value. In such a case, it could well be that the older house with 3 bedrooms would better meet the needs of a particular family than the newly constructed 2-bedroom house, but solely because of the much larger downpayment required, the family might choose to purchase the new 2-bedroom house.

Again, take the case of an existing house valued at $6,000 which with the addition of a bedroom and the modernization of the kitchen would be worth $8,000. Since FHA presently could not insure a loan of more than $6,400, a family purchasing the house and making the additions and improvements would have a cash outlay of $1,600 as compared to $650 for the purchase of a new house of the same value.

Section 207 insurance in blighted area.—To assure that the section 207 rental housing program may be available for rehabilitation of existing structures in blighted areas, the bill as reported contains a provision making clear that nothing contained in that section shall preclude the insurance of mortgages covering existing construction located in slum or blighted areas. The Federal Housing Commissioner would be authorized to require such repair or rehabilitation work to be completed as he believes necessary to remove conditions detrimental to safety, health, or morals.

New sections 220 and 221 insurance programs.—The new FHA section 220 and section 221 programs provided in the bill as reported would also assist in the improvement and conservation of our existing housing supply. These sections would authorize mortgage insurance to assist in financing the rehabilitation of existing dwellings as well as the construction of new dwellings in connection with slum clearance and urban renewal undertakings. Both of these new FHA insurance programs are discussed under the following heading.

IV. NEW SECTIONS 220 AND 221 FHA PROGRAMS

New sections 220 and 221 would be added to the National Housing Act to authorize FHA mortgage insurance to assist in financing the rehabilitation of existing dwellings as well as the construction of new dwellings in connection with slum clearance and urban renewal undertakings contemplated by title IV of the bill as reported. As stated earlier in this report, before either of the two programs could be used in a locality, the Housing Administrator would have to certify that the locality has an approved workable program for eliminating and preventing slums and urban blight. However, the bill provides that section 221 mortgage insurance may be made available in a community where an urban redevelopment project is underway at the time of the enactment of the Housing Act of 1954, even though the community has not yet developed a workable program and otherwise met the requirements for urban renewal projects. An urban redevelopment project now underway could be continued under the law in effect prior to the enactment of this bill.

Section 220.—This section would authorize the insurance of mortgages financing the rehabilitation of existing dwelling accommodations and the construction of new dwelling accommodations within an urban renewal area. An "urban renewal area" is defined as a blighted, deteriorated, or deteriorating urban area which is appropriate for an urban renewal project under title IV of the bill as reported.

Before issuing any commitments to insure mortgages under section 220, the Federal Housing Commissioner must be satisfied that there is a specific program of redevelopment or rehabilitation and conservation for a "delineated area" which will be effective in restoring the quality of that area to a condition which would justify mortgage insurance, and that there exists the necessary authority and financial capacity in the community to carry out the established program. The "delineated area" could be all or part of the urban renewal area, and the specific program of redevelopment or rehabilitation and conservation could be the urban renewal plan for the area.

Maximum mortgage insurance terms under section 220 would generally be consistent with section 203 for small properties, and with section 207 for projects of 12 or more units, with 2 exceptions: (1) In order to provide a full range of coverage for the various types and sizes of properties likely to be found in such areas, home mortgage terms will be available for structures with from 1- to 11-family dwelling units, instead of the section 203 limitation of 1- to 4-family units. (2) Multifamily project mortgages, meeting maximum dollar limitations, could be as high as 90 percent of value in all cases.

The new FHA section 220 mortgage insurance is available only for housing located within an urban renewal project area as defined in title I of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended by title IV of this bill as reported. Section 105 (c) of title I of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended, requires that with respect to any urban renewal project there must be a feasible method for the temporary relocation of families displaced from the project area, and that there are or are being provided, in the project area or in other areas not generally less desirable in regard to public utilities and public and commercial facilities and at rents or prices within the financial means of the families displaced from the project area, decent, safe, and sanitary dwellings equal in number to the number of and available to such displaced families, and reasonably accessible to their places of employment. Thus no FHA section 220 project can be carried out unless there is being provided adequate housing for the families who will be displaced from the urban renewal area in which such project is to be located. The new FHA section 221 mortgage insurance program would implement the relocation requirements of section 105 (c) of title I of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended, by affording an additional means of providing adequate housing in the community for families being displaced by urban renewal activities, and those families, of course, have a first preference to buy or rent any such section 221 housing.

Section 221.—This new section is designed to assist in financing low-cost housing for families displaced as the result of slum clearance or other governmental action. The locality must have requested that this program be made available in the community. The total number of dwelling units in properties covered by mortgages insured under section 221 could not exceed the total number of such dwelling units which the Federal Housing Commissioner determines to be needed for the relocation of displaced families who would be eligible to obtain the benefits of the insurance under this section.

Eligible displaced families would include families which are required to move because of any form of governmental action, such as land acquisition by a public body, closing or vacating of dwellings by public officials, or the eviction of families from public housing because of their incomes or for other reasons.

Some of these displaced families would be able to find decent homes in existing or new housing in the community, but many of them, because of their low income, would not. Section 221 is designed to bring privately financed housing within the reach of at least some portion of these families by applying the FHA mortgage insurance system on the most liberal terms deemed feasible and on a frankly new and untried basis.

The maximum mortgage under section 221 would be $7,600 per unit, or up to $8,600 in high cost areas. The maximum term would be 40 years and the mortgage insured by FHA could be as high as 100 percent of value. However, a minimum cash outlay of $200 would be required, which could include closing costs. The properties covered by the insured mortgages under section 221 could be single-family homes newly constructed or rehabilitated for sale to eligible displaced families, or they could be projects of 10 or more units (not necessarily contiguous) rehabilitated by private non-profit organizations for rent to such families. Mortgage financing would also be available for single-family homes built or acquired and repaired or rehabilitated for sale in amounts not to exceed 85 percent of value, to assist in the construction or repair and rehabilitation and provide financing pending subsequent sale to a qualified owner occupant.

To encourage private funds for section 221 projects, one of the terms of the insurance contract would provide that if the mortgage is in good standing at the end of 20 years, the mortgagee would have the option to assign the mortgage to FHA and receive in exchange debentures for the unpaid principal balance of the mortgage.

V. OTHER FHA PROVISIONS

A. INSURANCE AUTHORIZATION

The bill as reported would consolidate into a single authorization all existing mortgage insurance authorizations with respect to all FHA programs, except the home modernization and improvement program under section 2 of title I of the National Housing Act. Testimony indicates that this would simplify operations under the present several separate insurance authorizations, and establish at all times the amount of the current mortgage insurance authority for all programs. The bill as reported provides that the total authorization shall not exceed the estimated amount of insurance in force and commitments outstanding as of July 1, 1954, plus $1½ billion, except that with the approval of the President such total authorization could be increased by amounts up to a total of not to exceed $500 million. According to the estimates of FHA, the $2 billion additional authorization provided for in this bill would be sufficient, with a reasonable margin of safety, to permit FHA to continue its operations without interruption until June 30, 1955.

B. CHANGES IN MUTUAL MORTGAGE INSURANCE SYSTEM

The bill as reported would modify the mutual mortgage insurance system in order to increase the strength of the mutual mortgage insurance fund as a protection against the contingent possibility of payment of FHA debentures by the Treasury. This system is used to carry out the section 203 insurance program for 1- to 4-family home mortgages. Fundamentally, the changes made by the bill as reported would combine the independent resources of the 192 individual active group accounts in the present system into a single reserve system consisting of a general surplus account and a participating reserve account. Funds could continue to be distributed to terminating mortgagors from funds in the participating reserve account.

Under the present system, only the resources of the general reinsurance account stand between a deficit in liquidation of insurance for a single year's mortgages in a particular group account and a call upon the Treasury for redemption of debentures issued. The provisions in the bill as reported would make all the existing resources of the mutual mortgage insurance system available for redemption of maturing debentures before a call to the Treasury would be necessary.

C. MISCELLANEOUS

The bill as reported contains a number of other amendments of the National Housing Act which would transfer and consolidate or terminate certain insurance programs and make technical changes and refinements in programs.

Under the bill as reported, the present section 8 mortgage insurance program for the financing of low and moderate income housing, particularly in suburban and outlying areas, would be absorbed into the section 203 program. This would include authority to permit a service charge for small loans such as has been applicable under section 8.

The bill would terminate the insurance program under section 8 of title I of the National Housing Act which was designed to assist in providing adequate housing for families of low and moderate incomes, particularly in suburban and outlying areas where it was not practicable to attain conformity with many of the requirements essential for the insurance of mortgages on housing in built-up urban areas. This program was first enacted in 1950. In lieu of providing for a separate insurance program of the section 8 character the bill consolidates the section 8 program with the section 203 FHA program. In the testimony received by the committee on this subject fear was expressed by some that the section 8 program as proposed to be consolidated with the section 203 program would not be administered in the manner in which section 8 is presently administered and that the type of construction in the areas served by the section 8 program would suffer as a consequence. In this connection your committee wishes to make it crystal clear that the consolidation of the section 8 program into the FHA section 203 program is not to hinder the purposes and objectives of the present section 8 provisions and is to be administered in the same manner as the present section 8 program. There is a substantial need for the section 8 type of home in many outlying and rural areas and the committee emphatically believes that these needs should continue to be met.

In its consideration of overall housing needs the attention of your committee has been brought to difficulties that had been experienced in obtaining FHA insurance on outlying properties. The committee recognizes that sound underwriting procedures must be followed by FHA in arriving at property valuations. At the same time the committee recognizes, however, that changes are taking place in the urban housing field, particularly in the extension of housebuilding out into the country along arterial highways. The committee is of the opinion that the FHA should recognize the changes that do occur and which may properly be reflected in sound underwriting practices.

Under existing law there is statutory authority for a service charge in addition to the insurance premium and interest charge on mortgages insured by FHA under section 8 of title I. As previously noted, this section 8 small home insurance program is to be integrated with the FHA section 203 insurance program. A service charge was permitted in connection with a section 8 mortgage because of the modest amount of the mortgage and because of the higher cost incident to the fact that many of these mortgages were written on properties in outlying areas. The bill as reported would permit a service charge on section 203 mortgages. It is the opinion of your committee that if a service charge is permitted to be collected in addition to the interest and insurance premium charges on such insured mortgages, the service charge should only be permitted in connection with lower cost homes similar to the present section 8 FHA insured mortgage program. In this connection, the committee calls attention to the fact that section 201 (4) of the bill as reported gives the President specific authority to set the maximum for any special service charge permitted.

Representatives of the American Hotel Association in testifying before the committee again called the attention of the committee to the competition which some of their members are experiencing from the renting on a transient basis of housing accommodations insured by FHA. They informed the committee that in some cases operators of insured rental projects had obtained a city hotel license and were actually reserving some of the accommodations for rental only on a transient basis. It has never been the intention of the committee that FHA should insure hotel accommodations and your committee desires to reiterate its intention at this time. The rental insurance programs of the National Housing Act are designed to provide rental accommodations for family use. The mortgage loans insured are amortized by monthly payments of principal and interest derived from monthly rental income. A project is not insured unless the FHA has determined there is an adequate need for such accommodations in the community. The programs are not designed to cover hotels, nor is the insurance of hotel properties permitted. The fact that a project has been insured should therefore be a prohibition to rental on a transient basis.

Your committee has given serious consideration to this problem and finds that there is presently adequate authority in the law for the FHA to impose controls in connection with future mortgage insurance contracts which will prevent family accommodations being rented to transients. It is the intention of your committee that the FHA impose such controls. With respect to housing covered by mortgage insurance contracts previously entered into, it is the intention of your committee that the FHA take firm action to obtain full compliance with such contracts as have been imposed for this purpose in those contracts, making such investigation and taking such other enforcement action as may be required.

Also, a new section 222 would be added to the National Housing Act which would authorize insurance under sections 203 or 207 of (1) all classes of mortgage insurance transactions presently authorized under section 610 for the insurance of mortgages financing the sale of publicly owned housing, (2) refinancing mortgages under sections 608, 903, and 908, and (3) mortgages assigned to the FHA Commissioner or acquired by him in the sale of acquired properties.

The bill, as reported, would also terminate the FHA insurance programs for farm-housing mortgages (sec. 203 (d)), prefabricated housing loans (sec. 609), construction loans for groups of single-family houses for sale (sec. 611), and the title VII program for insurance of the yield on equity investments in rental housing. The programs which would be terminated are virtually inoperative.

VI. SECONDARY CREDIT FACILITY FOR HOME MORTGAGES—FNMA

Title III of the bill as reported would recharter the Federal National Mortgage Association with substantial changes in its authority and with provision for the eventual substitution of private capital for Government investment in its secondary market operations.

A. CAPITALIZATION OF FNMA

Under the bill as reported, FNMA would issue nonvoting capital stock. The initial issuance of stock would be subscribed for by the Secretary of the Treasury in an amount equal to the sum of the present capital stock of the existing FNMA and its paid-in surplus, surplus, surplus reserves, and undistributed earnings as of the close of a cutoff date to be within 90 days following the effective date of the bill as reported. Testimony indicated that this bill will amount to approximately $70 million. The Secretary of the Treasury would be entitled to receive cumulative dividends on the capital stock held by him for each fiscal year from the date the capital represented by the stock is utilized until it is retired, at rates determined by him at the beginning of each fiscal year, based on the current average interest rate on outstanding marketable Government obligations.

The bill as reported would also provide for capital funds from private sources. This private capital would be obtained only in connection with the secondary market operations of FNMA and would be available only for such operations. In its secondary market operations, the FNMA would require each mortgage seller to make payments of nonrefundable capital contributions of not less than 3 percent of the unpaid principal amount of the mortgages involved in any purchases or contracts for purchases. Convertible certificates would be issued to each mortgage seller evidencing the capital contributions made by the seller. These convertible certificates would not bear interest, nor would any dividends be payable to the holders thereof. After all of the outstanding capital stock held by the Secretary of the Treasury is retired and the Association has repaid all its obligations under the secondary market operations to the Treasury, these certificates would be convertible (on conditions imposed by the Association) into capital stock of equal par value.

After all the stock held by the Secretary of the Treasury is retired and the Secretary holds no obligations of the Association, FNMA would be authorized to issue stock directly to mortgage sellers. The board of directors would be given power to declare dividends at a rate not to exceed in any year 5 percent of the par value of outstanding stock.

FNMA would also be authorized to impose charges or fees for its services. Earnings would be transferred annually to a general surplus account. Provision would also be made for the establishment of reserves. The capital stock held by the Secretary of the Treasury would be retirable from funds of the capital surplus and the general surplus accounts. Except as to stock held by the Secretary of the Treasury, capital stock would not be retirable if, as a consequence, the amount remaining outstanding would be less than $100 million.

As soon as possible after all the capital stock of the Association held by the Secretary of the Treasury has been retired, the Housing and Home Finance Administrator would be required to transmit to the President for submission to Congress recommendations for legislation to transfer the assets and liabilities of the Association in connection with, and the control and management of its secondary market operations, to the private owners of the outstanding capital stock.

B. FUNCTIONS OF FNMA UNDER ITS NEW CHARTER

Under its new charter the Federal National Mortgage Association would have three distinct and entirely separated functions—

- (1) provision of assistance to the secondary market for FHA-insured and VA-guaranteed home mortgages in order to furnish additional liquidity for mortgage investments and thereby improve distribution of mortgage investment funds,
- (2) direct Government assistance for certain types of these mortgages, or for such mortgages generally if necessary to retard or stop a decline in home-building activities which threatens the stability of a high level national economy, and
- (3) management and liquidation of the mortgages held in the portfolio of the present Federal National Mortgage Association.

To carry out these three functions, FNMA would be authorized, subject to the limitations prescribed by the bill, to purchase, service, or sell home mortgages insured by the Federal Housing Commissioner or guaranteed or insured by the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs. No mortgage could be purchased at a price exceeding 100 percent of the unpaid principal amount of the mortgage, nor if the original principal amount thereof exceeded $15,000 for each family dwelling unit.

1. Secondary market functions

Under the bill as reported, the secondary market operations of FNMA would be confined, so far as practicable, to mortgages which are deemed to be of such quality, type, and class as to meet, generally, the purchase standards imposed by private institutional mortgage investors. No mortgage could be purchased in these secondary market operations if it was insured or guaranteed prior to the effective date of the Housing Act of 1954. FNMA's activities would have to meet two principal objectives: First, to avoid excessive use of its facilities. Second, that its secondary market operations should be wholly self-supporting. Your committee believes that these functions should constitute a true secondary market, with FNMA purchasing only those mortgages which are generally marketable, and otherwise carrying on a business-type operation.

FNMA would be prohibited from purchasing any participations or making advance commitments in connection with its secondary market functions, except that, in the discretion of the Board of Directors, it could make commitments for purchase of an amount of mortgages equal to an amount of mortgages which FNMA sold to the lender to whom the advance contract would be issued.

To carry out its secondary market operations, FNMA would be authorized to issue, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, obligations for sale to the investing public. The aggregate amount outstanding at any one time could not exceed 10 times the sum of its capital, capital surplus, general surplus, reserves, and undistributed earnings. At the time of issuance, the total of obligations could not exceed the amount of the cash, mortgages, and Government bonds held by FNMA in connection with its secondary market operations. Such obligations would not be guaranteed as to principal or interest by the United States.

The Secretary of the Treasury would be authorized, in his discretion, to purchase the secondary market obligations of the Association, but his holdings could not at any time exceed $500 million plus an amount equal to a total of the reductions in the amount of the existing FNMA portfolio which FNMA would be liquidating, or, in any event $1 billion. This authority of the Secretary of the Treasury would terminate when all of the capital stock held by the Secretary of the Treasury had been retired. This provides for Treasury backstop of FNMA debentures to be issued to the investing public, although it is believed that resort to Treasury borrowing should not be necessary.

The Association would be required to pay annually to the Secretary of the Treasury an amount equal to the amount of Federal income taxes for which it would be subject if it were not exempt from such taxes as to its secondary market operations.

2. Special assistance operations

The bill as reported would provide that the President, after taking into account conditions in the building industry and the national economy and conditions affecting the home-mortgage investment market, may authorize FNMA to make commitments to purchase, and to purchase such types, classes, or categories of home mortgages as he may determine. The funds required to carry out these special-assistance operations would be obtained entirely from Treasury borrowings.

Two methods of special assistance are authorized:

First, FNMA could purchase and make commitments to purchase such home mortgages and participations therein, but the total thereof could not exceed $200 million outstanding at any one time.

Second, FNMA could be authorized to enter into commitments to make immediate cash participations in mortgages and to make related deferred participation agreements. The deferred participation agreements could be made only on the basis of its purchasing an immediate cash participation of a fixed 20 percent undivided interest in a mortgage and a related deferred participation agreement to purchase the remaining outstanding interest in such mortgage conditional upon the occurrence of a default. The total amount of such immediate cash participations—not including the amount of any related deferred participation agreements or purchases pursuant thereto—could not exceed $100 million at any one time. The $100 million limitation would relate to immediate purchase of a fixed 20 percent undivided interest in each mortgage, with purchase of the remaining interest in the event of default being excluded from such dollar limitation. Thus, the $100 million authorization would permit such special assistance to cover a total of not exceeding $500 million in mortgages.

One type of mortgage for which the special assistance of FNMA would be made available, if necessary, is the new section 221 FHA insured mortgage (authorized in title I of this bill as reported) covering low-cost housing for families displaced by urban renewal and other Governmental activities.

3. Management and liquidating functions

Provision would be made in the bill as reported for the management and liquidation by the newly chartered FNMA of the present mortgage portfolio held by the existing FNMA. These provisions are designed to avoid disruption of the home mortgage market and loss to the Treasury. At the same time, the burden on the Treasury required by the carrying of the present portfolio would be reduced by permitting the substitution, as rapidly as practicable, of private financing for outstanding Treasury borrowings.

To assure maximum private financing to carry the mortgages held in the present portfolio, FNMA would be authorized, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, to issue obligations for sale to the investing public. Such obligations would not be guaranteed as to principal or interest by the United States. The total of such obligations could not exceed the amount of the cash, mortgages, and Government bonds held by FNMA in connection with these management and liquidating functions. The proceeds of any private financing would be paid to the Secretary of the Treasury in reduction of the present outstanding indebtedness of FNMA to the Secretary. FNMA would also be authorized to issue its obligations to the Secretary of the Treasury in sufficient amount to carry out its functions in this connection. However, the maximum amount of obligations which could be issued to the Treasury could never increase beyond the limit of $3,350 million to accommodate the present portfolio and outstanding commitments for which authority already exists. Provision would also be made for the progressive reduction of this maximum amount by the amount of cash realizations from the liquidation of the portfolio, with the objective that the entire investment of the Treasury shall be eliminated as promptly as practicable.

The bill as reported provides that, after a cutoff date which must be not more than 90 days after this legislation becomes effective, no mortgage shall be purchased by FNMA under the section relating to its management and liquidation functions except pursuant to a contract or commitment to purchase the same made prior to such cutoff date. In the early part of the defense mobilization program, FNMA set aside certain of its funds for the purchase of mortgages covering defense housing programed by the Housing and Home Finance Administrator within certain specified dates. When FNMA was subsequently given authority to make advance contracts or commitments to purchase mortgages covering programed defense housing, it was not required that any mortgages covered by these earlier setasides obtain advance commitments. However, under the above provisions of the bill as reported, any such mortgages would either have to be purchased by FNMA before the cutoff date or covered by advance commitments made before the cutoff date; otherwise FNMA could not, under the section relating to its management and liquidating functions, purchase any such mortgages.

VII. SLUM CLEARANCE AND URBAN RENEWAL

A. CHANGES IN TITLE I OF THE HOUSING ACT OF 1949

Title IV of the bill as reported would broaden the present program of the Housing Agency under title I of the Housing Act of 1949 by providing for Federal assistance for urban renewal which could cover not only slum clearance and urban redevelopment but rehabilitation and conservation of blighted and deteriorating areas. Your committee believes that this major change of emphasis would provide a much more realistic and effective approach toward eliminating and preventing the development and spread of slums and urban blight. It would permit an attack on the cause as well as the symptoms of the trouble. Under the bill as reported, projects could be assisted which include not only slum clearance but rehabilitation in broader neighborhoods or areas which may be deteriorated but are still suitable for conservation measures.

The enlargement of the project area to cover an urban renewal area—which may be an entire neighborhood or a very large deteriorated area—would result in an expansion of the site improvements and facilities required for the larger area. Streets, utilities, parks, playgrounds, and other site improvements and public facilities when undertaken by the local public agency in order to accomplish the urban renewal objectives could be eligible under the Federal finance contract.

The cost of additional facilities and activities which are required to make possible sound clearance and redevelopment, or neighborhood restoration and renewal, and which are provided by the local community would, of course, be included as gross project costs. Thus, for example, the gross project cost—which determines the amount of the Federal expenditure—would include, in addition to costs in connection with planning and carrying out slum clearance and redevelopment as now authorized in the law, public expenditures in connection with:

1. Carrying out plans for a program of voluntary repair and rehabilitation of buildings or other improvements in accordance with the urban renewal plan;

2. Acquisition of real property and demolition or removal of buildings and improvements, and disposition of property in the broader urban renewal area where necessary to eliminate unhealthful, unsanitary, or unsafe conditions, lessen density, eliminate obsolete or detrimental use, or to otherwise remove or prevent the spread of blight or deterioration; and

3. Installation, construction, or reconstruction of streets, utilities, parks, playgrounds, and other improvements which are necessary for carrying out the urban renewal plan.

The bill as reported would make ineligible, for inclusion as local grants-in-aid, revenue-producing public utilities the capital cost of which is financed by service charges or special assessments. Your committee felt, for example, that if a community constructed new water mains required to serve or support an urban renewal project, but would eventually recapture the costs of such construction from service charges or special assessments against the users of that facility (as distinguished from general taxes or charges assessed against all property in the locality), such work should not be eligible for inclusion as part of the local grants-in-aid which the community is required to make.

It should be pointed out that in many cases, rehabilitation of dwellings alone would not reestablish a deteriorated area as a sound neighborhood, as older deteriorated neighborhoods frequently are characterized by the poor condition of their streets and alleys, the lack of adequate sewers, poor lighting, the almost complete lack of playgrounds, parks, or other open spaces, and by old and inadequate school buildings. Parks, playgrounds, and other recreation areas are thus essential to the reestablishment and maintenance of healthy neighborhoods. Also, streets, alleys, sidewalks, street lights, and other improvements must be restored and rehabilitated to meet modern needs in order to achieve sound and lasting rehabilitation and conservation objectives.

Under the present law, where a public facility primarily serves the redevelopment project area, the Housing Administrator is authorized to permit its entire cost to be counted as a local grant-in-aid even though it serves other areas to some extent. Also, under the present law, where it directly serves both the project area and other areas, the Administrator may provide, in computing the local grant-in-aid, for an appropriate apportionment of cost. There is at present no statutory guide, other than general guides such as the use of the word "primarily," for determining when the cost will be apportioned. The administrative rules which have been in effect in this respect required apportionment and inclusion as a local grant-in-aid of only the apportioned cost of any such public facility in cases where the degree of the benefits to areas outside the project area amounted to one-third or more of the total benefits. The bill as reported would remove this from the area of administrative regulation by making such apportionment mandatory in all cases where the degree of the benefit to areas outside the urban renewal area is estimated at 20 percent or more of the total benefits derived from the facility.

Under the provisions of existing law, an urban redevelopment project consisting of open land must be developed for predominated residential use.

The bill as reported by your committee would permit the property in an urban renewal project to consist entirely of open land to be developed for nonresidential use, where such land, because of obsolete platting, diversity of ownership, or other reasons, substantially impairs or arrests the sound growth of the community.

No provision is included in the bill as reported for increasing the present authorization for loans or capital grants under title I of the Housing Act of 1949. Testimony of representatives of the Housing Agency was to the effect that the broadened program of Federal assistance provided in the bill as reported could be initiated and carried out during the coming fiscal year without any additional authorization.

B. FHA ASSISTANCE FOR URBAN RENEWAL

The new sections 220 and 221 FHA mortgage insurance programs which would be authorized by this bill as reported (title I) are closely related to and are intended to supplement the provisions in the bill for urban renewal. The provisions of the section 220 program should provide a stimulus to local community action and encourage the support of builders, lenders, and others in the rehabilitation of blighted areas.

The proposed section 221 FHA program should be particularly helpful in facilitating urban renewal programs in many communities by providing housing for many of the families displaced from their homes as a result of urban renewal activities. The enforcement of local housing codes to reduce over-occupancy, the rehabilitation of housing, the clearance of slum areas, and other renewal activities generate needs for housing for relocation purposes. The relocation needs of the low-income families, particularly the minority group, are particularly acute and require special provisions.

Your committee also calls attention to the fact that the inclusion of the provision that no contract for a loan and grant for any slum clearance and urban renewal project may be made unless the community concerned has presented to the Administrator, and the Administrator has approved, a workable program for dealing with the entire problem of urban slums and blight, including appropriate local codes and regulations relating to housing occupancy standards and adequate administrative machinery for the enforcement of such local codes and regulations, should have the effect of reducing the income in connection with properties in urban renewal areas to the extent that it is derived from illegal uses. Where the capitalized income from the particular property is a determining factor in the establishment of its value, this would mean that the acquisition cost would be lowered and, in turn, the amount of both the Federal and local grants would be lower than otherwise would be the case.

C. WORKABLE LOCAL PROGRAM REQUIRED

Your committee believes that the problem of eliminating urban slums and blight, while national in scope, is essentially a local problem. The basic responsibility for its solution should rest with the local community, and, Federal assistance is justified only if the community is willing to face up to the problem of neighborhood decay and to undertake programs directed to its prevention.

Accordingly, the bill as reported provides that local community must present a workable program to the Housing Administrator for eliminating and preventing slums and urban blight, and the Administrator must have approved the local program before Federal aid will hereafter be made available to the community for—

(1) Slum clearance and urban renewal under title I of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended;

(2) Low-rent public housing under the United States Housing Act of 1937, as amended; and

(3) Rehabilitation of housing or the construction of new housing under the two new FHA programs provided by the bill as reported (sections 220 and 221 of the National Housing Act), except as to section 221 housing in communities having existing urban redevelopment projects.

The local program must provide for utilizing appropriate private and public resources, and must include an official plan of action for effectively dealing with the problem of urban slums and blight within the community and for the establishment and preservation of a well-planned community with well-organized residential neighborhoods.

This workable program requirement is designed to stimulate and encourage the community to undertake to develop better and more up-to-date codes and regulations and vigorous, effective enforcement of those codes in an effort to see that its housing is brought within at least minimum decent standards. It should stimulate and encourage the community to undertake positive measures to bring about the conservation and rehabilitation of neighborhoods and areas that are economically sound and worth saving in order to prevent the creation of new slums, and to see that practical steps are taken to assure adequate rehousing and fair treatment for families who may be displaced by subsequent clearance or rehabilitation operations.

Once the community has presented a workable plan, the Federal Government would be authorized to make available its assistance. The slum clearance and urban renewal program could be made available to help clear slums and rehabilitate neighborhoods; the low-rent public-housing program could be operative to help house displaced low-income families; and the FHA section 220 and 221 programs could provide assistance for rebuilding cleared areas and an opportunity for housing displaced families through home purchases and lease-purchase arrangements.

D. SAVINGS PROVISION

Some time must elapse after enactment of this legislation before local communities would be prepared to undertake urban renewal projects, as they would have to perform considerable preparatory work and readjust their activities to the needs of the new program. Many local communities are presently carrying out slum clearance and urban redevelopment projects under the existing slum clearance and community redevelopment legislation. Your committee feels that they should be permitted, if they desire, to complete such projects under the provisions of the Federal law in force when they commenced such projects. In view of these considerations, a provision has been included requiring the Housing Administrator, with respect to any project covered by any Federal-aid contract executed before the effective date of this bill, as reported, to extend financial assistance for the completion of such project, where requested by the local public agency, in accordance with the provisions of applicable law in force immediately prior to the effective date of the bill.

E. URBAN PLANNING

Urban renewal should be based on sound community planning. Your committee has been advised of a need for assistance to the urban planning of small communities and to planning on a metropolitan or regional basis. The bill as reported includes a $5 million authorization for grants to be made by the Housing Administrator to assist planning for smaller communities and coordinated planning for communities in metropolitan and regional areas. Grants up to 50 percent of the estimated costs could be made to State agencies for planning assistance to municipalities having a population of less than 25,000, and to metropolitan or regional planning agencies. This program would materially assist the urban renewal program by aiding in the preparation of adequate urban renewal plans, workable programs, and general city plans.

F. GRANTS FOR TESTING

The bill as reported would also authorize the Housing Administrator to make special grants to localities to assist them in developing, testing, and reporting on improved techniques for preventing and eliminating slums and urban blight. Grants would be limited to two-thirds of the cost of the undertakings. Aggregate grants under this authority would be limited to $5 million, to be obtained from the existing authorization in title I of the Housing Act of 1949.

G. DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA PARTICIPATION IN URBAN RENEWAL

Provisions are included in the bill as reported for amendment of the District of Columbia Redevelopment Act of 1945, as amended, to permit the District of Columbia to participate in the broadened slum clearance and urban renewal provisions contained in the bill as reported.

VIII. LOW-RENT PUBLIC HOUSING AMENDMENTS

In order that public housing may be of greater help to urban renewal programs through the provision of housing for displaced families of low income, preference in admission should be granted to all such families. At present, first preference in admission is limited to families displaced only by low-rent housing projects or by public slum clearance and redevelopment projects. The bill as reported would extend the preference to families who are to be displaced through other public actions, thus permitting public housing to facilitate all types of public undertakings involved in the total process of urban renewal. Also, in order to permit proper coordination of relocation activities, the bill as reported would permit local housing authorities to grant special preference as to any of the projects or actions entitled to the general preferences. Veterans would continue to have a first preference within all preference groups.

The bill as reported also contains provisions to assure that the payments in lieu of taxes which local governments expect from their low-rent projects will be made on a contractual rather than on a voluntary basis. These payments in lieu of taxes will, with certain exceptions, be equal to 10 percent of the shelter rents charged in the various low-rent projects.

A further change is designed to make public housing projects self-liquidating to the maximum possible extent. The bill as reported provides that, as soon as the capital cost of a project has been repaid, future net revenues of the project would be used to repay to the Federal Government and to local governments the contributions made by them to the project during its earlier life.

IX. APPOINTMENT OF CONSERVATORS AND RECEIVERS FOR FEDERAL SAVINGS AND LOAN ASSOCIATIONS

Under the broad statutory powers, the provisions for the appointment of conservators and receivers of Federal savings and loans associations have always been incorporated in the regulations of the Home Loan Bank Board for the Federal savings and loan system. Title VI of the bill as reported would enact statutory provisions on this matter which would give the Board the authority needed to protect the welfare of Federal associations and their members, and at the same time provide orderly procedures for the exercise of the supervisory powers of the Board.

The Board presently has no means, except through the appointment of a conservator or receiver, to enforce the laws and regulations under which Federal savings and loan associations operate. The bill as reported would provide a method for the enforcement of law and regulations without the necessity of the appointment of a conservator or receiver, and would also establish standards and procedures for the appointment of conservators and receivers.

The bill as reported would provide that, in the event of a violation of law or regulation, the Board must give the Federal association concerned notice of such violation, and 30 days in which to correct the same. At any time during the 30 days either the Board or the association would be given the right to apply to the United States District Court for a declaratory judgment, an injunction, or other relief. If after 30 days the violation has not been corrected, the Board would give the association 20 days' notice of the time and place of a hearing which would be held in the judicial district where the association is located unless the association consents to another place. After hearing and adjudication by the Board, the right of appeal would be given as is provided by the Administrative Procedure Act, and court review would be upon the weight of the evidence. The Board would be specifically given access to the courts for the enforcement of its adjudication and orders.

The bill as reported would also provide standards and procedures for the appointment by the Board of a conservator or receiver, and would give the Board exclusive jurisdiction to make such an appointment. The grounds for such appointment would be: (i) insolvency; (ii) violation of law or regulations; (iii) concealment of books, records, or assets; and (iv) unsafe and unsound operation.

The bill as reported would change the name of the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation to "Federal Savings Insurance Corporation." This would provide a more appropriate name for the Corporation and avoid certain misunderstanding arising from the fact that the present name can be interpreted as indicating that the Corporation handles functions relating to loan or mortgage insurance.

The bill as reported would provide that a conservator or receiver could not be appointed until after notice and an opportunity for an administrative hearing held in accordance with the provisions of the Administrative Procedure Act, that such appointment would be subject to court review as provided in the Administrative Procedure Act, and that such review would be upon the weight of the evidence. However, the bill as reported further provides that, if the Board determines that an emergency exists requiring immediate action, the Board could, without notice and hearing, appoint a Supervisory Representative in Charge who would have all the powers of a conservator or receiver. Such a Supervisory Representative would hold office for not more than 6 months, or until a conservator or receiver is appointed and takes charge, or until 30 days after the final proceedings of a hearing, or until 60 days after final termination of any litigation affecting such temporary appointment, whichever is longest.

X. ASSISTANCE FOR RESERVE OF PLANNED PUBLIC WORKS

Title VIII of the bill as reported would also carry out the President's recommendations contained in his Budget Message and in his Economic Report with respect to Federal assistance to States and communities for the advance planning of State and local public works. The Housing and Home Finance Administrator would be authorized to make advances to the States, their agencies, and political subdivisions for the planning of public works (other than housing) which conform to an overall State, local, or regional plan approved by a competent State, local, or regional authority. This authority would extend to July 1, 1957, and appropriations for such advances would be authorized up to $10 million. The advances would become repayable in full, without interest, if and when the construction of the public works contemplated by the advance was undertaken or started. However, if payment is not made promptly when due the unpaid amount of the advance would bear interest at the rate of 4 percent per annum from the date the Federal Government made demand for repayment. The bill, as reported, would also provide that the making of these advances would in no way commit the Congress to appropriate funds to assist the construction of any of the planned public works.

The advanced planning of such public works has long been recognized as a valuable tool in establishing and maintaining a high level of operation in the construction industry which is an important factor in the maintenance of a healthy national economy. A substantial volume of planned State and local public works could be very useful in helping to stabilize the construction industry, and, in turn, economic activity in general. It was estimated in testimony before your committee that preliminary plans for 2,200 public works projects with an average estimated construction cost of $300,000 each, could be provided with the $10 million, and construction costs of the 2,200 projects should amount to approximately $660 million.

XI. VOLUNTARY HOME MORTGAGE CREDIT PROGRAM

Title VII of the bill as reported includes a new title designed to encourage and facilitate the flow of mortgage credit into remote areas and small communities through the voluntary cooperation and effort of private lending institutions.

The provisions of this title, in general, follow the plan suggested on behalf of the American Life Convention and the Life Insurance Association of America and which presented testimony to your committee indicating that the plan had the support of a majority of the life insurance companies. The problem of assuring the general availability of adequate home mortgage credit in small communities and in the areas remote from large financial centers is a difficult one, and your committee feels that the life insurance companies should be highly commended for their efforts to assist in the development of a constructive solution to this important problem.

This new title would establish a National Voluntary Mortgage Credit Extension Committee consisting of the Housing and Home Finance Administrator as Chairman and fourteen other persons to be appointed by the Administrator representing each major type of mortgage, lending institution, the homebuilding industry and real estate boards. The Administrator, after consultation with the members of the National Committee, would also appoint regional subcommittees for regions conforming generally to the Federal Reserve Districts.

The National Committee would be empowered to solicit and obtain the cooperation of financing institutions in the voluntary program. It would study and review the demand for and supply of funds for residential mortgage loans in all parts of the country and would receive reports from and correlate the activities of the regional subcommittees. It would maintain liaison with the Government housing agencies and with State and local housing officials to fully apprise them of the voluntary program.

Each regional subcommittee would study and review the demand for a supply of funds for residential mortgage loans in its region, would analyze cases of unsatisfied demand for mortgage credit, and would report to the National Committee the results of its study and analysis. It would also maintain liaison with officers of the FHA and VA within its own region and would request these officials to supply the subcommittee with information regarding cases of unsatisfied demand for mortgage credit involving loans eligible for FHA insurance or VA guaranty.

The regional subcommittees would render assistance to any applicant for a residential mortgage loan, provided that the applicant certified that he has made a serious effort to obtain an insured or guaranteed mortgage loan and has been unable to do so. Upon receipt of such certification, the regional subcommittee would circularize private financing institutions in the region or elsewhere in an effort to place the loan with a private financing institution. It would undertake to handle in a similar way cases involving applications made to the VA for direct loans. Moreover, in order to encourage small or local private financing institutions to originate insured or guaranteed mortgage loans, the subcommittee would be empowered to render assistance to such institutions in locating other private financing institutions willing to purchase these loans.

In the performance of its responsibilities each regional subcommittee would be empowered to request the National Committee to obtain for it the aid of other regional committees in seeking sources of mortgage credit, and to request and obtain voluntary commitments from any one or more private financing institutions to make funds available for insured or guaranteed loans in any specified area or areas within its region in which the subcommittee found a lack of adequate credit facilities for these loans.

XII. FARM HOUSING

The bill as reported by your committee would provide authorization for continuing through fiscal year 1955 the farm-housing assistance authorized in title V of the Housing Act of 1949 (Public Law 171, 81st Cong.).

Title V of that act is administered by the Farmers' Home Administration of the Department of Agriculture and authorized the Secretary of that Department to extend financial assistance in the form of loans and grants to farm owners to enable them to construct, improve, or repair farm housing. Loans of up to 33 years' maturity which bear 4-percent interest may be made to farmers having adequate farms who are nevertheless unable to obtain private credit on terms which they can reasonably fulfill. Similar loans, supplemented by modest contributions during a 5-year period are also authorized where the farmer is unable to undertake to repay the loan in full. This form of aid is authorized only if the farm is potentially adequate—that is, capable of being improved to a point where it is self-sustaining—and if the necessary improvement program is actually undertaken. Finally, title V authorizes modest loans and grants to help farm families on very poor farms to undertake minor improvements or minimum repairs to farm dwellings where necessary to remove hazards to the health or safety of the occupants.

The authority granted by the present law to obtain loan funds from the Treasury was limited to $25 million on and after July 1, 1949, an additional $50 million on and after July 1, 1950, an additional $75 million on and after July 1, 1951, an additional $100 million on and after July 1, 1952, and an additional $100 million on or after July 1, 1953. The bill as reported by your committee would provide authorization for an additional $100 million on or after July 1, 1954.

Annual contribution commitments for housing on potentially adequate farms were authorized to be entered into on and after July 1, 1949, in sums aggregating not more than $500,000 per year (for 5 years) and additional commitments were authorized on and after July 1 of each of the years 1950, 1951, 1952, and 1953, respectively, which would require additional contributions of up to $1,000,000, $1,500,000, $2,000,000, and $2,000,000 per annum, respectively. The bill as reported by your committee would provide a similar additional authorization of $2 million on and after July 1, 1954.

Appropriations were also authorized for the loans and grants for improvements and repairs. Appropriations of $2 million were authorized on and after July 1, 1949, and further amounts of $5 million,

$8 million, $10 million, and $10 million on July 1 of each of the years 1950, 1951, 1952, 1953, respectively. The bill as reported by your committee would provide an additional authorization of $10 million on or after July 1, 1954.

XIII. SECTION-BY-SECTION SUMMARY OF THE BILL AS REPORTED

The first section of the bill as reported would provide that the act may be cited as the "Housing Act of 1954."

TITLE I—FEDERAL HOUSING ADMINISTRATION

This title would amend, and add new provisions to, the National Housing Act which governs the FHA home mortgage insurance programs. Two new programs would be authorized which are designed to assist in the rehabilitation and conservation of urban areas and in the rehousing of families displaced by slum clearance and other governmental operations. A new provision would be added to authorize the insurance of "open-end" mortgages. The provisions of the act governing the present FHA mortgage insurance programs would be amended for the purpose of providing changes in the prescribed maximum amounts and terms of the mortgages insured under these programs (especially with respect to existing housing), providing greater flexibility in the administration of the programs, and simplifying the statute.

AMENDMENTS OF TITLE I OF NATIONAL HOUSING ACT

Section 101: Property improvement and repair loans

This section would amend provisions of section 2 (b) of the National Housing Act which concern the insurance of lending institutions against loss on loans made to finance alterations, repairs, and improvements in connection with existing structures.

Subsection 1 of the proposed amendment would increase the maximum loan amount for property improvement and repair loans from the present maximum of $2,500 to $3,000. Under subsection 2 the maximum term of such loans would be increased from 3 years and 32 days to 5 years and 32 days.

Subsection (3) would amend the provisions of section 2 (b) for so-called "class 1 (b)" loans to permit increases beyond the present maximum of $10,000 (regardless of the number of family units) on the basis of $1,500 per family unit or $10,000, whichever is the greater.

This subsection would also increase the maximum maturity on such loans from 7 years and 32 days to 10 years and 32 days. Class 1 (b) loans finance the improvement or conversion of existing structures used or to be used as apartments or dwelling for two or more families.

Section 102: Liquidation of FHA title I claims account

This section would amend section 2 (f) to permit termination of the old title I claims account established prior to the creation of the title I revolving fund and the authorization for premium charges for title I insurance. This amendment would eliminate the necessity of maintaining separate records for the account which has been in liquidation since 1939 and has only a residue of assets. In addition, the amendment would authorize the Federal Housing Commissioner to invest surplus funds of the revolving title I insurance fund in Government obligations, as he is now permitted to do with surplus funds of other insurance funds.

Section 103: Termination of section 8 mortgage insurance authority

This amendment would terminate authority to insure mortgages (except pursuant to an outstanding commitment) under section 8 after the effective date of the Housing Act of 1954. The authority under section 8 to insure mortgages given to refinance existing mortgages under that section would also be terminated.

Section 8 authorizes insurance of mortgage loans financing new low-cost single-family homes, particularly in suburban and outlying areas. There is also authority to insure 100 percent mortgage loans up to $7,000 for disaster housing. The section 8 program would be handled after the enactment of the Housing Act of 1954 under section 203 of title II.

AMENDMENTS OF TITLE II OF NATIONAL HOUSING ACT

Section 104: Section 203—Sales housing

This section would amend section 203 which authorizes the insurance of mortgage loans made by approved lending institutions for the construction, purchase, and refinancing of 1- to 4-family dwellings. This is FHA's major mortgage insurance program with respect to sales housing. Section 203 would be amended to consolidate the present subsections (b) (2) (A), (b) (2) (C), and (b) (2) (D) and to provide a simplified form of maximum ratio of loan to value and maximum dollar amount of mortgages to cover both new and existing homes.

The proposal would eliminate statutory distinctions within specific programs related to proposed and existing construction, dollar maximum mortgage amounts, and maximum ratio of loan to value as related to the number of bedrooms, whether the mortgagor was the owner and occupant of the house, and other factors. It would provide maximum limits and leave specific mortgage amounts to be handled, within the statutory limits, by processing of individual applications under regulations to be prescribed by the Federal Housing Commissioner. It would eliminate confusion as among the number of programs now provided for in section 203 and section 8. It would also permit the same mortgage limits for mortgages on existing homes as mortgages on new homes.

Under the proposal the maximum amounts of mortgages which may be insured by FHA under section 203 would be $20,000 for a 1- or 2-family residence, $27,500 for a 3-family residence, or $35,000 in the case of a 4-family residence, and not to exceed the sum of 95 percent of $8,000 of value and 75 percent of the value in excess of $8,000. In addition, the mortgagor would be required to have made at least a 5 percent downpayment. Under this proposal the highest statutory mortgage maximum for a 1-, or 2-family home would be $20,000 as compared to the present ceiling of $16,000; for a 3-family home, $27,500 as compared to the present $20,500; and for a 4-family home, $35,000 as compared to the present $25,000. However, the bill would provide that mortgages insured under section 203 may not exceed the ceilings prescribed by section 203 prior to the effective date of these amendments unless the President, pursuant to the authority which would be given him in title II of the bill to establish maximum mortgage terms and limits for Government-aided housing, has authorized a higher ceiling.

A provision in the bill as reported would make clear that a dwelling designed principally for a 1- or 2-family residence may be rented in appropriate cases for school purposes.

A technical change would also be made in the method of calculating the 5 percent minimum downpayment. Such downpayment, where required under the present law, must equal "5 percent of the appraised value." This has an unintended and unreasonable result in certain cases. Thus, 4 identical row houses may be valued alike except for the corner house which the FHA values at $500 more than the other 3. Even though all 4 houses are sold at the same price, the present law requires the purchases of the corner house to make a $25 larger downpayment than the purchasers of the other 3 houses. This has the absurd result of limiting the mortgage on the more valuable house to a smaller amount than is permitted for the less valuable houses. The bill would correct this defect in the present law through a new provision which requires the downpayment to equal at least "5 percent of the Commissioner's estimate of the cost of acquisition." This change in no way relaxes the separate requirement that the mortgage loan shall not exceed a specified percentage of the "appraised value" of the property as determined by the FHA.

Section 105: Maximum maturity of section 203 mortgages

This section would amend section 203 (b) (3) to fix a maximum statutory term of 30 years for all mortgages insured under section 203 without reference to amount of mortgage and other consideration presently provided in the statute, and would leave specific mortgage terms to regulations to be prescribed by the Federal Housing Commissioner. However, no mortgage term could exceed the maximum maturity provided in section 203 prior to the effective date of the amendment proposed by this section of the bill, unless the President authorizes a greater maturity pursuant to the authority which would be given him by title II of this bill. Maximum statutory mortgage terms under section 203 are now 20, 25, or 30 years, depending on whether the house is new or old, the number of bedrooms, the size of the loan, and whether the mortgagor is the owner-occupant.

Section 106: Maximum interest rate on section 203 mortgages

This section would amend section 203 (b) (5) to fix the maximum statutory interest rate on section 203 mortgages at 5 percent with authority in the Federal Housing Commissioner to increase the rate to not to exceed 6 percent as he finds it necessary to meet the mortgage market. Under title II of the bill, the President would be authorized to establish the maximum interest rates for section 203 mortgages without regard to that section, but subject to the limitations of title II of the bill. The amendment also permits the Commissioner to allow a service charge.

Section 107: Debentures presented in payment of premium charges

This section would add a proviso to section 203 (c) to provide that debentures presented in payment of premium charges shall represent obligations of the particular insurance fund to which such premium charges are to be credited. Under existing law debentures issued by one insurance fund may be used to pay premiums only as to mortgages insured under the same fund, with the exception of the mutual mortgage insurance fund and the housing insurance fund. This exception exists only because these two funds were originally one fund. This amendment would merely give effect to an oversight at the time the two funds were established, and thereby make the provisions of these two funds consistent with all other funds as to this subject.

Section 108: Farm housing mortgage insurance authorization terminated

This section would terminate the authority of the Federal Housing Commissioner under section 203 (d) to insure mortgages on farm housing after the effective date of the Housing Act of 1954, except pursuant to a commitment to insure issued on or before that date.

Section 109: Repeal of refinancing requirement and President's standby authority

This section would repeal section 203 (f). This subsection was enacted in 1939 to provide that if a proposed FHA mortgagee refinances a then existing mortgage in whole or in part, the mortgagor must certify that prior to the date the application was filed the holder of the existing mortgage has failed or refused to make a loan on as favorable terms.

This section would also repeal subsection (g) of section 203. This subsection was added by the housing amendments of 1953 (Public Law 94, 83d Cong.) to give the President standby authority to increase ratio of loan to value and term, up to 30 years and $12,000 mortgage amount, under certain conditions. In view of proposed amendments to section 203 (b) (2) in section 104 and title II of this bill this standby authority is no longer necessary.

Section 110: Disaster housing

This section would add a new subsection (h) to section 203 to continue the authority previously carried in section 8 (which would be terminated by this bill) to insure 100 percent disaster housing loans on the same basis as formerly permitted under section 8.

Section 111: Payment of insurance

This section would amend section 204 (a) dealing with the payment of insurance.

Paragraph (1) of this amendment would permit a mortgagee to receive in debentures amounts (not allowable under existing law) paid by it for internal revenue stamps on a deed to it and on a deed to the Commissioner.

Paragraph (2) would permit a mortgagee, as to mortgages accepted for insurance under section 203 after the effective date of the Housing Act of 1954, to receive in debentures two-thirds of foreclosure costs or $75, whichever is greater, which allowance is permitted under existing law only as to special programs. The present differences in such allowances are not believed justified, and in addition a uniform treatment would simplify the processing of payment to insurance benefits.

Paragraph (3) would permit a conveyance (where permissible under State law) to be made by mortgagor by deed in lieu of foreclosure, or by trustee, or by sheriff, direct to the Commissioner rather than to the mortgagee and then to the Commissioner. This will avoid duplicate expenses of recording, stamp taxes, etc. This affects merely a mechanical change in getting title in the Commissioner (in those cases where title is now conveyed to the Commissioner by the mortgagee, either after or without foreclosure) and would involve no additional expense to FHA and no other change in procedure or in amount paid to the mortgagee under insurance contract.

Section 112: Terms of debentures

Section 112 would amend section 204 (d) by fixing the term of debentures to be issued under sections 203 and 213 at 10 years, consistent with the present debenture term under all other mortgage-insurance programs.

Section 113: Technical amendment

This is a technical amendment adding a new subsection 204 (i) in order to transfer from section 205 certain provisions which do not conform to the wording of section 205 as it would be amended by section 114 hereof. No change or new material is involved.

Section 114: Establishment of general surplus account and participating reserve account in mutual mortgage insurance fund

Section 114 would amend section 205 by revising and completely rewriting section 205 and accomplishes a change in the mutuality system under section 203, by eliminating the group accounts and substituting a general surplus account and a participating reserve account. While mutuality would be preserved, the Commissioner would be given greater authority to pool all reserves for the protection of the insurance liability of the entire fund, and thereby materially strengthen the reserves and minimize possibility of claims against the Treasury.

Section 115: Section 207 rental housing

This section would amend section 207 (c) dealing with eligibility for rental housing mortgage insurance as follows:

Paragraph (1) would amend paragraph (2) of section 207 (c) to permit the Commissioner to insure mortgages on existing multifamily structures if located in slum or blighted areas, as defined in an existing provision of section 207, and part of proceeds are used to repair or rehabilitate property. Such a mortgage would otherwise be subject to the same eligibility requirements and limitations as other loans under section 207.

Paragraph (2) of the amendment to paragraph (2) of 207 (c) would permit special limitations under 207 as now applicable to property in Alaska (90 percent of replacement cost rather than 80 percent of value) to be extended to mortgages covering property located in Guam. The need for housing in Guam and cost factors present in construction there are similar to conditions in Alaska.

Paragraph (3) of the amendment would amend paragraph (3) of 207 (c) by substituting a new paragraph 3 which would retain the present mortgage amount limitation of $2,000 per room or $7,200 per family unit (less than 4 rooms) but would remove the $10,000 per family-unit limitation; and would permit an increase in such limitations to $2,400 per room and $7,500 per family unit for elevator-type structures. Such higher limits would be permitted because of higher costs incident to elevator-type structures. No change is made in the existing ratio of loan to value limitation or in the 90-percent loan for projects which average 2 bedrooms per unit under the existing $7,200 per family-unit limitation. A proviso is included in this section, however, that the present statutory mortgage limits would continue unless the President, as authorized by title II of the bill, has prescribed higher limits.

Section 116: Technical amendment concerning debentures

This is a technical amendment to section 207 (d) to carry out the purposes of the proposed amendment to section 203 (c) in section 107 of the bill by permitting debentures of the housing insurance fund to be used to pay only those premiums as are credited to such fund.

Section 117: Foreclosure costs

This is a clarifying amendment to section 207 (h) to remove any question as to the inclusion of foreclosure costs, costs of acquisition, and costs of conveyance to the Commissioner in the certificate of claim, consistent with the other rental-housing programs.

Section 118: Protection of labor standards

This section would make the provisions of the National Housing Act with respect to the protection of labor standards apply to multifamily housing financed by mortgages insured under the new section 220 proposed by this bill. (See sec. 123 of bill.) The labor-standard provisions would apply in the case of the new section 220 to mortgages covering existing multifamily housing to be rehabilitated or reconstructed as well as to new construction.

Section 119: Cooperative housing

This section would amend section 213 (b) dealing with eligibility for cooperative housing mortgage insurance. A provision would be added to subsection (b) (1) to permit FHA-insured cooperative housing mortgages to be as high as $25 million in amount if the mortgagor cooperative is regulated by Federal or State law as to rents, charges, and methods of operation. The section would also change, with respect to nonveteran projects the present per family or per room mortgage amount limitations from $8,100 per family unit or $1,800 per room, to $2,250 per room and with a per family unit limitation of $8,100 applicable only if number of rooms is less than 4. The section would also provide for changing from a cost basis to a valuation basis. In addition, it would change the basis for allowing increases for veteran membership so that in all cases such increases would be made only if 65 percent of members are veterans, instead of making such increases on basis of percentage allowances for percentage of veteran membership. This latter change would simplify computations, and experience has shown substantially all projects to date have had over 65 percent veteran membership. Also an increase would be authorized to the per room and per family mortgage amount limitation for elevator-type structures in both veteran and nonveteran projects. However, the present statutory mortgage limits in section 213 would continue unless the President, as authorized by title II of the bill, has prescribed higher limits.

Section 120: Provision for Assistant Commissioner for cooperative housing deleted

Section 119 would amend section 213 (f) by striking therefrom the provision for the appointment of an Assistant Federal Housing Commissioner to administer the section 213 cooperative housing program. The First Independent Offices Appropriation Act, 1954 (Public Law 176, 83d Cong.), in authorizing FHA expenditures contained the following proviso:

Provided further, That the position of Assistant Commissioner, established pursuant to section 213 (f) of the National Housing Act, as amended, is no longer authorized.

A question is raised as to whether this proviso, as worded, would become ineffective after the expiration of the appropriation year. In any event, confusion would exist as long as the substantive law contains the mandatory requirement to appoint an Assistant Commissioner.

Section 121: Consolidation of all mortgage insurance authorizations

This section constitutes a revision of section 217 in order to consolidate and merge all the existing mortgage insurance authorizations with respect to all sections or titles (except sec. 2) into one general insurance authorization. This amendment would simplify operations under present separate insurance authorizations, would permit greater flexibility in use of the authorization as between separate programs, and establish at all times the amount of the current mortgage insurance authority under all programs. The total authorization would not exceed the estimated amount of insurance in force and commitments outstanding as of July 1, 1954, plus $1½ billion, except that with the approval of the President such total authorization could be increased by amounts up to not to exceed $500 million.

Section 122: Transfer between insurance funds

Section 219 now authorizes the Commissioner to transfer moneys from one or more of the insurance funds (except the mutual mortgage insurance fund) to any other fund where needed, and this amendment to section 219 would merely include within such authority funds of the section 220 housing insurance fund, a new fund to be established in connection with the new proposed section 220 mortgage insurance program (see sec. 123 of bill).

Section 123: Addition of sections 220 and 221

This section would add 2 new sections 220 and 221 to title II of the National Housing Act to provide 2 new FHA mortgage insurance programs to assist programs of urban renewal (see title IV of bill, as reported). No mortgages would be insured under either of the two new programs unless: (1) There has been presented to the Housing and Home Finance Administrator by the locality a workable program for eliminating and preventing slums and urban blight and encouraging the rehabilitation or redevelopment of blighted areas or slums, and (2) on the basis of his review of the program, the Administrator has certified to the Federal Housing Commissioner that the benefits of the new FHA program may be made available in the community (see sec. 403 of bill for this requirement).

Rehabilitation and neighborhood conservation housing insurance (sec. 220 of National Housing Act)

The new section 220 would provide a mortgage insurance program to assist in the rehabilitation of existing dwellings and the construction of new dwellings in urban renewal areas. The property assisted must be located in a delineated area with respect to which a specific plan of redevelopment or rehabilitation and conservation has been established. The Federal Housing Commissioner must find that: (1) There exists necessary authority and financial capacity to assure the completion of such plan, and (2) that such plan will be effective to assure compliance with standards and conditions prescribed by him to establish the acceptability of the property for mortgage insurance.

The mortgage insurance under the new section 220 would cover existing construction, as well as new construction, and thus include assistance for rehabilitation as well as redevelopment. The mortgage limits covering 1- to 4-family dwellings would be the same as those proposed in section 104 of this bill for section 203 mortgages. However, this new section 220 would also permit mortgage insurance covering more than 4-family dwellings (the number in excess of 4 to be specified by the Commissioner) to take care of those structures which may contain more than 4 units but less than the number which could be covered under multifamily mortgage insurance. The mortgage limits in such cases would be $35,000 plus not to exceed $7,000 for each additional family unit in excess of 4.

Provision is also made for multifamily housing mortgage insurance with maximum mortgage limits of $2,250 per room (or $8,100 per family unit if the number of rooms in the project does not equal or exceed four per family unit). Where a project consists of elevator-type structures, the Commissioner would be authorized to increase these dollar maximum mortgage amounts to $2,700 per room and $8,400 per family unit, respectively. The maximum ratio of loan to value limitation would be 90 percent of value. However, mortgages insured under this section with respect to sales or rental housing would be subject to the mortgage amount limitations provided in section 203 or section 207, as the case may be, unless the President authorizes higher amounts pursuant to title II of the bill. Similarly, unless the President authorizes longer maturities for mortgages on sales housing under this section, they would be subject to the maturity limitations in section 203 and could not in any event exceed 30 years.

The provisions for payment of insurance would be, as to home mortgages (1- to 4-plus family units), on the same basis as section 203 mortgage insurance, and would be, as to multifamily project mortgages, on the same basis as section 207 mortgage insurance.

A new fund to be called the section 220 housing insurance fund consisting initially of $1 million to be transferred from the war housing insurance fund, would be created as a revolving fund for carrying out the provisions of the new section 220.

Mortgage insurance for relocation housing (sec. 221 of National Housing Act)

insurance program for low-cost housing for families displaced as the result of governmental action in a community with respect to which the Housing Administrator has made the certification referred to above. However, the bill would permit mortgage insurance under section 221 in a community which has an urban redevelopment project under way at the time of the enactment of the Housing Act of 1954, even though this certification has not been made. The mortgage insurance under section 221 would be available only in communities which have requested that the insurance be provided. The Federal Housing Commissioner would be required to prescribe procedures to secure to the families so displaced, a preference or priority of opportunity to purchase or rent the dwellings involved. The total number of dwelling units in properties covered by mortgages insured under section 221 could not exceed the total number of such dwelling units which the Commissioner determined to be needed for the relocation of displaced families who would be eligible for the housing.

The maximum mortgage amount would be $7,600 (or up to $8,600 in high-cost areas) and not in excess of 100 percent of value for a single-family dwelling where the mortgagor is the owner-occupant. A minimum cash outlay of $200 would be required (which could include amounts to cover settlement costs and initial payments for taxes, hazard insurance, mortgage insurance premiums, and other prepaid expenses). Mortgagors who are not owner-occupants would be permitted to obtain 85 percent loans to build or acquire and repair or rehabilitate, for sale, and to finance pending subsequent sale to qualified owner-occupant purchasers under purchase contract or lease-option agreements. The maximum term is fixed at 40 years and a service charge would be permitted.

Mortgage insurance would also be provided under this section for the repair or rehabilitation of dwellings (not necessarily contiguous) for use by 10 or more families as rental accommodations for qualified displaced families where the mortgagor is a private nonprofit corporation, association, or organization which is regulated under Federal or State laws as to rents, charges, and methods of operation. The maximum mortgage would be $7,600 (or up to $8,600 in high-cost areas) per family unit and not in excess of 100 percent of value, with a maximum term of 40 years.

The provisions for insurance payments under section 221 mortgages would be the same as under section 203 mortgages, except that such payments with respect to rehabilitated housing by nonprofit corporations would be the same as under section 207. In addition, the mortgagee under section 221 would have the option after 20 years if the loan was not in default, to assign the mortgage to the Federal Housing Commissioner and receive 10-year debentures equal to the original principal unpaid at assignment plus accrued interest. The debentures issued under this option would have one feature different from debentures under other insurance programs, namely, the interest rate would be fixed at the "going Federal rate" at date of issuance. This would be the annual rate of interest specified by the Secretary of the Treasury as applicable to the 6-month period which includes the issuance date of the debentures. The Secretary of the Treasury would determine this applicable rate by estimating the average yield to maturity, on the basis of daily closing market bid quotations or prices during the month of May or the month of November, as the case may be, next preceding such 6-month period, on all outstanding marketable obligations of the United States having a maturity date of 8 to 12 years from the 1st day of May or November, as the case may be. If there should be no outstanding marketable obligations of the United States having the 8- to 12-year maturity at the time the Secretary of the Treasury is required to determine the debenture rate involved, the obligation next shorter than 8 years and the obligation next longer than 12 years, respectively, would be used.

A section 221 housing insurance fund would be created for the purposes of the mortgage insurance program under section 221. It would be a revolving fund and would consist originally of $1 million transferred from the war housing insurance fund. No provision would be made for transfer of assets between the section 221 fund and other FHA insurance funds as is authorized for other FHA insurance funds.

Section 124: Transfer of certain mortgage insurance programs to title II program

This section would add a new section 228 to title II of the National Housing Act to transfer to title II authority to insure (1) mortgages executed in connection with the sale of certain publicly owned housing now insured under section 610; (2) mortgages to refinance existing loans insured under section 608 prior to the enactment of this bill; (3) mortgages to refinance loans insured under sections 903 and 908; and (4) mortgages assigned to the Commissioner in payment of insurance benefits, or mortgages executed in connection with sale of property acquired by the Commissioner under insurance contracts, regardless of requirements in the section or title of the act under which the insurance contracts were executed. Mortgages insured under this new section would be insured under section 203 or section 207 and consequently the insurance benefits would be in accordance with such sections.

The provisions of section 222 covering authority to insure mortgages assigned to the Commission is a new authority not now included within the provisions of section 608 (g). This additional authority would assist the Commissioner in the sale of such mortgages and facilitate liquidation of insurance liability.

Section 125: "Open-end" mortgages

This section would add two new sections (223 and 224) to the National Housing Act. Section 223 would be a technical amendment to implement section 201 of this bill.

The new section 224 would authorize FHA insurance of advances to a mortgagor made pursuant to provisions in an "open-end" FHA-insured home mortgage. "Open-end" mortgages are mortgages which provide that loans (in addition to the original loan represented by the mortgage) may be made to a mortgagor for improvement, alteration, or repair of the home covered by the mortgage without the necessity of executing a new mortgage. The authority to insure "open-end" mortgages would apply only to mortgages covering dwellings for four families or less.

Under the proposed section 224 the Federal Housing Commissioner would be authorized to require the payment of charges in lieu of insurance premiums for the insurance of the "open-end" advances.

Further, the amount of such insurance would not be included in computing the aggregate amount of outstanding principal obligations of mortgages which may be insured under the National Housing Act under the limitations in that act on the amount of such obligations outstanding at any one time.

ADDITIONAL AMENDMENTS RELATING TO FEDERAL HOUSING ADMINISTRATION

Section 126: Termination of authority to insure mortgages under title VI

This section would terminate authority to insure mortgages under title VI of the National Housing Act after the effective date of the enactment of this bill, except pursuant to a commitment to insure issued on or before such date. The following insurance programs would be affected:

(1) Section 603: Authority to issue commitments on new business expired April 30, 1948, and the only authority now existing is with respect to loans to refinance existing insured mortgages. This proposal would terminate such authority but such refinancing loans are eligible under section 203 and no reason exists for continuation of the insurance authority under section 603.

(2) Section 608: Authority to issue commitments now limited to applications filed on or before March 1, 1950; and as to mortgages to refinance existing insured mortgages. This proposal would terminate such authority but it is proposed by the provision of the new section 222 to transfer authority to insure refinancing mortgages to section 207.

(3) Section 609: Authority to insure prefabricated housing manufacturers' loans would be terminated. Only a few loans have been insured and experience indicates that the continuance of such a program under the National Housing Act is not warranted.

(4) Section 610: Authority to insure mortgages in connection with sale by Government of certain publicly owned housing would be terminated under section 610 of title VI, but such authority would be transferred to title II and continued pursuant to the provisions of the proposed new section 222 discussed above.

(5) Section 611: Authority to insure blanket mortgage covering 25 or more single-family houses would be terminated. Experience has indicated continuation of this program is not warranted. It has not been used to any substantial extent by builders.

(6) Section 608 (g): Authority to insure mortgages taken by the Commissioner in connection with sale of Commissioner-acquired property would be terminated, but the same authority would be continued under the proposed section 222 discussed above.

Section 127: Termination of yield insurance program

This section would terminate the yield insurance program under title VII of the National Housing Act and repeal title VII. This title was added to the National Housing Act in 1948 and was amended in 1951. No insurance operations have been carried on by FHA under this title.

Section 128: One-year extension of military housing insurance authority

This section would extend for 1 year (from July 1, 1954, to June 30, 1955) the authority under title VIII of the National Housing Act to insure mortgages on military housing.

Section 129: Termination of title IX Defense Housing Insurance Authority

The authority to insure mortgages in connection with the defense housing program under title IX (sec. 903 covering 1- and 2-family dwellings, and sec. 908 covering multifamily projects) would expire under existing law on July 1, 1954, except as to commitments issued prior to such date or loans to refinance existing insured loans. This proposal would leave the expiration date of July 1, 1954, and retain authority to insure as to commitments issued prior thereto, but would terminate authority to insure under title IX mortgages to refinance existing insured mortgages. However, such authority is proposed to be transferred to the new section 222 and such refinancing loans would be insured under section 203 or section 207.

TITLE II—HOME MORTGAGE INTEREST RATES AND TERMS

Section 201: Establishment of home loan interest rates, terms, and charges by the President

This section would place in the President authority to establish the maximum rates of interest on residential mortgage loans (other than VA-aided farm home loans) financed under the Federal Housing Administration or Veterans' Administration programs. The maximum interest rates for such mortgage loans would be established by the President from time to time on the basis of reviews of conditions in the mortgage investment market and after taking into consideration conditions in the building industry and the national economy generally. These reviews would be undertaken at the request of the President by a committee consisting of the Secretary of the Treasury as chairman and the Housing and Home Finance Administrator, and the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs. The interest rates could be established by the President at different levels for different classes of mortgages. The maximums could in no event be established at rates exceeding average market yields on Federal marketable bonds having a remaining maturity of 15 years or longer plus 2½ percent.

This section would also place in the President authority to establish the interest rates on FHA debentures to be issued in payment of mortgage insurance claims and the maximum financing charges for FHA property improvement and repair loans which are insured under title I of the National Housing Act.

The President would also be authorized to establish the limits on certain fees and charges for FHA- and VA-aided residential mortgage loans.

In addition, subject to applicable provisions of law, the President would be authorized to establish maximum mortgage maturities and maximum ratios of loan to value for FHA- and VA-aided residential mortgage loans. In the case of FHA-aided mortgages, the President could also establish maximum dollar limitations per room or per family unit within applicable maximum limitations prescribed by the National Housing Act. In the case of loan-to-value ratios established in connection with loans guaranteed under the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944, a minimum preference of 5 percent on the first $8,000 plus 5 percent of the excess over $8,000 would be required to be maintained.

Presidential action under this section would not affect direct loans made by VA prior to such action nor loans with respect to which the FHA or VA has made commitments, prior to such action, to guarantee or insure the loans.

Section 202: Technical amendment to Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944

This section is a technical amendment to the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944, as amended, to authorize the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs to make rules and regulations to carry out the limitations established by the President pursuant to the authority vested in him by section 201. A corresponding amendment to the National Housing Act relating to FHA-aided home loans is contained in section 125 of this bill.

Section 203: Additional GI guaranty for home repairs

This section would amend section 50 (b) of the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944 to permit the maximum guaranty entitlement of $7,500 to apply to loans for alterations, improvements, and repairs, as well as the purchase and construction of residential property. Under the existing provision, a veteran who has used his guaranty entitlement in acquiring a home has additional entitlement for repair loans only if he used less than $4,000 of his entitlement in acquiring the home.

Section 204: Repeal of section 504 of Housing Act of 1950

This section would repeal section 504 of the Housing Act of 1950, as amended. That section relates to regulation by the Federal Housing Administration and the Veterans' Administration of certain fees and charges in connection with residential mortgages financed under their programs. Section 201 of this bill is designed to deal with the problems to which section 504 of the Housing Act of 1950 was addressed.

TITLE III—FEDERAL NATIONAL MORTGAGE ASSOCIATION

Section 301: Establishment of new secondary mortgage market facility in the Federal Government

This section would rewrite title III of the National Housing Act to recharter the Federal National Mortgage Association, the existing Federal secondary market facility for home mortgages, and provide for the capitalization and operation of the Association under its new charter.

Purposes (sec. 301 of National Housing Act).—This section would state that the purposes of title III of the National Housing Act, as it would be amended, would be to establish in the Federal Government a secondary market facility for home mortgages to be financed by private capital to the maximum extent feasible and to authorize such facility to—

(a) provide supplementary assistance to the secondary market for home mortgages by providing a degree of liquidity for existing mortgage investments, thereby improving the distribution of investment capital available for home-mortgage financing;

(b) provide special assistance (when, and to the extent that, the President has determined that it is in the public interest) for the financing of (1) selected types of home mortgages (pending the establishment of their marketability) originated under special housing programs designed to provide housing of acceptable standards at full economic costs for segments of the national population which are unable to obtain adequate housing under established home-financing programs, and (2) home mortgages generally as a means of retarding or stopping a decline in mortgage lending and home-building activities which threatens materially the stability of a high-level national economy; and

(c) manage and liquidate the existing mortgage portfolio of the Federal National Mortgage Association in an orderly manner, with a minimum of adverse effect upon the home-mortgage market and minimum loss to the Federal Government.

Creation of Association (sec. 302 of National Housing Act).—This section would recharter the Federal National Mortgage Association and provide that it would be a constituent agency of the Housing and Home Finance Agency. In order to accomplish the purposes of the Association it would be authorized, subject to the limitations prescribed by title III, to make commitments to purchase, and to purchase, service, or sell home mortgages (or participations therein) that are insured by the Federal Housing Commissioner (FHA-insured) or guaranteed or insured by the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs (VA-guaranteed or insured). No mortgage could be purchased at a price exceeding 100 percent of the unpaid principal amount of the mortgage. In addition, the mortgages purchased would not exceed $15,000 in amount for each family dwelling unit covered by the mortgage and the Association would not be authorized to purchase mortgages offered by or covering property held by Federal, State, territorial, or municipal agencies.

Capitalization of Association (sec. 303 of National Housing Act).—This section would provide that the Association shall have nonvoting capital stock. The initial issuance of stock would be subscribed for by the Secretary of the Treasury in an amount equal to the sum of the original capital stock of the existing Federal National Mortgage Association and its paid-in surplus, surplus, surplus reserves, and undistributed earnings as of the close of a cutoff date (to be determined by the new Association) within 90 days following the effective date of the Housing Act of 1954. It is estimated this will amount to approximately $70 million. The Secretary of the Treasury would be entitled to receive cumulative dividends on the capital stock held by him for each fiscal year or part of a year, from the time the capital represented by the stock is initially used, until it is retired, at rates determined by him at the beginning of each such fiscal year, based on the current average interest rate on outstanding marketable obligations of the United States.

This section would also provide for capital funds from private sources. This private capital (which would be put in the capital surplus account) would be obtained in connection with the Association's secondary market operations under section 304 (but not in connection with its special assistance to designated housing programs or to a declining mortgage market, or its management and liquidation of the mortgages the Association acquired prior to the cutoff date). In its regular secondary market operations (under sec. 304) the Association would require each mortgage seller to make payments of nonrefundable capital contributions of not less than 3 percent of the amount of mortgages involved in any purchases or contracts for purchases. Convertible certificates would be issued to each mortgage seller evidencing the capital contributions made by the seller. The certificates would be convertible into capital stock of the Association having equal par value, subject to such conditions as may be prescribed by the board of directors of the Association, but no such conversion could be made until such time as all of the outstanding capital stock held by the Secretary of the Treasury is retired and the Secretary of the Treasury holds no obligations of the Association purchased under section 304. After all the stock held by the Secretary of the Treasury has been retired and all obligations of the Association to the Treasury have been repaid, the Association would be authorized to issue stock directly to mortgage sellers, thus eliminating the necessity of issuing convertible certificates. Such dividends as may be declared by the board of directors would be paid to stockholders, but in any 1 year the capital and surplus accounts must not be reduced by such dividend payments (other than to the Secretary of the Treasury) by more than 5 percent of the par value of the outstanding stock.

As soon as possible after all the capital stock of the Association held by the Secretary of the Treasury has been retired the Housing and Home Finance Administrator would be required to transmit to the President for submission to Congress recommendations for legislation to transfer the assets and liabilities of the Association in connection with, and the control and management of its secondary market operations under section 304 of this bill, to the private owners of the outstanding capital stock of the Association.

The Association would also be authorized to impose charges or fees for its services, with the objective that all costs and expenses of its operations would be within its income and revenues. Earnings would be transferred annually to a general surplus account. Provision would also be made for the establishment of reserves. The capital stock held by the Secretary of the Treasury would be retireable from funds of the capital surplus and the general surplus accounts. The capital stock of the Association would not be retirable (other than stock held by the Secretary of the Treasury) if, as a consequence, the amount remaining outstanding would be less than $100 million.

Institutions organized under Federal law (including State member banks of the Federal Reserve System), in connection with transactions between them and the Association, would be authorized under this section, to make payments of the required capital contributions, to receive stock or convertible certificates, and to hold or dispose of such stock or certificates.

*Secondary market operations (sec. 304 of National Housing Act).—*This section would, in part, set forth the general requirements and standards which would govern the Association's secondary market operations with respect to marketable home mortgages. Purchase prices would be established at the market price for the particular class of mortgages involved, as determined by the Association. No mortgage could be purchased in these secondary market operations if it was insured or guaranteed prior to the effective date of the Housing Act of 1954. Determinations of volume of purchases and sales, of purchase and sale prices, and of charges or fees, would be consistent with the objectives that excessive use of the Association's facilities should be avoided, and that the operations should be within the revenues derived from such operations and fully self-supporting. The Association could not purchase participations or make advance purchase commitments in connection with its secondary market operations under this section, except that the Association would be authorized, in the discretion of its Board of Directors, to issue 1-for-1 contracts in connection with purchases of mortgages from the Association. Such a contract would provide that the Association will purchase mortgages from the holder of the contract in a prescribed amount which would not exceed the amount of mortgages purchased from the Association.

To enable the Association to carry out its section 304 secondary market operations, it would be authorized to issue, upon the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, obligations for sale to the investing public. The aggregate amount outstanding at any one time would not exceed 10 times the sum of its capital, capital surplus, general surplus, reserves, and undistributed earnings. At the time of issuance the total of obligations could not exceed the amount of the cash, mortgages, and Government bonds, free from any liens or encumbrances, held by the Association in connection with its secondary market operations. The obligations would have such maturities and bear such rate or rates of interest as may be determined by the Association, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury. Such obligations would contain provisions indicating clearly that they are not guaranteed as to principal or interest by the United States.

The Secretary of the Treasury would be authorized, in his discretion, to purchase the secondary market obligations of the Association, but his holdings (1) could not at any time exceed $500 million plus an amount equal to a total of the reductions in the amount of the existing FNMA portfolio which the rechartered Association would be liquidating, and, in any event, (2) could not exceed $1 billion. Any obligations purchased by the Secretary of the Treasury would be purchased at a price to yield a return at a rate determined by the Secretary, taking into consideration the current average rate on outstanding marketable obligations of the United States as of the last day of the month preceding the purchase. This authority of the Secretary of the Treasury would terminate when all of the capital stock held by the Secretary of the Treasury had been retired.

Special assistance functions (sec. 305 of National Housing Act).— This section would provide that the President, after taking into account (1) conditions in the building industry and the national economy and (2) conditions affecting the home-mortgage investment market, generally, or affecting various types or classifications of home mortgages, or both, and after determining that such action is in the public interest, may authorize the Association to make commitments to purchase, and to purchase such types, classes, or categories of home mortgages (including participations) as he may determine. It would provide the special assistance referred to in section 301 (b) with respect to special housing programs and to retarding or stopping a decline in mortgage lending and home building.

Two types of special assistance are authorized. The Association would (1) purchase and make commitments to purchase home mortgages and participations in home mortgages, and (2) enter into commitments to purchase immediate participations in mortgages and make related deferred participation agreements. The total amount of purchases and commitments could not exceed $200 million outstanding at any one time. The deferred participation agreements would be made by the Association only on the basis of a commitment by it to purchase an immediate participation of a fixed 20 percent undivided interest in each mortgage and a related deferred participation agreement by the Association to purchase the remaining outstanding interest in such mortgage conditional upon the occurrence of such a default as gives rise to the right to foreclose. The total amount of such immediate participation commitments and purchases pursuant to such commitments (not including the amount of any related deferred participation agreements or purchases pursuant thereto) could not exceed $100 million at any one time. Since the $100 million limitation relates to immediate purchase of a fixed 20 percent undivided interest in each mortgage, with purchases of the remaining interest in the event of default being excluded from such dollar limitation, this additional $100 million authorization would permit such special assistance to cover a total of not exceeding $500 million in mortgages.

The Association would have full discretion in the establishment of purchase prices, and would impose charges or fees for its services with the objective that all costs and expenses of its special-assistance operations would be within the income derived from its operations under this section 305 and that the operations should be fully self-supporting. The funds required to carry out these special-assistance functions of the Association would be obtained from Treasury borrowings. Obligations issued to the Treasury shall mature not more than 5 years from their respective dates of issue and bear interest at a rate determined by the Secretary of the Treasury, taking into consideration the current average rate on outstanding marketable obligations of the United States as of the last day of the month preceding the issuance of the obligation.

Management and liquidating functions (sec. 306 of National Housing Act).—This section would make provisions for the management and liquidation of the mortgage portfolio of the Federal National Mortgage Association which was in existence as of the close of the cutoff date determined by the rechartered Association within 60 days after the enactment of this bill (as provided in sec. 303 (d)).

The Association would be directed to establish separate accountability for all of its assets and liabilities (exclusive of capital, surplus, surplus reserves, and undistributed earnings, to be evidenced by new capital stock) as of the cutoff date.

To assure maximum private financing to carry the mortgages held in this portfolio, the Association would be authorized, on approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, to issue obligations for sale to the investing public. Obligations issued to the investing public in connection with the management and liquidating functions would contain provisions clearly indicating that they are not guaranteed as to principal or interest by the United States. They would have such maturities, and bear such rate or rates of interest as may be determined by the Association with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury. The total of such obligations could not exceed the amount of the cash, mortgages, and Government bonds, free from any liens or encumbrances held by the Association under this separate accountability. The Association would also be authorized to issue its obligations to the Secretary of the Treasury in sufficient amount to carry out its functions under this section. Such obligations would mature not more than 5 years from their dates of issue, and bear interest at a rate determined by the Secretary of the Treasury, taking into consideration the current average rate on outstanding marketable obligations of the United States as of the last day of the month preceding their issuance. The proceeds of any private financing shall be paid to the Secretary of the Treasury in reduction of the indebtedness of the Association to the Secretary.

Pursuant to this section 306 the existing Federal National Mortgage Association after the cutoff date established pursuant to section 303 (d) would discontinue making commitments, and would discontinue purchases except pursuant to outstanding commitments. The total of mortgages and commitments under this section 306 would be restricted to $3,350 million (including the present portfolio and outstanding commitments), and provision is made for the progressive reduction of such maximum amount by the amount of cash realizations from the liquidation of the portfolio with the objective that the entire amount shall be eliminated as promptly as practicable.

Of the $3,650 million total amount of investments, loans, purchases and commitments, authorized in the present law to be outstanding at any one time, a total of not to exceed $300 million would be made applicable to the special-assistance functions in section 305, and not to exceed $3,350 million would be made applicable to the management and liquidating functions of this section. Such amounts would not include the amounts of any mortgages otherwise transferred by law to the Association and held under the separate accountability of its management and liquidating functions.

Separate accountability (sec. 307 of National Housing Act).—Subsection (a) of this section would direct the Association to establish and at all times to maintain separate accountability for (a) its secondary market operations, (b) its special assistance functions, and (c) its management and liquidating functions. Subsections (b) and (c) would make it clear that the capitalization of the Association would not be available for its special assistance or liquidation functions, and that the benefits and burdens of these functions would inure solely to the Secretary of the Treasury.

Board of directors (sec. 308 of National Housing Act).—The Board of Directors of the rechartered Association would have five members. The Housing and Home Finance Administration would be the Chairman of the Board, and he is authorized to appoint the other four members from among the officers or employees of the Association, of the immediate office of the Administrator, or of any other department or agency of the Federal Government. The members of the Board, as such, would not receive compensation for their services. The basic rate of compensation of the position of the President of the Association shall be the same as that of the heads of the constituent agencies of the Housing Agency.

General Powers (sec. 309 of National Housing Act).—This section would set forth the general corporate powers incident to the Association's operations, and prohibits the use by others of the corporate name. Subject to applicable laws, the Association would be authorized to determine the necessity for and the character and amount of its obligations and expenditures. The Association would be tax exempt except that (1) any real property of the Association would be subject to taxation to the same extent as other real property, and (2) the Association would be required, with respect to its secondary market operations, to pay annually to the Treasury an amount equal to the amount of Federal income taxes which (except for the exemption) would be applicable to such secondary market operations. Provision is made for the appointment and compensation of officers and employees, subject to the civil service and classification laws.

Investment of funds (sec. 310 of National Housing Act).—This section would provide that moneys of the Association not invested in mortgages or operating facilities shall be kept in cash on hand or on deposit or invested in Government bonds or obligations guaranteed by the United States.

Obligations of Association legal investments (sec. 311 of National Housing Act).—This section would provide that the obligations of the Association would qualify as legal investments and may be accepted as security for fiduciary, trust, and public funds, the investment or deposit of which are under the control of the Federal Government. Provision would also be made for the Federal Reserve banks to act as depositories, custodians, and fiscal agents for the Association.

Short title (sec. 312 of National Housing Act).—This section would provide that title III of the National Housing Act, as amended, could be referred to as the Federal National Mortgage Association Charter Act.

Section 302: Status of existing Federal national mortgage associations

This section would provide that the body corporate referred to in section 302 of the National Housing Act, as amended by the Housing Act of 1954, is the present Federal National Mortgage Association.

Section 303: Investment by national banks

Under present law national banking associations are authorized to purchase the obligations of national mortgage associations without limitation as to the total amount of investment (R. S. 5136). Since the Federal National Mortgage Association is the sole "national mortgage association," this amendment would merely make the law more specific.

Section 304: Investment by Federal savings and loan associations

This section would authorize Federal home loan banks and Federal savings and loan associations to invest in obligations of the Association.

Section 305: Repeal of special provisions for Territories

This section would terminate the existing special authority of the Association to grant preferences with respect to FHA-insured mortgages covering property located in Alaska, Guam, or Hawaii, and to make direct FHA-insured mortgage loans secured by property located in Alaska.

Section 306: Repeal of Public Law 243, 82d Congress

This section would terminate the special authority of the Association to make advance commitments, under certain conditions, with respect to FHA-insured section 213 cooperative-housing mortgages.

Section 307: Transfer of functions from the Housing Administrator to FNMA

This section would transfer to FNMA certain technical operating functions of the Housing Administrator regarding FNMA under section 2 of Reorganization Plan No. 22 of 1950, together with the notes and capital stock of FNMA held by the Administrator under that section of the plan.

TITLE IV—SLUM CLEARANCE AND URBAN RENEWAL

Sections 401 through 411: Amendments to title I of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended

Sections 401 through 411 would amend title I of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended, which provides for the present slum clearance and community development and redevelopment program. The amendments are designed primarily to broaden and redirect the present slum clearance and redevelopment program in order to assist communities in taking effective action to meet their overall problems of eliminating, and preventing the spread of, slums and urban blight, including action to rehabilitate or improve blighted, deteriorated, or deteriorating areas. For this purpose, major changes in, or additions to, title I would be made with respect to the following:

Urban renewal fund.—A new section 100 would be added to the Housing Act of 1949, as amended, which would provide that the authorizations, funds, and appropriations available to the Housing Administrator under title I of the Housing Act of 1949 would constitute a fund to be known as the urban renewal fund. This fund would be available for advances, loans, and capital grants to local public agencies for urban renewal projects in urban renewal areas. Except as to specific amendments to title I explained in this summary, such financial assistance would be made available for urban renewal projects in the same manner as it is now made available for development or redevelopment projects under the existing provisions of title I of the 1949 act. (See sec. 402 of bill.)

Local responsibility and workable program.—The requirements of title I with respect to local responsibility and local action would be strengthened and increased. Existing provisions require the Housing and Home Finance Administrator, in extending financial assistance under title I, to give consideration to the extent to which local public bodies have undertaken positive programs to prevent slums and blighted areas through the adoption and improvement of local codes and to encourage housing cost reductions through use of new materials, etc. This requirement, which is applicable even at the initial stage of financial assistance, i. e., at the making of the advances for surveys, plans, and other preliminary work for projects, would be broadened to include a consideration of code enforcement.

A further requirement would be added that no contract could be entered into for any loan or capital grant under title I of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended, or for annual contributions or capital grants pursuant to the United States Housing Act of 1937, as amended, and no mortgage could be insured under sections 220 or 221 (explained in connection with sec. 123 of this bill) of the National Housing Act, as amended, unless (1) the locality presents to the Housing and Home Finance Administrator a workable program for eliminating and preventing slums and urban blight and encouraging the rehabilitation or redevelopment of blighted areas or slums, and (2) on the basis of his review of the program the Administrator determines that the program meets the requirements in the law and certifies to the constituent agencies affected that the Federal assistance may be made available in the community. The program must include an official plan of action for effectively dealing with the problem of urban slums and blight within the community and for the establishment and preservation of a well-planned community with well-organized residential neighborhoods of decent homes and suitable living environment for adequate family life. (See sec. 101 as amended by sec. 403 of bill.)

The Housing Administrator would be authorized to establish facilities (1) for furnishing to communities, at their request, an urban renewal service to assist them in the preparation of workable programs, and to provide them with technical and professional assistance for planning and developing related programs, and (2) for the assembly, analysis, and reporting of information pertaining to such programs.

Urban renewal area.—The term “urban renewal area” would be substituted for “redevelopment area” in title I and would be defined to mean an urban area that (1) the governing body of the locality determines to be blighted, deteriorated, or deteriorating, and designates as appropriate for an urban renewal project, and (2) the Housing Administrator approves as appropriate for such a project. (See sec. 110 (a) as amended by sec. 411 of bill.)

Urban renewal project.—The term “project,” as used in title I, would be redefined (and referred to as urban renewal project) to include (1) slum clearance and redevelopment in an urban renewal area or (2) rehabilitation or conservation in an urban renewal area, or (3) any combination or part thereof, in accordance with an urban renewal plan (referred to below) to achieve sound community objectives for the establishment and preservation of well-planned residential neighborhoods of decent homes and suitable living environment for adequate family life. For this purpose, “rehabilitation or conservation” would include the restoration and renewal of a blighted, deteriorated, or deteriorating area by (1) carrying out plans for a program of voluntary repair and rehabilitation of buildings and improvements in accordance with the urban renewal plan (referred to below); (2) acquisition of real property and demolition or removal of buildings and improvements where necessary to eliminate unhealthful, insanitary or unsafe conditions, lessen density, eliminate obsolete or other detrimental uses, or to otherwise remove or prevent the spread of blight or deterioration, or to provide land for needed public facilities; (3) installation, construction, or reconstruction of streets, utilities, parks, playgrounds and other improvements necessary for carrying out in the area the urban renewal objectives of title I in accordance with the urban renewal plan; and (4) the disposition of any property acquired in such urban renewal area (including sale, initial leasing, or retention by the local public agency itself) at its fair value for uses in accordance with the urban renewal plan. The term "project" would continue to exclude the construction or improvement of any building, and to exclude any donations or provisions made as local non-cash grants-in-aid. (See sec. 110 (c) as amended by sec. 411 of bill.)

Another change in the definition of "project," consistent with the broadened scope of title I, is the elimination of the requirement that a commercial or industrial deteriorated area may be cleared with Federal assistance only if the area will be redeveloped for predominantly residential purposes. However, there is substituted a requirement that the project shall be in accordance with an urban renewal plan to achieve "sound community objectives for the establishment and preservation of well-planned residential neighborhoods."

Also, under the bill, property in an urban renewal project could consist entirely of open land to be developed for nonresidential use, where such land, because of obsolete platting, diversity of ownership, or other reasons, substantially impairs or arrests the sound growth of the community.

Urban renewal plan.—The term "urban renewal plan" would be substituted for "redevelopment plan" in title I and defined more broadly to indicate the scope of an urban renewal project, the undertakings required for carrying it out, the land uses, maximum densities, building requirements, and its conformity with the general plan of the locality as a whole. This plan would include a redevelopment plan approved by the governing body of the locality for such part, if any, of the urban renewal area as is proposed to be acquired and redeveloped. (See sec. 110 (b) as amended by sec. 411 of bill.)

The authority of the Housing Administrator to make advances of funds to local public agencies for surveys and plans for urban renewal projects would be expressly extended to (i) plans for carrying out a program of voluntary repair and rehabilitation of buildings and improvements, (ii) plans for the enforcement of State and local laws, codes and regulations relating to the use and occupancy of buildings and improvements, and to the compulsory repair, rehabilitation, demolition or removal of buildings and improvements, and to the compulsory demolition and removal of buildings and improvements, and (iii) appraisals, title searches and other preliminary work necessary to prepare for the acquisition of land in connection with the undertaking of such projects.

Local grants-in-aid.—The term "local grants-in-aid," as used in title I, would be redefined to relate, of course, to the urban renewal area and to include any work or improvement, at the cost thereof, which can be included as part of the urban renewal project. It should be noted that the definition of local grants-in-aid would continue to include public buildings or other public facilities (other than publicly owned housing), so that they would continue to be included in the computation of Federal and local grants-in-aid, although no loans could be made for the construction of such buildings as they would continue to be excluded from the definition of "project." The bill would also exclude from local grants-in-aid any revenue-producing public utilities, the capital cost of which is financed by service charges or special assessments. The limitation in the existing law that parks, playgrounds, public buildings, or facilities are eligible as local grants-in-aid only if they are "necessary to serve or support the new uses of land in the project area in accordance with the redevelopment plan" would be changed to a requirement that they be "necessary for carrying out in the area the urban renewal objectives of this title in accordance with the urban renewal plan." (See sec. 110 (d) as amended by sec. 411 of bill.)

Under the present law, where a park, playground, public building, or facility primarily serves the redevelopment project area, the Administrator is authorized to permit its entire cost to be counted as a local grant-in-aid even though it serves other areas to some extent. Also, under the present law, where it directly serves both the project area and other areas, the Administrator may provide, in computing the local grant-in-aid, for an appropriate apportionment of cost. There is at present no statutory guide (other than general guides such as the use of the word "primarily") for determining when the cost will be apportioned. A clarifying amendment in this bill provides that there shall be such apportionment in all cases where the approximate degree of the benefit to areas outside the urban renewal area is estimated at 20 percent or more of the total benefits derived from the park, playground, public building, or facility.

Another amendment to facilitate title I operations provides that, for the purpose of computing the amount of local grants-in-aid, the estimated cost (as determined by the Housing Administrator) of parks, playgrounds, and public buildings, or other public facilities may be deemed to be their actual cost if (i) their construction is not completed at the time of final disposition of land in the project to be acquired and disposed of under the urban renewal plan, and (ii) the Administrator has received assurances satisfactory to him that such park, playground, public building, or facility will be constructed or completed when needed and within a time prescribed by him. This is designed to avoid delay and expense resulting from the requirements of existing law that prevent the winding up of a project until the completion of all public facilities being built by the community as local grants-in-aid.

Federal grants-in-aid.—Although the two-thirds-one-third formula for Federal local grants now in the law is not changed, the title I amendments described above have the effect of authorizing the Federal Government to share in the cost of additional facilities and activities required to make possible sound clearance and redevelopment or neighborhood restoration and renewal which are provided by the local community in an urban renewal area. Thus, for example, the gross project cost may now include (in addition to costs in connection with planning and carrying out slum clearance and redevelopment as now authorized in the law), public expenditures in connection with:

1. Carrying out plans for a program of voluntary repair and rehabilitation of buildings or other improvements in accordance with the urban renewal plan;

2. Acquisition of real property and demolition or removal of buildings and improvements (and disposition of property) in the urban renewal area (which it is contemplated will be broader than the old project area) where necessary to eliminate unhealthful, insanitary, or unsafe conditions, lessen density, eliminate obsolete or detrimental use, or to otherwise remove or prevent the spread of blight or deterioration;

3. Installation, construction or reconstruction of streets, utilities, parks, playgrounds and other improvements (which need not be in a slum clearance area) necessary for carrying out in the urban renewal area objectives of title I in accordance with the urban renewal plan.

However, under title I, as amended, the Federal Government would in no way share in the cost of such other facilities and activities connected with the urban renewal program as—

1. The actual repair or rehabilitation work on private property, or
2. The enforcement of local codes relating to the use and occupancy of buildings or relating to their compulsory repair, rehabilitation, removal, or demolition (other than planning therefor in connection with urban renewal projects).

Miscellaneous provisions.—"Local public agency": Because of the broadened scope of the activities to be carried on under an urban renewal project, some of the actions to be performed by the local community will, in the case of many cities, fall within the jurisdiction both of city departments and of local redevelopment agencies having a separate corporate existence. It may therefore be appropriate to have a city and a local redevelopment agency join as parties to a contract for Federal aid under the title. In order to avoid references to this type of situation throughout the law, the definition of "local public agency" has been changed so that it includes two or more of the entities which are listed under the present definition of local public agency. (See sec. 110 (k) as amended by sec. 411 of bill.)

Labor standards: Because of the broadened scope of activities connected with an urban renewal project, the labor standards requirements of title I would be changed to make clear that they apply only to development work financed in whole or in part with funds under title I. An amendment would also delete from the prevailing wages requirements of the title laborers or mechanics who are employees of municipalities or other local public bodies. The amendment would also repeal the requirement that contractors on title I projects make monthly reports to the Secretary of Labor concerning the number of persons on their payrolls, total man-hours worked, itemized expenditures for materials, and the names and addresses of all subcontractors. (The Department of Labor has indicated it does not want such reports.) (See sec. 109 as amended by sec. 410 of bill.)

Reimbursement for inspections: A provision (now in the First Independent Offices Appropriation Act, 1954) for reimbursement by local public agencies of expenditures by the Housing Administrator for the expenses of inspections and audits and other necessary services at the sites of projects would be inserted as a permanent part of title I. Such expenditures would be considered nonadministrative. (See sec. 106 (b) as amended by sec. 408 of bill.)

Section 412: Savings provision

This section includes a savings provision to permit, after the enactment of the amendments proposed in this title, the completion, under present statutory authority, of projects initiated, or under contract for plans and surveys, prior to the date of legal effectiveness of the proposed amendments of title I of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended. The enactment of this section is necessary (1) to obviate difficult administrative problems involved in the transition from the present more limited slum clearance and urban redevelopment program to the broader urban renewal program and (2) to recognize the Federal Government's obligation to cities and other public authorities which in good faith have already entered into contracts for slum clearance and urban redevelopment projects on the basis of title I prior to the major amendments provided in this bill and which will have projects at various stages of advancement when the proposed amendments become effective.

Section 413: Repeal of appropriation act provisos

This section would repeal the provisos contained in the First Independent Offices Appropriation Act, 1954, which require (1) the Administrator, before approving a slum-clearance program, to consider the efforts of localities to enforce local codes relating to health, sanitation, and safety for dwellings, and the feasibility of achieving slum-clearance objectives through rehabilitation of existing dwellings and areas and (2) that the authority under title I of the National Housing Act for FHA insurance of loans for the repair and alteration of structures shall be used to the utmost in connection with rehabilitation needs. The effect of these provisos is now incorporated in title I of the Housing Act of 1949, as it would be amended by this title.

Section 414: Grants to localities for testing, developing, and reporting slum prevention and slum elimination techniques

This section would authorize special grants to localities to assist them in developing, testing, and reporting on improved techniques for preventing and eliminating slums and urban blight. Grants would be limited to two-thirds of the cost of the undertakings. Aggregate grants under this section would be limited to $5 million, to be obtained from the authorization for other grants authorized by title I of the Housing Act of 1949.

Sections 415 and 416: District of Columbia participation in urban renewal

These sections would make technical changes in the District of Columbia Redevelopment Act of 1945, as amended, which would extend that act to urban renewal activities of the type which could be assisted under the amendments of title I of the Housing Act of 1949 contained in the bill. They would thus be enabling provisions for the District of Columbia with respect to urban renewal activities.

TITLE V—LOW-RENT PUBLIC HOUSING

Sections 501 through 505 would amend the United States Housing Act of 1937, as amended, under which the low-rent public housing program is administered.

Section 501: Preferences for admission to low-rent housing

The existing preference provisions for admission to low-rent housing provide a first preference only to families which are to be displaced by a low-rent project or by a public slum clearance or redevelopment project, or which were so displaced within 3 years prior to making application for admission. The proposed amendment would extend this preference provision to families which are to be displaced through other public actions. Thus, the same preference would be applicable to families who are to be displaced because a building, health, sanitary, or other code relating to housing standards prohibits the family from living in that particular dwelling for reasons such as overcrowding or failure of the dwelling to meet minimum standards of light, air, sanitation, etc.; or through closing of the dwelling through public action because it is unfit; or through demolition of the dwelling by public action for the construction or widening of a highway or bridge even though not connected with redevelopment or urban renewal. The preferences would also be applicable to families who are required to move because they cannot afford the increased rent caused by improvement of a dwelling unit to bring it into compliance with housing standards prescribed by laws or codes. In order to permit proper programing of relocation activities, local housing authorities are authorized to grant prior preference as among projects or actions entitled to preference. Veterans would continue to be preferred within each preference group.

Section 502: Payments in lieu of taxes

This amendment is designed to make mandatory on a local housing authority any payments in lieu of taxes stipulated in its cooperation agreement with the local governing body. This agreement would provide for payments in lieu of taxes of 10 percent of shelter rents unless State law prescribes a lesser amount or unless the local governing body agrees to a lesser amount. The agreement would also provide for offsetting against such payments any claims by the public housing agency against local bodies due to their failure to meet their obligations under the agreement. However, in any case where it appears at the time the cooperation agreement is entered into that tax exemption, less a 10-percent payment in lieu of taxes, would not result in a local contribution to the project equal to at least 20 percent of the Federal contributions, the payments in lieu of taxes to be provided in the agreement would be limited to an amount, if any, determined year by year which will not reduce the local contributions below such 20 percent.

The proposed amendment also provides that the localities may elect, if they so desire and if permitted by State law, to make the project subject to full taxes on condition that the locality pays to the project in cash the difference between full taxes and 10 percent of shelter rents but not less than 20 percent of the Federal contribution to the project.

In either case the local public housing authority must inform the local governing body, before the Federal annual contributions contract is executed, its estimate (in the case of a tax-exempt project) of the annual amounts to be paid in lieu of taxes and of the amount of taxes which would be levied if the property were privately owned, or (where the project is taxed) the estimated amount of the local cash contribution. Actual figures must thereafter be published in the local authority's annual report.

This amendment also permits existing annual contributions contracts to be amended in accordance with the above provisions and deletes obsolete provisions.

Section 503: Self-liquidation of public housing

This amendment is designed to make the federally assisted public housing program self-liquidating, so far as possible. It provides that after the obligations for which annual contributions are pledged are paid in full, receipts in excess of necessary expenses of administration of the project, and of reasonable reserves therefor, must be paid to the Federal Government, and to local public bodies which have contributed to the project in the form of tax exemption or otherwise, in proportion to the aggregate contribution which the Government and such local bodies have each made to the project, but not to exceed their respective contributions. Meanwhile, only debts for necessary expenditures of the project can be incurred by the local housing authority.

Subsection (2) provides that in the event the project is sold at any time (either before or after its cost has been liquidated), it must be sold to the highest bidder after advertising, or at fair market value; and the proceeds of such sale together with any reserves held in connection with the project, after all outstanding debts in respect to the project have been paid, must be paid to the Government and to the local public bodies in a proportion based on the aggregate contribution which the Government and the local bodies have made to the project, but not to exceed their respective contributions.

This amendment is a recognition of the fact that the useful life of well-constructed low-rent housing extends far beyond the life of the bonds and Federal contracts relating to the project, and that it is equitable (whether the project is continued in low-rent use or, if no longer needed for that purpose, is sold or rented for other than low-rent use) that any rents or proceeds therefrom should be returned to the Government and to the local community in proportion and to the extent of their respective contributions to the project.

Section 504: Repeal of labor reporting requirements

This section would repeal section 16 (6) of the United States Housing Act of 1937, which requires certain reports to the Department of Labor which the Department no longer desires. Section 16 (6) requires contractors engaged on any low-rent housing project to make monthly reports to the Secretary of Labor concerning the number of persons on their payrolls, total man-hours worked, itemized expenditures for materials, and the names and addresses of all subcontractors.

TITLE VI—HOME LOAN BANK BOARD

Section 601 (1): Providing for service of process on Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation

While the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation is subject to suit under the present law, there is no provision specifically relating to the method of service of process on the Corporation. Accordingly a question exists as to whether service may be made upon the Corporation anywhere outside the District of Columbia. This section would provide a method whereby service may be obtained on the Corporation anywhere by service upon an agent and the mailing of a copy of the process by registered mail to the Corporation at Washington, D. C.

Section 601 (2): Statute of limitations in enforcement of claim for payment of insurance

This subsection would amend section 405 of the National Housing Act by adding a new subsection (c) which would bar the enforcement of a claim against the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation for the payment of insurance after the expiration of 3 years from the date of default. If, however, within this 3-year period the receiver or conservator recognizes the claim but the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation denies its validity, the action may be brought within 2 years from the date of such denial.

Section 601 (3): Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation

This subsection would change the name of the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation to "Federal Savings Insurance Corporation."

Section 602: Increase in amount of home mortgage as collateral for advances

This section would increase the maximum home mortgage acceptable as collateral security for an advance by a Federal Home Loan Bank from $20,000 to $35,000 to be consistent with the proposed increase in the maximum amount of loans by Federal savings and loan associations from $20,000 to $35,000, as would be authorized by section 603 of this bill.

Section 603 (1): Increase in maximum amount of loan by Federal savings and loan associations

This section would amend section 5 (c) of the Home Owners' Loan Act of 1933 to increase the maximum dollar amount of a home loan which may be made by a Federal savings and loan association from the present maximum of $20,000 to a maximum of $35,000. The present $20,000 maximum has been in existence since 1933. This would not change the existing provisions of section 5 which permit associations to make loans without regard to this limitation to the extent of 15 percent of the assets of an institution.

Section 603 (2): Enforcement of rules and regulations governing operations of Federal savings and loan associations and appointment of conservators and receivers

This section amending subsection (d) of section 5 of the Home Owners' Loan Act of 1933 is a complete revision of subsection (d). Under present provisions of the act the appointment of a conservator or receiver is the only means the Home Loan Bank Board has to enforce the law and regulations under which Federal savings and loan associations operate. Section 603 (2) would provide a means by administrative and court proceedings whereby the Board could enforce compliance with law and regulations by Federal savings and loan associations in cases where the Board felt that the appointment of a conservator or receiver was not necessary or desirable. Any association charged with the violation of any regulation or of law would have 30 days after receipt of a formal resolution setting out the violations within which to correct the alleged violations. If there is no compliance during this period provision is made for a hearing on 20 days' notice to consider the alleged violation. After hearing and adjudication an appeal shall lie by a review of the court of the hearings. The review of the court shall be upon the weight of the evidence.

The hearings and court proceedings may be in the Federal judicial district in which the association is located.

This subsection also provides the procedure for the appointment of conservators, receivers, and supervisory representatives. The specific grounds authorizing the appointment of a conservator or receiver are set out. No conservator or receiver may be appointed except pursuant to a formal resolution stating the grounds for the appointment and until an opportunity for an administrative hearing is afforded to the association. If, however, any of the grounds exist for the appointment of a conservator or receiver and the Board determines an emergency exist, it may appoint a supervisory representative without notice to take charge until the appointment of a conservator or receiver.

Section 603 (3): Increase in authorized investment in unsecured loans for home repair and improvement

This subsection would increase from $1,500 to $3,000, the maximum amount of an unsecured loan in which an association could invest.

TITLE VII—VOLUNTARY HOME CREDIT PROGRAM

Section 701: Declaration of policy

This section declares it to be the purpose of title VII to encourage and facilitate the flow of mortgage credit into remote areas and small communities through the voluntary cooperation and effort of private lending institutions, and to assist in the development of a program whereby private financing institutions engaged in mortgage lending can make a maximum contribution to the economic stability and growth of the Nation through extension of the market for insured or guaranteed mortgage loans.

Section 702: Definitions

This section would define terms used in title VII.

Section 703: National Voluntary Mortgage Credit Extension Committee

This section would establish a National Voluntary Mortgage Credit Extension Committee, called the "National Committee," which would consist of the Housing and Home Finance Administrator as Chairman and other persons appointed by the Administrator as follows:

(a) Two representatives of each type of private financing institutions;

(b) Two representatives of builders of residential properties; and

(c) Two representatives of real-estate boards.

The Housing Administrator would also be required to request the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System and the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs to designate a representative of the Board and the Veterans' Administration, respectively, to serve on the National Committee in an advisory capacity. In selecting and appointing the members of the National Committee (and regional committees referred to below), the Housing Administrator would be required to give due regard to fair representation thereon for small, medium, and large private financing institutions and for different geographical areas. Such persons appointed by the Administrator would serve on a voluntary basis.

Section 704: Regional subcommittees

Subsection (a) of this section would require that, as soon as practicable, the National Committee divide the United States into regions conforming generally to the Federal Reserve districts, and that the Housing Administrator, after consultation with the other members of the National Committee, designate for each such region five or more persons representing private financing institutions and builders of residential properties in such region to serve as a regional subcommittee of the National Committee for the purpose of assisting in placing with private financing institutions insured or guaranteed mortgage loans.

Subsection (b) of this section would authorize the Housing Administrator to provide office space and staff assistance to a regional subcommittee, and to utilize the services of the Federal Reserve banks for this purpose.

Sections 705, 706, and 707: Function of National Committee and of regional subcommittees

Section 705 provides that the function of the National Committee and the regional subcommittees shall be to facilitate the flow of funds for residential mortgage loans into areas or communities where there may be a shortage of local capital for, or inadequate facilities for access to, such loans, and to achieve the maximum utilization of the facilities of private financing institutions for this purpose by soliciting and obtaining the cooperation of all such private financing institutions in extending credit for insured or guaranteed mortgage loans.

Section 706 would require the National Committee to study and review the demand and supply of funds for residential mortgage loans in all parts of the country, and to receive reports from and correlate the activities of the regional subcommittee. It would also be required to periodically inform the Commissioner of the Federal Housing Administration and the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs concerning the results of the studies and of the progress of the National Committee and regional subcommittees in performing their function, and, to the extent practicable, maintain liaison with State and local government housing officials in order that they may be fully apprized of the function and work of the National Committee and regional subcommittees. The Housing Administrator would be required to, not later than April 1 in each year, make a full report of the operations of the National Committee and the regional subcommittees to the Congress.

Subsection (a) of section 707 would require each regional subcommittee to make studies in its region for the National Committee, to maintain liaison with local FHA and VA officials, and request such officers to furnish information on unsatisfied demand for loans eligible for FHA insurance or VA guaranty.

Subsection (b) of section 707 would authorize a regional subcommittee to assist any applicant in obtaining private financing for a loan, the proceeds of which are to be used for the construction or purchase of a family dwelling or dwellings, upon receipt of a certificate from such applicant, stating that—

(1) application for such loan has been made to at least two private financing institutions, or in the alternative to such private financing institution or institutions as may be reasonably accessible to the applicant;

(2) the applicant has been informed by the above-mentioned private financing institution or institutions that funds for mortgage credit on the loan are unavailable; and

(3) the applicant is eligible for insurance or guaranty under the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1941, as amended, or consents that the mortgage to be issued as security for the loan be insured under the National Housing Act, as amended.

Similar assistance would be authorized to a person who has made application for a direct VA housing loan, and to financial institutions seeking to locate other institutions willing to repurchase these mortgage loans.

Subsection (c) of section 707 would authorize a regional subcommittee to request the National Committee to obtain the aid of other regional subcommittees in seeking sources of mortgage credit, and to request assurances from financing institutions that they will make funds available for Government insured or guaranteed home mortgages in any specified areas.

Section 708: Regulations of Administrator

This section would authorize the Housing Administrator, after consultation with the National Committee, to issue general rules and procedures for the effective implementation of title VII and for the functioning of the regional subcommittee.

Sections 709, 710, and 711: General provisions

Section 709 would waive any application of the antitrust laws or the Federal Trade Commission Act to functions under title VII.

Section 710 is the usual savings clause.

Section 711 provides that the authority of title VII shall expire June 30, 1957, or prior thereto by concurrent resolution of Congress.

TITLE VIII—URBAN PLANNING AND RESERVE OR PLANNED PUBLIC WORKS

Section 801: Urban planning

This section of the bill recognizes the importance of extending Federal assistance to meet the planning needs of the smaller communities and of metropolitan and regional areas. It would authorize the Housing and Home Finance Administrator to provide planning grants, up to 50 percent of the estimated cost, to State, metropolitan, and regional area planning agencies for metropolitan or regional area planning, and to State planning bodies for the purpose of assisting municipalities under 25,000 in urban planning by providing professional and technical planning services to them. Five million dollars would be authorized to be appropriated for the grants, and appropriations would remain available until expended.

Section 802: Reserve of planned public works

This section would provide for the resumption of Federal aid to assist in the advance planning of State and local non-Federal public works. The Housing and Home Finance Administrator would be empowered to make advances to the States, their agencies, and political subdivisions for the planning of public works (other than housing) which conform to an overall State, local, or regional plan approved by a competent State, local, or regional authority. Any such advance would become repayable in full, without interest, if and when the construction of the public works contemplated by the advance was undertaken or started. However, if payment is not made promptly when due the unpaid amount of the advance would bear interest at the rate of 4 percent per annum from the date the Federal Government made demand for repayment.

As indicated by the section, its purpose is to encourage the States and other non-Federal public agencies to maintain a continuing and adequate reserve of planned public works (exclusive of housing) the construction of which can be quickly commenced when the economic situation may make such action desirable.

Authority is included to appropriate not to exceed $10 million to effectuate the purposes of the section. Amounts so appropriated would remain available until expended. The authority to make advances would expire July 1, 1957.

TITLE IX—MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

Section 901: Exemption of unusual types of permanent Lanham Act housing from preference requirements in disposition

This section would amend section 607 of the Lanham Act by adding a new subsection (g) which would authorize the Housing and Home Finance Administrator to dispose of certain types of permanent war housing without regard to requirements in the act for preferences to veterans and occupants of the housing in the purchase of the housing. Such preference requirements would be waived when the Administrator determines that the housing—

- (1) is unsuitable for family dwelling use,
- (2) is being used at the time of disposition for other than dwelling purposes,
- (3) was offered with preferences substantially similar to those provided in the act to veterans and occupants prior to the enactment of the preference provisions, or
- (4) is to be sold with a requirement that it be removed from its present location.

Section 902: Consolidation of reports to Congress

This section would provide for the submission by the Housing Administrator to the President for transmission to the Congress of a single annual report on all operations under the jurisdiction of the Housing Agency. There are presently a number of requirements in various housing laws and reports on parts of the operations of the Housing Agency and these reports are required to be made at various times. The requirement of this section would take the place of these scattered existing reporting requirements which would be repealed.

Section 903: Reduction of vulnerability to enemy attack

This section would provide that all housing functions and programs of the Federal Government shall be carried out, consistent with the requirements of the functions and programs, in a manner that will facilitate progress in the reduction of vulnerability of congested urban areas to enemy attack.

Section 904: Farm housing

This section would provide additional authorization for the farm-housing assistance under title V of the Housing Act of 1949 (Public Law 171, 81st Cong.). (That title authorized the Secretary of Agriculture to make (1) long-term loans to farmers having adequate farms who are nevertheless unable to obtain private credit on reasonable terms; (2) similar loans, supplemented by modest contributions for 5 years, where the farmer is unable to undertake to repay the loan in full and the farm is not adequate but capable of being improved to the point where it is self-sustaining; and (3) modest loans and grants to help farm families on very poor farms to undertake minor improvements or minimum repairs to farm dwellings where necessary to remove hazards to the health or safety of the occupants.) This section would provide the following additional authorization, to be available on or after July 1, 1954, for title V: (1) $100 million in the amount of loan funds which can be obtained from the Treasury; (2) $2 million per annum in the amount of annual contribution commitments for housing on potentially adequate farms; and (3) $10 million in the amount of appropriations authorized for loans and grants for improvements and repairs.

Sections 905 and 906: Act controlling and separability

These sections contain customary act-controlling and separability provisions:

CHANGES IN EXISTING LAW

SEC. 2. * * *

(b) No insurance shall be granted under this section to any such financial institution with respect to any obligation representing any such loan, advance of credit, or purchase by it [(1) if the amount of such loan, advance of credit, or purchase made for the purpose of financing the alteration, repair, or improvement of existing structures exceeds $2,500, or for the purpose of financing the construction of new structures exceeds $3,000] (1) if the amount of such loan, advance of credit, or purchase exceeds $3,000; (2) if such obligation has a maturity in excess of [three years] five years and thirty-two days, except that such maturity limitation shall not apply if such loan, advance of credit, or purchase is for the purpose of financing the construction of a new structure for use in whole or in part for agricultural purposes; or (3) unless the obligation bears such interest, has such maturity, and contains such other terms, conditions, and restrictions as the Commissioner shall prescribe, in order to make credit available for the purposes of this title: Provided, That insurance may be granted to any such financial institution with respect to any obligation not in excess of [$10,000 and having a maturity not in excess of seven years] $10,000 or $1,500 per family unit, whichever is the greater, and having a maturity not in excess of ten years and thirty-two days representing any such loan, advance of credit, or purchase made by it if such loan, advance of credit, or purchase is made for the purpose of financing the alteration, repair, improvement, or conversion of an existing structure used or to be used as an apartment house or a dwelling for two or more families: Provided further, That any obligation with respect to which insurance is granted under this section on or after July 1, 1939, may be refinanced and extended in accordance with such terms and conditions as the Commissioner may prescribe, but in no event for an additional amount or term in excess of the maximum provided for in this subsection.

(f) The Commissioner shall fix a premium charge for the insurance hereafter granted under this section, but in the case of any obligation representing any loan, advance of credit, or purchase, such premium charge shall not exceed an amount equivalent to 1 per centum per annum of the net proceeds of such loan, advance of credit, or purchase, for the term of such obligation, and such premium charge shall be payable in advance by the financial institution and shall be paid at such time and in such manner as may be prescribed by the Commissioner. The moneys derived from such premium charges and all moneys collected by the Commissioner as fees of any kind in connection with the granting of insurance as provided in this section, and all moneys derived from the sale, collection, disposition, or compromise of any evidence of debt, contract, claim, property, or security assigned to or held by the Commissioner as provided in subsection (c) of this section with respect to insurance granted on and after July 1, 1939, shall be deposited in an account in the Treasury of the United States, which account shall be available for defraying the operating expenses of the Federal Housing Administration under this section, and any amounts in such account which are not needed for such purpose may be used for the payment of claims in connection with the insurance granted under this section. The account heretofore established in connection with insurance operations under this section and identified in the accounting records of the Federal Housing Administration as the Title I Claims Account shall be terminated as of June 30, 1954, at which time all of the remaining assets of such account, together with deposits therein for the account of obligors, shall be transferred to and merged with the account established pursuant to this subsection. Moneys in the account established pursuant to this subsection not needed for the current operations of the Federal Housing Administration may be invested in bonds or other obligations of, or in bonds or other obligations guaranteed as to principal and interest by, the United States.

[ANNUAL REPORT] TAXATION

[SEC. 5. The Commissioner shall make an annual report to the Congress as soon as practicable after the 1st day of January in each year of his activities under this title and titles II, III, VI, VII, VIII and IX of this Act.]

SEC. 8. (a) To assist in providing adequate housing for families of low and moderate income, particularly in suburban and outlying areas, this section is designed to supplement systems of mortgage insurance under other provisions of the National Housing Act by making feasible the insurance of mortgages covering properties in areas where it is not practicable to obtain conformity with many of the requirements essential to the insurance of mortgages on housing in built-up urban areas. The Commissioner is authorized, upon application by the mortgagee, to insure, as hereinafter provided, any mortgage (as defined in section 201 of this Act) offered to him which is eligible for insurance as hereinafter provided, and, upon such terms as the Commissioner may prescribe, to make commitments for the insuring of such mortgages prior to the date of their execution or disbursement thereon: Provided, That the aggregate amount of principal obligations of all mortgages insured under this section and outstanding at any one time shall not exceed $100,000,000, except that with the approval of the President such aggregate amount may be increased at any time or times by additional amounts aggregating not more than $150,000,000 upon a determination by the President, taking into account the general effect of any such increase upon conditions in the building industry and upon the national economy, that such increase is in the public interest [] : And provided further, That no mortgage shall be insured under this section after the effective date of the Housing Act of 1954, except pursuant to a commitment to insure issued on or before such date.

(b) To be eligible for insurance under this section a mortgage shall— * * *

[(2) Involve a principal obligation (including such initial service charges, appraisal, inspection, and other fees as the Commissioner shall approve) in an amount—

[(A) not to exceed $16,000 and not to exceed 80 per centum of the appraised value (as of the date the mortgage is accepted for insurance) of a property upon which there is located a dwelling or dwellings designed principally for residential use for not more than four families in the aggregate, irrespective of whether such dwelling or dwellings have a party wall or are otherwise physically connected with another dwelling or dwellings: Provided, That the Commissioner may increase such dollar amount limitation by not exceeding $4,500 for each additional family dwelling unit in excess of two located on such property, or

[(B) Repealed.]

[(C) not to exceed $9,450 and not to exceed the sum of (i) 95 per centum of $7,000 of the appraised value (as of the date the mortgage is accepted for insurance) and (ii) 70 per centum of such value in excess of $7,000 and not in excess of $11,000, of a property, urban, suburban, or rural, upon which there is located a dwelling designed principally for a single-family residence and which is approved for mortgage insurance prior to the beginning of construction: Provided, That with respect to mortgages insured under this paragraph the mortgagor shall be the owner and occupant of the property and shall have paid on account of the property at least 5 per centum of the appraised value, or such larger amount as the Commissioner may determine, in cash or its equivalent, or

[(D) not to exceed $6,650, except that the Commissioner may by regulation increase this amount to not to exceed $7,600 in any geographical area where he finds that cost levels so require, and not to exceed 95 per centum of the appraised value (as of the date the mortgage is accepted for insurance) of a property, urban, suburban, or rural, upon which there is located a dwelling designed principally for a single-family residence and which is approved for mortgage insurance prior to the beginning of construction: Provided, That if the Commissioner finds that it is not feasible, within the aforesaid dollar amount limitation, to construct dwellings containing three or four bedrooms without sacrifice of sound standards of construction, design, and livability, he may increase such dollar amount limitation by not exceeding $950 for each additional bedroom (as defined by the Commissioner) in excess of two contained in such dwelling if he finds that such dwelling meets sound standards of design and livability as a three-bedroom unit or a four-bedroom unit, as the case may be: Provided further, That with respect to mortgages insured under this paragraph the mortgagor shall be the owner and occupant of the property and shall have paid on account of the property at least 5 per centum of the appraised value in cash or its equivalent, or shall be the builder constructing the dwelling in which case the principal obligation shall not exceed $5,950 for a one-bedroom unit or a two-bedroom unit, $6,800 for a three-bedroom unit, or $7,650 for a unit having four or more bedrooms, except that the Commissioner may by regulation increase each of the maximum dollar amount limitations contained in this proviso by not to exceed $850 in any geographical area where he finds that cost levels so require, and shall not exceed 85 per centum of the appraised value of the property: And provided further, That the Commissioner may by regulation provide that the maximum dollar amount limitations in this paragraph (D) shall be fixed at lesser amounts where he finds, for any section or locality or for the country as a whole or at any time, that it is feasible, within such lesser dollar amount limitations, to construct dwellings for families of lower income without sacrifice of sound standards of construction, design, and livability.]

centum of $8,000 of the appraised value (as of the date the mortgage is accepted for insurance), and (ii) 75 per centum of such value in excess of $8,000: Provided, That the mortgagor shall have paid on account of the property at least 5 per centum (or such larger amount as the Commissioner may determine) of the Commissioner's estimate of the cost of acquisition in cash or its equivalent: And provided further, That such mortgage shall not involve a principal obligation exceeding the maximum amount prescribed by the provisions of this section 203 in effect prior to the effective date of the Housing Act of 1954, unless the President, pursuant to section 201 of the Housing Act of 1954 has authorized a greater maximum amount, in which event such principal obligation shall not exceed such greater maximum amount.

[(3) Have a maturity satisfactory to the Commissioner, but not to exceed twenty years from the date of the insurance of the mortgage: Provided, That a mortgage on property approved for insurance prior to the beginning of construction shall be eligible for insurance under this section if it has a maturity satisfactory to the Commissioner, but not to exceed twenty-five years from the date of the insurance of the mortgage, or not to exceed thirty years in the case of a mortgage insured under paragraph (2) (D) of this subsection.]

(3) Have a maturity satisfactory to the Commissioner, but not to exceed, in any event, thirty years from the date of the insurance of the mortgage: Provided, That the maturity of any such mortgage shall not exceed the maximum maturity prescribed therefor by the provisions of this section 203 in effect prior to the effective date of the Housing Act of 1954, unless the President, pursuant to section 201 of the Housing Act of 1954, has authorized a greater maturity, in which event the maturity of such mortgage shall not exceed such greater maturity.

* * * * *

[(5) Bear interest (exclusive of premium charges for insurance) at not to exceed 5 per centum per annum on the amount of the principal obligation outstanding at any time, or not to exceed 6 per centum per annum if the Commissioner finds that in certain areas or under special circumstances the mortgage market demands it, or not to exceed 4 per centum per annum in the case of a mortgage insured under paragraph (2) (D) of this subsection, or not to exceed such per centum per annum, not in excess of 5 per centum, as the Commissioner finds necessary to meet the mortgage market.]

(5) Bear interest (exclusive of premium charges for insurance, and service charges if any) at not to exceed 5 per centum per annum on the amount of the principal obligation outstanding at any time, or not to exceed such per centum per annum not in excess of 6 per centum as the Commissioner finds necessary to meet the mortgage market.

* * * * *

(c) The Commissioner is authorized to fix a premium charge for the insurance of mortgages under this title but in the case of any mortgage such charge shall not be less than an amount equivalent to one-half of 1 per centum per annum nor more than an amount equivalent to 1 per centum per annum of the amount of the principal obligation of the mortgage outstanding at any time, without taking into account delinquent payments or prepayments: *Provided, That a premium charge so fixed and computed shall also be applicable to each mortgage insured prior to the date of enactment of the National Housing Act Amendments of 1938 in lieu of any premium charge which would otherwise become due after such date with respect to such mortgage: Provided further, That in the case of any mortgage described in section 203 (b) (2) (B) and accepted for insurance after such date and prior to July 1, 1939, the premium charge shall be one-fourth of 1 per centum per annum on such outstanding principal obligation. Such premium charges shall be payable by the mortgagee, either in cash, or in debentures issued by the Commissioner under this title at par plus accrued interest, in such manner as may be prescribed by the Commissioner: [Provided] Provided, That debentures presented in payment of premium charges shall represent obligations of the particular insurance fund to which such premium charges are to be credited: Provided further, That the Commissioner may require the payment of one or more such premium charges at the time the mortgage is insured, at such discount rate as he may prescribe not in excess of the interest rate specified in the mortgage. * * **

(d) The Commissioner is authorized to insure, pursuant to the provisions of this section, any mortgage which (A) covers a farm upon which a farm house or other farm buildings are to be constructed or repaired, and (B) otherwise would be eligible for insurance under the provisions of paragraph (b) of this section: Provided, That the construction and repairs to be undertaken on such farm shall involve the expenditure for materials and labor of an amount not less than 15 per centum of the total principal obligation of said mortgage[.]; And provided further, That no mortgage shall be insured pursuant to this subsection after the effective date of the Housing Act of 1954, except pursuant to a commitment to insure issued on or before such date.

[(f) No mortgage which in whole or in part refinances a then existing mortgage shall be insured under this section unless the mortgagor files with the application his certificate to the Commissioner that prior to the making of the application the mortgagor applied to the holder of such existing mortgage for such refinancing and that, after reasonable opportunity such holder failed or refused to make a loan of a like amount and on as favorable terms as those of the loan secured by the mortgage offered for insurance after taking into account amortization provisions, commission, interest rate, mortgage insurance premium, and costs to the mortgagor for legal services, appraisal fees, title expenses, and similar charges.

[(g) Notwithstanding any other provisions of this section, a mortgage otherwise eligible for insurance hereunder and covering property upon which there is located a dwelling designed principally for a single-family residence and which is approved for mortgage insurance prior to the beginning of construction, may have such higher ratio of loan to value and such longer maturity than otherwise provided as the President may determine to be in the public interest, taking into account the general effect of such higher ratio or longer maturity, as the case may be, upon conditions in the building industry and upon the national economy: Provided, That the principal obligation of any such mortgage shall not exceed $12,000 and the maturity thereof shall not exceed thirty years: And provided further, That with respect to any such mortgage the mortgagor shall be the owner and occupant of the property at the time of insurance and shall have paid on account of the property at least 5 per centum of the Commissioner's estimate of the cost of acquisition in cash or its equivalent.]

(h) Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, the Commissioner is authorized to insure any mortgage which does not involve a principal obligation in excess of $7,000 or in excess of 100 per centum of the appraised value of a property upon which there is located a dwelling designed principally for a single-family residence, where the mortgagor is the owner and occupant and establishes (to the satisfaction of the Commissioner) that his home which he occupied as an owner or as a tenant was destroyed or damaged to such an extent that reconstruction is required as a result of a flood, fire, hurricane, earthquake, storm, or other catastrophe which the President, pursuant to section 2 (a) of the Act entitled "An Act to authorize Federal assistance to States and local governments in major disasters and for other purposes" (Public Law 875, Eighty-first Congress, approved September 30, 1950), as amended, has determined to be a major disaster.

SEC. 204. (a) In any case in which the mortgagee under a mortgage insured under section 203 or section 210 shall have foreclosed and taken possession of the mortgaged property in accordance with regulations of, and within a period to be determined by, the Commissioner, or shall, with the consent of the Commissioner, have otherwise acquired such property from the mortgagor after default, the mortgagee shall be entitled to receive the benefit of the insurance as hereinafter provided, upon (1) the prompt conveyance to the Commissioner of title to the property which meets the requirements of rules and regulations of the Commissioner in force at the time the mortgage was insured, and which is evidenced in the manner prescribed by such rules and regulations, and (2) the assignment to him of all claims of the mortgagee against the mortgagor or others, arising out of the mortgage transaction or foreclosure proceedings, except such claims as may have been released with the consent of the Commissioner. Upon such conveyance and assignment the obligation of the mortgagee to pay the premium charges for insurance shall cease and the Commissioner shall, subject to the cash adjustment hereinafter provided, issue to the mortgagee debentures having a total face value equal to the value of the mortgage and a certificate of claim, as hereinafter provided. For the purposes of this subsection, the value of the mortgage shall be determined, in accordance with rules and regulations prescribed by the Commissioner, by adding to the amount of the original principal obligation of the mortgage which was unpaid on the date of the institution of foreclosure proceedings, or on the date of the acquisition of the property after default other than by foreclosure, the amount of all payments which have been made by the mortgagee for taxes, ground rents, and water rates, which are liens prior to the mortgage, special assessments which are noted on the application for insurance or which become liens after the insurance of the mortgage, insurance on the mortgaged property, and [any mortgage insurance premiums paid after either of such dates] any mortgage insurance premiums paid after either of such dates, any tax imposed by the United States upon any deed or other instrument by which said property was acquired by the mortgagee and transferred or conveyed to the Commissioner, and by deducting from such total amount any amount received on account of the mortgage after either of such dates, and any amount received as rent or other income from the property less reasonable expenses incurred in handling the property, after either of such dates: Provided, That with respect to mortgages which are accepted for insurance under section 203 (b) (2) (B) of this Act, and which are foreclosed before there shall have been paid on account of the principal obligation of the mortgage a sum equal to 10 per centum of the appraised value of the property as of the date the mortgage was accepted for insurance, there may be included in the debentures issued by the Commissioner, on account of foreclosure costs actually paid by the mortgagee and approved by the Commissioner an amount not in excess of 2 per centum of the unpaid principal of the mortgage as of the date of the institution of foreclosure proceedings, but in no event in excess of $75: And provided further, That with respect to mortgages which are accepted for insurance under section 203 (b) (2) (D) or under the second proviso of section 207 (c) (2) of this Act, or under Section 213 of this Act, or with respect to any mortgage accepted for insurance under section 203 on or after the date of enactment of the Housing Act of 1954, there may be included in the debentures issued by the Commissioner on account of the cost of foreclosure (or of acquiring the property by other means) actually paid by the mortgagee and approved by the Commissioner an amount, not in excess of two-thirds of such cost or $75 whichever is the greater: And provided further, That with respect to mortgages to which the provisions of sections 302 and 306 of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act of 1940, as now or hereafter amended, apply and which are insured under section 203 of the National Housing Act, as now or hereafter amended, and subject to such regulations and conditions as the Commissioner may prescribe there shall be included in the debentures an amount which the Commissioner finds to be sufficient to compensate the mortgagee for any loss which it may have sustained on account of interest on debentures and the payment of insurance premiums by reason of its having postponed the institution of foreclosure proceedings or the acquisition of the property by other means during any part or all of the period of such military service and three months thereafter. [.]: And provided further, That notwithstanding any requirement contained in this Act that debentures may be issued only upon acquisition of title and possession by the mortgagee and its subsequent conveyance and transfer to the Commissioner, and for the purpose of avoiding unnecessary conveyance expense in connection with payment of insurance benefits under the provisions of this Act, the Commissioner is authorized, subject to such rules and regulations as he may prescribe, to permit the mortgagee to tender to the Commissioner a satisfactory conveyance of title and transfer of possession direct from the mortgagor or other appropriate grantor and to pay the insurance benefits to the mortgagee which it would otherwise be entitled to if such conveyance had been made to the mortgagee and from the mortgagee to the Commissioner. * * *

(d) The debentures issued under this section to any mortgagee with respect to mortgages insured under section 203 shall be executed in the name of the Mutual Mortgage Insurance Fund as obligor, shall be signed by the Commissioner by either his written or engraved signature, and shall be negotiable and the debentures issued under this section to any mortgagee with respect to mortgages insured under section 210 shall be executed in the name of the Housing Insurance Fund as obligor, shall be signed by the Commissioner by either his written or engraved signature, and shall be negotiable. All such debentures shall be dated as of the date foreclosure proceedings were instituted, or the property was otherwise acquired by the mortgagee after default, and shall bear interest from such date at a rate determined by the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, at the time the mortgage was offered for insurance, but not to exceed 3 per centum per annum, payable semiannually on the 1st day of January and the 1st day of July of each year, and shall mature [three years after the 1st day of July following the maturity date of the mortgage on the property in exchange for which the debentures were issued, except that debentures issued with respect to mortgages insured under section 213 shall mature twenty years after the date of such debentures] ten years after the date thereof.

(i) In the event that any mortgagee under a mortgage insured under section 203 forecloses on the mortgaged property but does not convey such property to the Commissioner in accordance with this section, and the Commissioner is given written notice thereof, or in the event that the mortgagor pays the obligation under the mortgage in full prior to the maturity thereof, and the mortgagee pays any adjusted premium charge required under the provisions of section 203 (c), and the Commissioner is given written notice by the mortgagee of the payment of such obligation, the obligation to pay any subsequent premium charge for insurance shall cease, and all rights of the mortgagee and the mortgagor under this section shall terminate as of the date of such notice.

[Sec. 205. (a) Mortgages accepted for insurance under section 203 shall be classified into groups in accordance with sound actuarial practice and risk characteristics. Premium charges, adjusted premium charges, and appraisal and other fees received on account of the insurance of any such mortgage, the receipts derived from the property covered by the mortgage and claims assigned to the Commissioner in connection therewith and all earnings on the assets of the group account shall be credited to the account of the group to which the mortgage is assigned. The principal of and interest paid and to be paid on debentures issued in exchange for property conveyed to the Commissioner under section 204 in connection with mortgages insured under section 203, payments made or to be made to the mortgagee and the mortgagor as provided in section 204, and expenses incurred in the handling of the property covered by the mortgage and in the collection of claims assigned to the Commissioner in connection therewith, shall be charged to the account of the group to which such mortgage is assigned.

[(b) The Commissioner shall also provide, in addition to the several group accounts, a general reinsurance account, the credit in which shall be available to cover charges against such group accounts where the amounts credited to such accounts are insufficient to cover such charges. [(c) The Commissioner shall, except as to group accounts terminated as of a date prior to July 1, 1953, transfer from each of the several group accounts to the general reinsurance account, beginning as of July 1, 1953, and as of the beginning of each semiannual period thereafter, an amount which, in the case of the initial transfer, shall equal 10 per centum of the total premium charges theretofore credited to such group accounts, and, in the case of subsequent transfers, shall equal the amount of any adjusted premium charges collected by the Commissioner in connection with the payment in full of insured mortgages prior to maturity on or after July 1, 1953, and an amount which shall in no event be less than 10 per centum nor more than 35 per centum of all other premium charges credited to such group accounts during the preceding semiannual period: Provided, That until such time as the Commissioner determines that the resources in the general reinsurance account are sufficient to cover all estimated future deficits among individual group accounts, 100 per centum of all other premium charges credited to such group accounts during each such semiannual period shall be transferred as provided in this subsection. The Commissioner shall terminate the insurance as to any group of mortgages (1) when he shall determine that the amounts to be distributed, as hereinafter set forth, to each mortgagee under an outstanding mortgage assigned to such group are sufficient to pay off the unpaid principal of each such mortgage, or (2) when all the outstanding mortgages in any group have been paid. In addition to the amounts transferred as herein provided, the Commissioner shall, upon such termination, charge to the group account the estimated losses arising from transactions relating to that group, and shall distribute to the mortgagees for the benefit and account of the mortgagors of the mortgages assigned to such group the balance remaining in such group account, less any amount by which such balance exceeds the aggregate scheduled annual premiums of such mortgagors to the year of termination of the insurance: Provided, That any undistributed balance in the group account at termination shall be transferred to the general reinsurance account. Any such distribution to mortgagees shall be made equitably and in accordance with sound actuarial and accounting practice: Provided, That in no event shall any distribution to a mortgagor or for the account of a mortgagor under any provision of this section exceed his aggregate scheduled annual premiums to the year of termination of the insurance.

[(d) No mortgagor or mortgagee of any mortgage insured under section 203 shall have any vested right in a credit balance in any such account, or be subject to any liability arising out of the mutuality of the Fund, and the determination of the Commissioner as to the amount to be paid by him to any mortgagee or mortgagor shall be final and conclusive.

[(e) In the event that any mortgagee under a mortgage insured under this title forecloses on the mortgaged property but does not convey such property to the Commissioner in accordance with section 204, and the Commissioner is given written notice thereof, or in the event that the mortgagor pays the obligation under the mortgage in full prior to the maturity thereof, and the mortgagee pays any adjusted premium charge required under the provisions of section 203 (c), and the Commissioner is given written notice by the mortgagee of the payment of such obligation, the obligation to pay any subsequent premium charge for insurance shall cease, and all rights of the mortgagee and the mortgagor under section 204 shall terminate as of the date of such notice. Upon such termination the mortgagor under a mortgage insured under section 203 shall be entitled to receive a share of the credit balance of the group account to which the mortgage has been assigned in such amount as the Commissioner shall determine to be equitable and not inconsistent with the solvency of the group account and of the Fund.]

Sec. 205. (a) The Commissioner shall establish as of July 1, 1954, in the Mutual Mortgage Insurance Fund a General Surplus Account and a Participating Reserve Account. All of the assets of the General Reinsurance Account shall be transferred to the General Surplus Account whereupon the General Reinsurance Account shall be abolished. There shall be transferred from the various group accounts to the Participating Reserve Account as of July 1, 1954, an amount equal to the aggregate amount which would have been distributed under the provisions of section 205 in effect on June 30, 1954, if all outstanding mortgages in such group accounts had been paid in full on said date. All of the remaining balances of said group accounts shall as of said date be transferred to the General Surplus Account whereupon all of said group accounts shall be abolished.

(b) The aggregate net income thereafter received or any net loss thereafter sustained by the Mutual Mortgage Insurance Fund in any semiannual period shall be credited or charged to the General Surplus Account and/or the Participating Reserve Account in such manner and amounts as the Commissioner may determine to be in accord with sound actuarial and accounting practice.

(c) Upon termination of the insurance obligation of the Mutual Mortgage Insurance Fund by payment of any mortgage insured thereunder, the Commissioner is authorized to distribute to the mortgagor a share of the Participating Reserve Account in such manner and amount as the Commissioner shall determine to be equitable and in accordance with sound actuarial and accounting practice: Provided, That, in no event, shall any such distributable share exceed the aggregate scheduled annual premiums of the mortgagor to the year of termination of the insurance.

(d) No mortgagor or mortgagee of any mortgage insured under section 203 shall have any vested right in a credit balance in any such account or be subject to any liability arising out of the mutuality of the Fund and the determination of the Commissioner as to the amount to be paid by him to any mortgagor shall be final and conclusive.

Such stock or interest shall be paid for out of the Section 220 Housing Insurance Fund and shall be redeemed by the mortgagor at par upon the termination of all obligations of the Commissioner under the insurance; or

(B) by Federal or State instrumentalities, municipal corporate instrumentalities, of one or more States, or limited dividend or redevelopment or housing corporations restricted by Federal or State laws or regulations of State banking or insurance departments as to rents, charges, capital structure, rate of return, or methods of operation.

(B) (i) not to exceed $5,000,000, or, if executed by a mortgagor coming within the provisions of paragraph (2) (B) of this subsection (d), not to exceed $50,000,000; and

(ii) not to exceed 90 per centum of the estimated value of the property or project when the proposed improvements are completed (the value of the property or project may include the land, the proposed physical improvements, utilities within the boundaries of the property or project, architect's fees, taxes, and interest during construction, and other miscellaneous charges incident to construction and approved by the Commissioner); and

(4) The mortgage shall provide for complete amortization by periodic payments within such terms as the Commissioner may prescribe, but as to mortgages coming within the provisions of paragraph (3) (A) of this subsection (d) not to exceed the maximum maturity prescribed by the provisions of section 203 in effect prior to the effective date of the Housing Act of 1954, unless the President, pursuant to section 201 of the Housing Act of 1954, has authorized a greater maturity, in which event the maturity of such mortgage shall not exceed such greater maturity: Provided, That such maturity shall not exceed, in any event, thirty years from the date of insurance of the mortgage. The mortgage shall bear interest (exclusive of premium charges for insurance and service charge, if any) at not to exceed 5 per centum per annum on the amount of the principal obligation outstanding at any time, or not to exceed such per centum per annum not in excess of 6 per centum as the Commissioner finds necessary to meet the mortgage market; contain such terms and provisions with respect to the application of the mortgagor's periodic payment to amortization of the principal of the mortgage, insurance, repairs, alterations, payment of taxes, default reserves, delinquency charges, foreclosure proceedings, anticipation of maturity, additional and secondary liens, and other matters as the Commissioner may in his discretion prescribe.

(e) The Commissioner may at any time, under such terms and conditions as he may prescribe, consent to the release of the mortgagor from his liability under the mortgage or the credit instrument secured thereby, or consent to the release of parts of the mortgaged property from the lien of the mortgage.

(f) The mortgagee shall be entitled to receive the benefits of the insurance as hereinafter provided—

(1) as to mortgages meeting the requirements of paragraph (3) (A) of subsection (d) of this section, as provided in section 204 (a) of this Act with respect to mortgages insured under section 203; and the provisions of subsections (b), (c), (d), (e), (f), (g), and (h) of section 204 of this Act shall be applicable to such mortgages insured under this section, except that all references therein to the Mutual Mortgage Insurance Fund or the Fund shall be construed to refer to the Section 220 Housing Insurance Fund and all references therein to section 203 shall be construed to refer to this section; or

(2) as to mortgages meeting the requirements of paragraph (3) (B) of subsection (d) of this section, as provided in section 207 (g) of this Act with respect to mortgages insured under said section 207, and the provisions of subsections (h), (i), (j), (k), and (l) of section 207 of this Act shall be applicable to such mortgages insured under this section, and all references therein to the Housing Insurance Fund or the Housing Fund shall be construed to refer to the Section 220 Housing Insurance Fund.

(g) There is hereby created a Section 220 Housing Insurance Fund which shall be used by the Commissioner as a revolving fund for carrying out the provisions of this section, and the Commissioner is hereby authorized to transfer to such Fund the sum of $1,000,000 from the War Housing Insurance Fund established pursuant to the provisions of section 602 of this Act. General expenses of operation of the Federal Housing Administration under this section may be charged to the Section 220 Housing Insurance Fund.

Moneys in the Section 220 Housing Insurance Fund not needed for the current operations of the Federal Housing Administration under this section shall be deposited with the Treasurer of the United States to the credit of such Fund, or invested in bonds or other obligations of, or in bonds or other obligations guaranteed as to principal and interest by, the United States. The Commissioner may, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, purchase in the open market debentures issued under the provisions of this section. Such purchases shall be made at a price which will provide an investment yield of not less than the yield obtainable from other investments authorized by this section. Debentures so purchased shall be canceled and not reissued.

Premium charges, adjusted premium charges, and appraisal and other fees received on account of the insurance of any mortgage accepted for insurance under this section, the receipts derived from the property covered by such mortgage and claims assigned to the Commissioner in connection therewith shall be credited to the Section 220 Housing Insurance Fund. The principal of, and interest paid and to be paid on debentures issued under this section, cash adjustments, and expenses incurred in the handling, management, renovation, and disposal of properties acquired under this section shall be charged to such Fund.

Sec. 221. (a) This section is designed to supplement systems of mortgage insurance under other provisions of the National Housing Act in order to assist in relocating families to be displaced as the result of governmental action in a community respecting which the Housing and Home Finance Administrator has made the certification to the Commissioner provided for by subsection 101 (c) of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended. Mortgage insurance under this section shall be available only in those localities or communities which shall have requested such mortgage insurance to be provided: Provided, That the Commissioner shall prescribe such procedures as in his judgment are necessary to secure to the families to be so displaced, referred to above, a preference or priority of opportunity to purchase or rent such dwelling units: And provided further, That the total number of dwelling units in properties covered by mortgages insured under this section in any such community shall not exceed the total number of such dwelling units which the Commissioner determines to be needed for the relocation of families to be so displaced and who would be eligible to obtain the benefits of the insurance authorized by this section.

(b) The Commissioner is authorized, upon application by the mortgagee, to insure under this section as hereinafter provided any mortgage which is eligible for insurance as provided herein and, upon such terms and conditions as the Commissioner may prescribe, to make commitments for the insurance of such mortgages prior to the date of their execution or disbursement thereon.

(c) As used in this section, the terms "mortgage", "first mortgage", "mortgagee", "mortgagor", "maturity date" and "State" shall have the same meaning as in section 201 of this Act.

(d) To be eligible for insurance under this section, a mortgage shall—

(1) have been made to and be held by a mortgagee approved by the Commissioner as responsible and able to service the mortgage properly;

(2) involve a principal obligation (including such initial service charges, appraisal, inspection, and other fees as the Commissioner shall approve) in an amount not to exceed $7,000, and not to exceed 100 per centum of the appraised value (as of the date the mortgage is accepted for insurance) of a property, upon which there is located a dwelling designed principally for a single-family residence: Provided, That the mortgagor shall be the owner and occupant of the property at the time of the insurance and shall have paid on account of the property at least $200 (which amount may include amounts to cover settlement costs and initial payments for taxes, hazard insurance, mortgage insurance premium, and other prepaid expenses): Provided further, That nothing contained herein shall preclude the Commissioner from issuing a commitment to insure and insuring a mortgage pursuant thereto where the mortgagor is not the owner and occupant and the property is to be built for sale and the insured mortgage financing is required to facilitate the construction of the dwelling and provide financing pending the subsequent sale thereof to a qualified owner-occupant, and in such instances the mortgage shall not exceed 85 per centum of the appraised value; or

(3) if executed by a mortgagor which is a nonprofit corporation or association or other acceptable nonprofit organization, regulated or supervised under Federal or State laws or by political subdivisions of State or agencies thereof, as to rents, charges, and method of operation, in such form and in such manner as, in the opinion of the Commissioner, will effectuate the purposes of this section, the mortgage may involve a principal obligation not in excess of $5,000,000; and not in excess of $7,000 per family unit for such part of such property or project as may be attributable to dwelling use, and not in excess of 100 per centum of the Commissioner's estimate of the value of the property or project when repaired and rehabilitated for use as rental accommodations for ten or more families eligible for occupancy as provided in this section; and

(4) provide for complete amortization by periodic payments within such terms as the Commissioner may prescribe, but not to exceed forty years from the date of insurance of the mortgage; bear interest (exclusive of premium charges for insurance and service charge, if any) at not to exceed 5 per centum per annum on the amount of the principal obligation outstanding at any time, or not to exceed such per centum per annum not in excess of 6 per centum as the Commissioner finds necessary to meet the mortgage market; and contain such terms and provisions with respect to the application of the mortgagor's periodic payment to amortization of the principal of the mortgage, insurance, repairs, alterations, payment of taxes, default reserves, delinquency charges, foreclosure proceedings, anticipation of maturity, additional and secondary liens, and other matters as the Commissioner may in his discretion prescribe.

(e) The Commissioner may at any time, under such terms and conditions as he may prescribe, consent to the release of the mortgagor from his liability under the mortgage or the credit instrument secured thereby, or consent to the release of parts of the mortgaged property from the lien of the mortgage.

(f) The property or project shall comply with such standards and conditions as the Commissioner may prescribe to establish the acceptability of such property for mortgage insurance.

(g) The mortgagee shall be entitled to receive the benefits of the insurance as hereinafter provided—

(1) as to mortgages meeting the requirements of paragraph (2) of subsection (d) of this section, as provided in section 204 (a) of this Act with respect to mortgages insured under section 203; and the provisions of subsections (b), (c), (d), (e), (f), (g), and (h) of section 204 of this Act shall be applicable to such mortgages insured under this section, except that all references therein to the Mutual Mortgage Insurance Fund or the Fund shall be construed to refer to the Section 221 Housing Insurance Fund and all references therein to section 203 shall be construed to refer to this section; or

(2) as to mortgages meeting the requirements of paragraph (3) of subsection (d) of this section, as provided in section 207 (g) of this Act with respect to mortgages insured under said section 207, and the provisions of subsections (h), (i), (j), (k), and (l) of section 207 of this Act shall be applicable to such mortgages insured under this section, and all references therein to the Housing Insurance Fund or the Housing Fund shall be construed to refer to the Section 221, Housing Insurance Fund; or

(3) in the event any mortgage insured under this section is not in default at the expiration of twenty years from the date the mortgage was endorsed for insurance, the mortgagee shall, within a period thereafter to be determined by the Commissioner, have the option to assign, transfer, and deliver to the Commissioner the original credit instrument and the mortgage securing the same and receive the benefits of the insurance as hereinafter provided in this paragraph, upon compliance with such requirements and conditions as to the validity of the mortgage as a first lien and such other matters as may be prescribed by the Commissioner at the time the loan is endorsed for insurance. Upon such assignment, transfer, and delivery the obligation of the mortgagee to pay the premium charges for insurance shall cease, and the Commissioner shall, subject to the cash adjustment provided herein, issue to the mortgagee debentures having a total face value equal to the amount of the original principal obligation of the mortgage which was unpaid on the date of the assignment, plus accrued interest to such date. Debentures issued pursuant to this paragraph (3) shall be issued in the same manner and subject to the same terms and conditions as debentures issued under paragraph (1) of this subsection, except that the debentures issued pursuant to this paragraph (3) shall be dated as of the date the mortgage is assigned to the Commissioner, and shall bear interest from such date at the going Federal rate determined at the time of issuance. The term "going Federal rate" as used herein means the annual rate of interest which the Secretary of the Treasury shall specify as applicable to the six-month period (consisting of January through June or July through December) which includes the issuance date of such debentures, which applicable rate for each such six-month period shall be determined by the Secretary of the Treasury by estimating the average yield to maturity, on the basis of daily closing market bid quotations or prices during the month of May or the month of November, as the case may be, next preceding such six-month period, on all outstanding marketable obligations of the United States having a maturity date of eight to twelve years from the first day of such month of May or November, and by adjusting such estimated average annual yield to the nearest one-eighth of 1 per centum. The Commissioner shall have the same authority with respect to mortgages assigned to him under this paragraph as contained in section 207 (k) and section 207 (l) as to mortgages insured by the Commissioner and assigned to him under section 207 of this Act.

(h) There is hereby created a Section 221 Housing Insurance Fund which shall be used by the Commissioner as a revolving fund for carrying out the provisions of this section, and the Commissioner is hereby authorized to transfer to such Fund the sum of $1,000,000 from the War Housing Insurance Fund established pursuant to the provisions of section 602 of this Act. General expenses of operation of the Federal Housing Administration under this section may be charged to the Section 221 Housing Insurance Fund.

Monies in the Section 221 Housing Insurance Fund not needed for the current operations of the Federal Housing Administration under this section shall be deposited with the Treasurer of the United States to the credit of such fund, or invested in bonds or other obligations of, or in bonds or other obligations guaranteed as to principal and interest by, the United States. The Commissioner may, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, purchase in the open market debentures issued under the provisions of this section. Such purchases shall be made at a price which will provide an investment yield of not less than the yield obtainable from other investments authorized by this section. Debentures so purchased shall be canceled and not reissued.

Premium charges, adjusted premium charges, and appraisal and other fees received on account of the insurance of any mortgage accepted for insurance under this section, the receipts derived from the property covered by such mortgage and claims assigned to the Commissioner in connection therewith shall be credited to the Section 221 Housing Insurance Fund. The principal of, and interest paid and to be paid on debentures issued under this section, cash adjustments, and expenses incurred in the handling, management, renovation, and disposal of properties acquired under this section shall be charged to such Fund.

MISCELLANEOUS HOUSING INSURANCE

Sec. 222. (a) Notwithstanding any of the provisions of this title, and without regard to limitations upon eligibility contained in section 203 or section 207, the Commissioner is authorized, upon application by the mortgagee, to insure or make commitments to insure under section 203 or section 207 of this title any mortgage—of any such refinancing mortgage shall not exceed the original principal amount or the unexpired term of such existing mortgage and shall bear interest at a rate not in excess of the maximum rate applicable to loans insured under section 203 or section 207, as the case may be, except that in any case involving the refinancing of a loan insured under section 608 or 908 in which the Commissioner determines that the insurance of a mortgage for an additional term will inure to the benefit of the applicable insurance fund, taking into consideration the outstanding insurance liability under the existing insured mortgage, such refinancing mortgage may have a term not more than twelve years in excess of the unexpired term of such existing insured mortgage: Provided, That a mortgage of the character described in paragraphs (1), (2), (3), (4), or (5) shall have a maturity satisfactory to the Commissioner, but not to exceed the maximum term applicable to loans insured under section 203 or section 207, as the case may be, and shall involve a principal obligation (including such initial service charges, appraisals, inspection, and other fees as the Commissioner shall approve) in an amount not exceeding 90 per centum of the appraised value of the mortgaged property, as determined by the Commissioner, and bear interest (exclusive of premium charges and service charges, if any) at not to exceed the maximum rate applicable to loans insured under section 203 or section 207, as the case may be.

PURPOSES

Sec. 301. The Congress hereby declares that the purposes of this title are to establish in the Federal Government a secondary market facility for home mortgages, to provide that the operations of such facility shall be financed by private capital to the maximum extent feasible, and to authorize such facility to—

(a) provide supplementary assistance to the secondary market for home mortgages by providing a degree of liquidity for mortgage investments, thereby improving the distribution of investment capital available for home mortgage financing;

(b) provide special assistance (when, and to the extent that, the President has determined that it is in the public interest) for the financing of (1) selected types of home mortgages (pending the establishment of their marketability) originated under special housing programs designed to provide housing of acceptable standards at full economic costs for segments of the national population which are unable to obtain adequate housing under established home financing programs, and (2) home mortgages generally as a means of retarding or stopping a decline in mortgage lending and home building activities which threatens materially the stability of a high level national economy; and

(c) manage and liquidate the existing mortgage portfolio of the Federal National Mortgage Association in an orderly manner, with a minimum of adverse effect upon the home mortgage market and minimum loss to the Federal Government.

CREATION OF ASSOCIATION

Sec. 302. (a) There is hereby created a body corporate to be known as the "Federal National Mortgage Association" (hereinafter referred to as the "Association"), which shall be a constituent agency of the Housing and Home Finance Agency. The Association shall have succession until dissolved by Act of Congress. It shall maintain its principal office in the District of Columbia and shall be deemed, for purposes of venue in civil actions, to be a resident thereof. Agencies or offices may be established by the Association in such other place or places as it may deem necessary or appropriate in the conduct of its business.

(b) For the purposes set forth in section 301 and subject to the limitations and restrictions of this title, the Association is authorized to make commitments to purchase and to purchase, service, or sell, any residential or home mortgages (or participations therein) which are insured under this Act, as amended, or which are insured or guaranteed under the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944, as amended: Provided, That (1) no mortgage may be purchased at a price exceeding 100 per centum of the unpaid principal amount thereof at the time of purchase, with adjustments for interest and any comparable items; and (2) the Association may not purchase any mortgage if (i) it is offered by, or covers property held by, a Federal, State, territorial, or municipal instrumentality or (ii) the original principal obligation thereof exceeds or exceeded $12,500 for each family residence or dwelling unit covered by the mortgage.

CAPITALIZATION

Sec. 303. (a) The Association shall have nonvoting capital stock, to which the Secretary of the Treasury initially shall subscribe as provided in subsections (d) and (e) of this section. The stock of the Association shall have a par value of $100 per share, and shall not be transferable except on the books of the Association. At the option of the Association such stock shall be retireable at par value at any time, except that retirements of stock (other than stock held by the Secretary of the Treasury) shall not be made if, as a consequence thereof, the amount remaining outstanding would be less than $100,000,000. With respect to such stock held by him, the Secretary of the Treasury shall be entitled to cumulative dividends for each fiscal year until such stock is retired, at rates determined by him at the beginning of each such fiscal year, taking into consideration the current average interest rate on outstanding marketable obligations of the United States as of the last day of the preceding fiscal year. The Secretary of the Treasury shall permit the retirement of the stock held by him in the manner provided in this section. Funds of the capital surplus and the general surplus accounts of the Association shall be available to retire the capital stock held by the Secretary of the Treasury as rapidly as the Association shall deem feasible.

(b) The Association shall accumulate funds for its capital surplus account from private sources by requiring each mortgage seller to make payments of non-refundable capital contributions equal to not less than 3 per centum of the unpaid principal amount of mortgages therein involved in purchases or contracts for purchases between such seller and the Association, or such greater percentage as may from time to time be determined by the Association. In addition, the Association may impose charges or fees for its services with the objective that all costs and expenses of its operations should be within its income derived from such operations and that such operations should be fully self-supporting. All earnings from the operations of the Association shall annually be transferred to its general surplus account. At any time, funds of the general surplus account may, in the discretion of the board of directors, be transferred to reserves. All dividends shall be charged against the general surplus account. This subsection (b) shall not apply to the special assistance functions of the Association under section 305 of this title or to the management and liquidating functions of the Association under section 306 of this title.

(c) Until such time as all of the stock held by the Secretary of the Treasury has been retired, the Association shall issue, from time to time, to each mortgage seller its convertible certificates (only in denominations of $100 or multiples thereof) evidencing any capital contributions made by such seller pursuant to subsection (b) of this section, which certificates shall not be transferable except on the books of the Association. Subject to such terms and conditions as may be prescribed by the board of directors, such certificates shall be convertible into capital stock of the Association having an equal par value, but no such conversion shall be permitted or made until such time as all of the outstanding capital stock of the Association held by the Secretary of the Treasury has been retired and the Secretary of the Treasury does not hold any of the obligations of the Association purchased under section 304 (c) of this title. After all of the stock held by the Secretary of the Treasury has been retired, the Association may effect the direct issuance of stock in lieu of and in the same manner as is provided in this subsection for the issuance of convertible certificates. Such dividends as may be declared by the board of directors in its discretion shall be paid by the Association to its stockholders, but in any one fiscal year the general surplus account of the Association shall not be reduced through the payment of dividends (other than to the Secretary of the Treasury) which exceed in the aggregate 5 per centum of the par value of the outstanding stock of the Association.

(d) Within sixty days following the effective date of the Housing Act of 1954, as of the day following a cutoff date to be determined by the Association, the Association is authorized and directed to issue and deliver to the Secretary of the Treasury, and the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to accept capital stock of the Association having an aggregate par value equal to the sum of (1) the amount of $21,000,000 (being the amount of the original subscription for capital stock of $20,000,000 and paid-in surplus of $1,000,000 of the Association) and (2) an amount equal to the Association's surplus, surplus reserves, and undistributed earnings, computed as of the close of the cutoff date.

(e) The capital stock of the Association delivered to the Secretary of the Treasury pursuant to subsection (d) of this section shall be in exchange for (1) the note or notes evidencing the aforesaid original $21,000,000 (upon which the accrued interest shall have been paid through the cutoff date referred to in subsection (d) of this section), and (2) the release to the Association of any and all rights or claims which the United States might otherwise have or claim in and to the Association's capital, surplus, surplus reserves, and undistributed earnings, computed as of the close of the aforesaid cutoff date.

(f) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, any institution, including a national bank or State member bank of the Federal Reserve System, trust company, or other banking organization, organized under any law of the United States, including the laws relating to the District of Columbia, shall be authorized to make payments to the Association of the nonrefundable capital contributions referred to in subsection (b) of this section, to receive stock or convertible certificates of the Association evidencing such capital contributions, and to hold or dispose of such stock or certificates, subject to the provisions of this title.

(g) As promptly as practicable after all of the capital stock of the Association held by the Secretary of the Treasury has been retired, the Housing and Home Finance Administrator shall transmit to the President for submission to the Congress recommendations for such legislation as may be necessary or desirable to make appropriate provisions to transfer to the owners of the outstanding capital stock of the Association the assets and liabilities of the Association in connection with, and the control and management of, the secondary market operations of the Association under section 304 of this title in order that such operations may thereafter be carried out by a privately owned and privately financed corporation.

SECONDARY MARKET OPERATIONS

Sec. 304. (a) To carry out the purposes set forth in paragraph (a) of section 301, the operations of the Association under this section shall be confined, so far as practicable, to mortgages which are deemed by the Association to be of such quality, type, and class as to meet, generally, the purchase standards imposed by private institutional mortgage investors. In the interest of assuring sound operations, the prices to be paid by the Association for mortgages purchased in its secondary market operations under this section, should be established, from time to time, at or below the market price for the particular class of mortgages involved, as determined by the Association. The volume of the Association's purchases and sales, and the establishment of the purchase prices, sale prices, and charges or fees, in its secondary market operations under this section, should be determined by the Association from time to time, and such determinations should be consistent with the objectives that such purchases and sales should be effected only at such prices and on such terms as will reasonably prevent excessive use of the Association's facilities, and that the operations of the Association under this section should be within its income derived from such operations and that such operations should be fully self-supporting.

(b) For the purposes of this section, the Association is authorized to issue, upon the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, and have outstanding at any one time obligations in an aggregate amount sufficient to enable it to carry out its functions under this section, such obligations to have such maturities and to bear such rate or rates of interest as may be determined by the Association with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, and to be redeemable at the option of the Association before maturity in such manner as may be stipulated in such obligations; but the aggregate amount of obligations of the Association under this subsection outstanding at any one time shall not exceed ten times the sum of its capital, capital surplus, general surplus, reserves, and undistributed earnings, and in no event shall any such obligations be issued if, at the time of such proposed issuance, and as a consequence thereof, the resulting aggregate amount of its outstanding obligations under this subsection would exceed the amount of the Association's ownership pursuant to this section, free from any liens or encumbrances, of cash, mortgages, and bonds or other obligations of, or bonds or other obligations guaranteed as to principal and interest by, the United States. The Association shall insert appropriate language in all of its obligations issued under this subsection clearly indicating that such obligations, together with the interest thereon, are not guaranteed by the United States and do not constitute a debt or obligation of the United States or of any agency or instrumentality thereof other than the Association. The Association is authorized to purchase in the open market any of its obligations outstanding under this subsection at any time and at any price.

(c) The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized in his discretion to purchase any obligations issued pursuant to subsection (b) of this section, as now or hereafter in force, and for such purpose the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to use as a public debt transaction the proceeds of the sale of any securities hereafter issued under the Second Liberty Bond Act, as now or hereafter in force, and the purposes for which securities may be issued under the Second Liberty Bond Act, as now or hereafter in force, are extended to include such purchases. The Secretary of the Treasury shall not at any time purchase any obligations under this subsection if (1) all of the capital stock of the Association held by the Secretary of the Treasury has been retired, or (2) such purchase would increase the aggregate principal amount of his then outstanding holdings of such obligations under this subsection to an amount greater than $500,000,000 plus an amount equal to the total of such reductions in the maximum dollar amount prescribed by section 306 (c) as have theretofore been effected pursuant to that section: Provided, That such aggregate principal amount under this subsection (c) shall in no event exceed $1,000,000,000. Each purchase of obligations by the Secretary of the Treasury under this subsection shall be upon such terms and conditions as to yield a return at a rate determined by the Secretary of the Treasury, taking into consideration the current average rate on outstanding marketable obligations of the United States as of the last day of the month preceding the making of such purchase. The Secretary of the Treasury may, at any time, sell, upon such terms and conditions and at such price or prices as he shall determine, any of the obligations acquired by him under this subsection. All redemptions, purchases, and sales by the Secretary of the Treasury of such obligations under this subsection shall be treated as public debt transactions of the United States.

(d) The Association may not purchase participations or make any advance contracts or commitments to purchase mortgages for its operations under this section, except that the Association may, in the discretion of its board of directors, issue a purchase contract (which shall not be assignable or transferable except with the consent of the Association) in an amount not exceeding the amount of the sale of mortgages purchased from the Association, entitling the holder thereof to sell to the Association mortgages in the amount of the contract, upon such terms and conditions as the Association may prescribe.

Sec. 305. (a) To carry out the purposes set forth in paragraph (b) of section 301, the President, after taking into account (1) the conditions in the building industry and the national economy and (2) conditions affecting the home mortgage investment market, generally, or affecting various types or classifications of home mortgages, or both, and after determining that such action is in the public interest, may under this section authorize the Association, for such period of time and to such extent as he shall prescribe, to exercise its powers to make commitments to purchase and to purchase such types, classes, or categories of home mortgages (including participations therein) as he shall determine.

(b) The operations of the Association under this section shall be confined, so far as practicable, to mortgages (including participations) which are deemed by the Association to be of such quality as to meet, substantially and generally, the purchase standards imposed by private institutional mortgage investors but which, at the time of submission of the mortgages to the Association for purchase, are not necessarily readily acceptable to such investors. Subject to the provisions of this section, the prices to be paid by the Association for mortgages purchased in its operations under this section shall be established from time to time by the Association. The Association shall impose charges or fees for its services under this section with the objective that all costs and expenses of its operations under this section should be within its income derived from such operations and that such operations should be fully self-supporting.

(c) The total amount of purchases and commitments authorized by the President pursuant to subsection (a) of this section shall not exceed $200,000,000 outstanding at any one time: Provided, That, notwithstanding such limitation, the President pursuant to subsection (a) of this section may also authorize the Association to exercise its powers to enter into commitments to purchase immediate participations and to make related deferred participation agreements as hereinafter in this subsection provided, but only to the extent that the total amount of such immediate participation commitments and purchases pursuant thereto (but not including the amount of any related deferred participation agreements or purchases pursuant thereto) shall not in any event exceed $100,000,000 outstanding at any one time, and any such deferred participation agreements shall be made by the Association only on the basis of a commitment by it to purchase an immediate participation of a 20 per centum undivided interest in each mortgage and a related deferred participation agreement by the Association to purchase the remaining outstanding interest in such mortgage conditional upon the occurrence of such a default as gives rise to the right to foreclose.

(d) The Association may issue to the Secretary of the Treasury its obligations in an amount outstanding at any one time sufficient to enable the Association to carry out its functions under this section, such obligations to mature not more than five years from their respective dates of issue, to be redeemable at the option of the Association before maturity in such manner as may be stipulated in such obligations. Each such obligation shall bear interest at a rate determined by the Secretary of the Treasury, taking into consideration the current average rate on outstanding marketable obligations of the United States as of the last day of the month preceding the issuance of the obligation of the Association. The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to purchase any obligations of the Association to be issued under this section, and for such purpose the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to use as a public debt transaction the proceeds from the sale of any securities issued under the Second Liberty Bond Act, as now or hereafter in force, and the purposes for which securities may be issued under the Second Liberty Bond Act, as now or hereafter in force, are extended to include any purchases of the Association's obligations hereunder.

MANAGEMENT AND LIQUIDATING FUNCTIONS

Sec. 306. (a) To carry out the purposes set forth in paragraph (c) of section 301, the Association is authorized and directed, as of the close of the cutoff date determined by the Association pursuant to section 303 (d) of this title, to establish separate accountability for all of its assets and liabilities (exclusive of capital, surplus, surplus reserves, and undistributed earnings to be evidenced by capital stock as provided in section 303 (d) hereof, but inclusive of all rights and obligations under any outstanding contracts), and to maintain such separate accountability for the management and orderly liquidation of such assets and liabilities as provided in this section.

(b) For the purposes of this section and to assure that, to the maximum extent, and as rapidly as possible, private financing will be substituted for Treasury borrowings otherwise required to carry mortgages held under the aforesaid separate accountability, the Association is authorized to issue, upon the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, and have outstanding at any one time obligations in an aggregate amount sufficient to enable it to carry out its functions under this section, such obligations to have such maturities and to bear such rate or rates of interest as may be determined by the Association with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, and to be redeemable at the option of the Association before maturity in such manner as may be stipulated in such obligations; but in no event shall any such obligations be issued if, at the time of such proposed issuance, and as a consequence thereof, the resulting aggregate amount of its outstanding obligations under this subsection would exceed the amount of the Association's ownership under the aforesaid separate accountability, free from any liens or encumbrances, of cash, mortgages, and bonds or other obligations of, or bonds or other obligations guaranteed as to principal and interest by, the United States. The proceeds of any private financing effected under this subsection shall be paid to the Secretary of the Treasury in reduction of the indebtedness of the Association to the Secretary of the Treasury under the aforesaid separate accountability. The Association shall insert appropriate language in all of its obligations issued under this subsection clearly indicating that such obligations, together with the interest thereon, are not guaranteed by the United States and do not constitute a debt or obligation of the United States or of any agency or instrumentality thereof other than the Association. The Association is authorized to purchase in the open market any of its obligations outstanding under this subsection at any time and at any price.

(c) No mortgage shall be purchased by the Association in its operations under this section except pursuant to and in accordance with the terms of a contract or commitment to purchase the same made prior to the cutoff date provided for in section 303 (d), which contract or commitment became a part of the aforesaid separate accountability, and the total amount of mortgages and commitments held by the Association under this section shall not, in any event, exceed $3,350,000,000: Provided, That such maximum amount shall be progressively reduced by the amount of cash realizations on account of principal of mortgages held under the aforesaid separate accountability and by cancellation of any commitments to purchase mortgages thereunder, as reflected by the books of the Association, with the objective that the entire aforesaid maximum amount shall be eliminated with the orderly liquidation of all mortgages held under the aforesaid separate accountability: And provided further, That nothing in this subsection shall preclude the Association from granting such usual and customary increases in the amounts of outstanding commitments (resulting from increased costs or otherwise) as have theretofore been covered by like increases in commitments granted by the agencies of the Federal Government insuring or guaranteeing the mortgages. There shall be excluded from the total amounts set forth in this subsection and subsection (e) of this section the amounts of any mortgages otherwise transferred by law to the Association and held under the aforesaid separate accountability.

(d) The Association may issue to the Secretary of the Treasury its obligations in an amount outstanding at any one time sufficient to enable the Association to carry out its functions under this section, such obligations to mature not more than five years from their respective dates of issue, to be redeemable at the option of the Association before maturity in such manner as may be stipulated in such obligations. Each such obligation shall bear interest at a rate determined by the Secretary of the Treasury, taking into consideration the current average rate on outstanding marketable obligations of the United States as of the last day of the month preceding the issuance of the obligation of the Association. The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to purchase any obligations of the Association to be issued under this section, and for such purpose the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to use as a public debt transaction the proceeds from the sale of any securities issued under the Second Liberty Bond Act, as now or hereafter in force, and the purposes for which securities may be issued under the Second Liberty Bond Act, as now or hereafter in force, are extended to include any purchases of the Association's obligations hereunder.

(e) Of the $3,650,000,000 total amount of investments, loans, purchases, and commitments heretofore authorized to be outstanding at any one time under this title III prior to the enactment of the Housing Act of 1954, a total of not to exceed $300,000,000 shall be applicable as provided in section 305 of this title, and a total of not to exceed $3,350,000,000 shall be applicable as provided in subsection (c) of this section.

SEPARATE ACCOUNTABILITY

Sec. 307. The Association shall establish and at all times maintain separate accountability for (a) its secondary market operations authorized by section 304 hereof, (b) its special assistance functions authorized by section 305 hereof, and (c) its management and liquidating functions authorized by section 306 hereof.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Sec. 308. (a) The Association shall have a Board of Directors consisting of five persons, one of whom shall be the Housing and Home Finance Administrator as Chairman of the Board, and four of whom shall be appointed by said Administrator from among the officers or employees of the Association, of the immediate office of said Administrator, or (with the consent of the head of such department or agency) of any other department or agency of the Federal Government. The board of directors shall meet at the call of its chairman, who shall require it to meet not less often than once each month. Within the limitations of law, the board shall determine the general policies which shall govern the operations of the Association. The chairman of the board shall select and effect the appointment of qualified persons to fill the offices of president and vice president, and such other offices as may be provided for in the bylaws, with such executive functions, powers, and duties as may be prescribed by the bylaws or by the board of directors, and such persons shall be the executive officers of the Association and shall discharge all such executive functions, powers, and duties. The basic rate of compensation of the position of president of the Association shall be the same as the basic rate of compensation established for the heads of the constituent agencies of the Housing and Home Finance Agency. The members of the board, as such, shall not receive compensation for their services.

GENERAL POWERS

Sec. 309. (a) The Association shall have power to adopt, alter, and use a corporate seal, which shall be judicially noticed; by its board of directors, to adopt, amend, and repeal bylaws governing the performance of the powers and duties granted to or imposed upon it by law; to enter into and perform contracts, leases, cooperative agreements, or other transactions, on such terms as it may deem appropriate, with any agency or instrumentality of the United States, or with any State, territory, or possession, or with any political subdivision thereof, or with any person, firm, association, or corporation; to execute, in accordance with its bylaws, all instruments necessary or appropriate in the exercise of any of its powers; in its corporate name, to sue and to be sued, and to complain and to defend, in any court of competent jurisdiction, State or Federal, but no attachment, injunction, or other similar process, mesne or final, shall be issued against the property of the Association or against the Association with respect to its property; to conduct its business in any State of the United States, including the District of Columbia and all territories and possessions of the United States; to lease, purchase, or acquire any property, real, personal, or mixed, or any interest therein, to hold, rent, maintain, modernize, renovate, improve, use, and operate such property, and to sell, for cash or credit, lease, or otherwise dispose of the same, at such time and in such manner as and to the extent that the Association may deem necessary or appropriate; to prescribe, repeal, and amend or modify, rules, regulations, or requirements governing the manner in which its general business may be conducted; to accept gifts or donations of services, or of property, real, personal, or mixed, tangible, or intangible, in aid of any of the purposes of the Association; and to do all things as are necessary or incidental to the proper management of its affairs and the proper conduct of its business.

(b) Except as may be otherwise provided in this title, in the Government Corporation Control Act, or in other laws specifically applicable to Government corporations, the Association shall determine the necessity for and the character and amount of its obligations and expenditures and the manner in which they shall be incurred, allowed, paid, and accounted for, and such determinations shall be final and conclusive upon all officers of the Government.

(c) The Association, including its franchise, capital, reserves, surplus, mortgages, and income shall be exempt from all taxation now or hereafter imposed by the United States, by any territory, dependency, or possession thereof, or by any State, county, municipality, or local taxing authority, except that (1) any real property of the Association shall be subject to State, territorial, county, municipal, or local taxation to the same extent according to its value as other real property is taxed, and (2) the Association shall, with respect to its secondary market operations under section 304 after the cutoff date referred to in section 303 (d) of this title, pay annually to the Secretary of the Treasury, for covering into miscellaneous receipts, an amount equivalent to the amount of Federal income taxes for which it would be subject if it were not exempt from such taxes with respect to such secondary market operations.

(d) The Chairman of the Board shall have power to select and appoint or employ such officers, attorneys, employees, and agents, to vest them with such powers and duties, and to fix and to cause the Association to pay such compensation to them for their services, as he may determine, subject to the civil service and classification laws. Bonds may be required for the faithful performance of their duties, and the Association may pay the premiums therefor. With the consent of any Government corporation or Federal Reserve bank, or of any board, commission, independent establishment, or executive department of the Government, the Association may avail itself on a reimbursable basis of the use of information, services, facilities, officers, and employees thereof, including any field service thereof, in carrying out the provisions of this title.

(e) No individual, association, partnership, or corporation, except the body corporate created by section 302 of this title, shall hereafter use the words "Federal National Mortgage Association" or any combination of such words, as the name or a part thereof under which he or it shall do business. Every individual, partnership, association, or corporation violating this prohibition shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be punished by a fine of not exceeding $100 or imprisonment not exceeding thirty days, or both, for each day during which such violation is committed or repeated.

(f) In order that the Association may be supplied with such forms of obligations or certificates as it may need for issuance under this title, the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized, upon request of the Association, to prepare such forms as shall be suitable and approved by the Association, to be held in the Treasury subject to delivery, upon order of the Association. The engraved plates, dies, bed pieces, and other material executed in connection therewith shall remain in the custody of the Secretary of the Treasury. The Association shall reimburse the Secretary of the Treasury for any expenses incurred in the preparation, custody, and delivery of such forms.

(g) The Federal Reserve banks are authorized and directed to act as depositaries, custodians, and fiscal agents for the Association in the general performance of its powers, and the Association shall reimburse such Federal Reserve banks for such services in such manner as may be agreed upon.

TITLE VI—WAR HOUSING INSURANCE

* * * * *

Sec. 612. Notwithstanding any other provision of this title, no mortgage or loan shall be insured under any section of this title after the effective date of the Housing Act of 1954 except pursuant to a commitment to insure issued on or before such date.

[TITLE VII—INSURANCE FOR INVESTMENTS IN RENTAL HOUSING FOR FAMILIES OF MODERATE INCOME

[AUTHORITY TO INSURE

[SEC. 701. The purpose of this title is to supplement the existing systems of mortgage insurance for rental housing under this Act by a special system of insurance designed to encourage equity investment in rental housing at rents within the capacity of families of moderate income. To effectuate this purpose, the Commissioner is authorized, upon application by the investor, to insure as hereinafter provided, and, prior to the execution of insurance contracts and upon such terms as the Commissioner shall prescribe, to make commitments to insure, the minimum annual amortization charge and an annual return on the outstanding investment of such investor in any project which is eligible for insurance as hereinafter provided in an amount (herein called the "insured annual return") equal to such rate of return, not exceeding 2¼ per centum per annum, on such outstanding investment as shall, after consultation with the Secretary of the Treasury, be fixed in the insurance contract or in the commitment to insure: Provided, That any insurance contract made pursuant to this title shall expire as of the first day of the operating year for which the outstanding investment amounts to not more than 10 per centum of the established investment: And provided further, That the aggregate amount of contingent liabilities outstanding at any one time under insurance contracts and commitments to insure made pursuant to this title shall not exceed $1,000,000,000.

[ELIGIBILITY

[SEC. 702. (a) To be eligible for insurance under this title, a project shall meet the following conditions:

[(1) The Commissioner shall be satisfied that there is, in the locality or metropolitan area of such project, a need for new rental dwellings at rents comparable to the rents proposed to be charged for the dwellings in such project.

[(2) Such projects shall be economically sound, and the dwellings in such project shall be acceptable to the Commissioner as to quality, design, size, and type.

[(b) Any insurance contract executed by the Commissioner under this title shall be conclusive evidence of the eligibility of the project and the investor for such insurance, and the validity of any insurance contract so executed shall be incontestable in the hands of an investor from the date of the execution of such contract, except for fraud or misrepresentation on the part of such investor.

[(c) After completion of the project the investor must establish in a manner satisfactory to the Commissioner that the project is free and clear of liens and that there are no other outstanding unpaid obligations contracted in connection with the construction of the project, except taxes and such other liens and obligations as may be approved or prescribed by the Commissioner. Debentures issued by the investor which are payable out of net income from the project and from the benefits of the insurance contract shall not be construed as "unpaid obligations" as such term is used in this subsection.

【PREMIUMS AND FEES

【SEC. 703. (a) For insurance granted pursuant to this title the Commissioner shall fix and collect a premium charge in an amount not exceeding one-half of 1 per centum of the outstanding investment for the operating year for which such premium charge is payable without taking into account the excess earnings, if any, applied, in addition to the minimum annual amortization charge, to amortization of the outstanding investment. Such premium charge shall be payable annually in advance by the investor, either in cash or in debentures issued by the Commissioner under this title at par plus accrued interest: Provided, That if in any operating year the gross income shall be less than the operating expenses, the premium charge payable during such operating year shall be waived, but only to the extent of the amount of the difference between such expenses and such income and subject to subsequent payment out of any excess earnings as herein-after provided.

【(b) With respect to any project offered for insurance under this title, the Commissioner is authorized to charge and collect reasonable fees for examination, and for inspection during the construction of the project: Provided, That such fees shall not aggregate more than one-half of 1 per centum of the estimated investment.

【RENTS

【SEC. 704. The Commissioner shall require that the rents for the dwellings in any project insured under this title shall be established in accordance with a rent schedule approved by the Commissioner, and that the investor shall not charge or collect rents for any dwellings in the project in excess of the appropriate rents therefor as shown in the latest rent schedule approved pursuant to this section. Prior to approving the initial or any subsequent rent schedule pursuant to this section, the Commissioner shall find that such schedule affords reasonable assurance that the rents to be established thereunder are (1) not lower than necessary, together with all other income to be derived from or in connection with the project, to produce reasonably stable revenues sufficient to provide for the payment of the operating expenses, the minimum annual amortization charge, and the minimum annual return; and (2) not higher than necessary to meet the need for dwellings for families of moderate income.

【EXCESS EARNINGS

【SEC. 705. For all of the purposes of any insurance contract made pursuant to this title, 50 per centum of the excess earnings, if any, for any operating year may be applied, in addition to the minimum annual return, to return on the outstanding investment but only to the extent that such application thereof does not result in an annual return of more than 5 per centum of the outstanding investment for such operating year, and the balance of any such excess earnings shall be applied, in addition to the minimum annual amortization charge, to amortization of the outstanding investment: Provided, That if in any preceding operating years the gross income shall have been less than the operating expenses, such excess earnings shall be applied to the extent necessary in whole or in part, first, to the reimbursement of the amount of the difference between such expenses (exclusive of any premium charges previously waived hereunder) and such income, and, second, to the payment of any premium charges previously waived hereunder.

【FINANCIAL STATEMENTS

【SEC. 706. With respect to each project insured under this title, the Commissioner shall provide that, after the close of each operating year, the investor shall submit to him for approval a financial and operating statement covering such operating year. If any such financial and operating statement shall not have been submitted or, for proper cause, shall not have been approved by the Commissioner, payment of any claim submitted by the investor may, at the option of the Commissioner, be withheld, in whole or in part, until such statement shall have been submitted and approved.

[PAYMENT OF CLAIMS]

[SEC. 707. If in any operating year the net income of a project insured under this title is less than the aggregate of the minimum annual amortization charge and the insured annual return, the Commissioner, upon submission by the investor of a claim for the payment of the amount of the difference between such net income and the aggregate of the minimum annual amortization charge and the insured annual return and after proof of the validity of such claim, shall pay to the investor, in cash from the Housing Investment Insurance Fund, the amount of such difference, as determined by the Commissioner, but not exceeding, in any event, an amount equal to the aggregate of the minimum annual amortization charge and the insured annual return.

[Nothing contained in this title or any other provision of law shall be construed as preventing or restricting an investor from assigning, pledging, or otherwise transferring or disposing of, subject to rules and regulations of the Commissioner, any or all rights, claims, or other benefits under any insurance contract made pursuant to this title to an assignee, pledgee, or other transferee, including the holders (or the trustee for such holders) of any debentures issued by the investor in connection with the project to which such insurance contract relates, and the Commissioner is authorized to pay claims or issue debentures in accordance with the provisions of this section and section 708 of this title to any such assignee, pledgee, or other transferee.

[DEBENTURES]

[SEC. 708. (a) If the aggregate of the amounts paid to the investor pursuant to section 707 hereof with respect to a project insured under this title shall at any time equal or exceed 15 per centum of the established investment, the Commissioner thereafter shall have the right, after written notice to the investor of his intentions so to do, to acquire, as of the first day of any operating year, such project in consideration of the issuance and delivery to the investor of debentures having a total face value equal to 90 per centum of the outstanding investment for such operating year. In any such case the investor shall be obligated to convey to said Commissioner title to the project which meets the requirements of the rules and regulations of the Commissioner in force at the time the insurance contract was executed and which is evidenced in the manner prescribed by such rules and regulations, and, in the event that the investor fails so to do, said Commissioner may, at his option, terminate the insurance contract.

[(b) If in any operating year the aggregate of the differences between the operating expenses (exclusive of any premium charges previously waived hereunder) and the gross income for the preceding operating years, less the aggregate of any deficits in such operating expenses reimbursed from excess earnings as hereinbefore provided, shall at any time equal or exceed 5 per centum of the established investment, the investor shall thereafter have the right, after written notice to the Commissioner of his intention so to do, to convey to the Commissioner, as of the first day of any operating year, title to the project which meets the requirements of the rules and regulations of the Commissioner in force at the time the insurance contract was executed and which is evidenced in the manner prescribed by such rules and regulations, and to receive from the Commissioner debentures having a total face value equal to 90 per centum of the outstanding investment for such operating year.

[(c) Any difference, not exceeding $50, between 90 per centum of the outstanding investment for the operating year in which a project is acquired by the Commissioner pursuant to this section and the total face value of the debentures to be issued and delivered to the investor pursuant to this section shall be adjusted by the payment of cash by the Commissioner to the investor from the Housing Investment Insurance Fund.

[(d) Upon the acquisition of a project by the Commissioner pursuant to this section, the insurance contract shall terminate.

[(e) Debentures issued under this title to any investor shall be executed in the name of the Housing Investment Insurance Fund as obligor, shall be signed by the Commissioner, by either his written or engraved signature, and shall be negotiable. Such debentures shall be dated as of the first day of the operating year in which the project for which such debentures were issued was acquired by the Commissioner, shall bear interest at a rate to be determined by the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, at the time the insurance contract was executed, but not to exceed 2¾ per centum per annum, payable semiannually on the 1st day of January and the 1st day of July of each year, and shall mature on the 1st day of July in such calendar year or years, not later than the fortieth following the date of the issuance thereof, as shall be determined by the Commissioner and stated on the face of such debentures.

[(f) Such debentures shall be in such form and in such denominations in multiples of $50, shall be subject to such terms and conditions, and may include such provisions for redemption as shall be prescribed by the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, and may be issued in either coupon or registered form.

[(g) Such debentures shall be exempt, both as to principal and interest, from all taxation (except surtaxes, estate, inheritance, and gift taxes) now or hereafter imposed by any Territory, dependency, or possession of the United States, or by the District of Columbia, or by any State, county, municipality, or local taxing authority, shall be payable out of the Housing Investment Insurance Fund, which shall be primarily liable therefor, and shall be fully and unconditionally guaranteed, as to both the principal thereof and the interest thereon, by the United States, and such guaranty shall be expressed on the face thereof. In the event that the Housing Investment Insurance Fund fails to pay upon demand, when due, the principal of or the interest on any debentures so guaranteed, the Secretary of the Treasury shall pay to the holders the amount thereof, which is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, and thereupon, to the extent of the amount so paid, the Secretary of the Treasury shall succeed to all the rights of the holders of such debentures.

[(h) Notwithstanding any other provisions of law relating to the acquisition, handling, or disposal of real and other property by the United States, the Commissioner shall have power, for the protection of the Housing Investment Insurance Fund, to pay out of said Fund all expenses or charges in connection with, and to deal with, complete, reconstruct, rent, renovate, modernize, insure, make contracts for the management of, or establish suitable agencies for the management of, or sell for cash or credit or lease in his discretion, in whole or in part, any project acquired pursuant to this title; and, notwithstanding any other provisions of law, the Commissioner shall also have power to pursue to final collection by way of compromise or otherwise all claims acquired by, or assigned or transferred to, him in connection with the acquisition or disposal of any project pursuant to this title: Provided, That section 3709 of the Revised Statutes shall not be construed to apply to any contract for hazard insurance, or to any purchase or contract for services or supplies on account of any project acquired pursuant to this title if the amount of such purchase or contract does not exceed $1,000.

TERMINATION

[SEC. 709. The investor, after written notice to the Commissioner of his intention so to do, may terminate, as of the close of any operating year, any insurance contract made pursuant to this title. The Commissioner shall prescribe the events and conditions under which said Commissioner shall have the option to terminate any insurance contract made pursuant to this title, and the events and conditions under which said Commissioner may reinstate any insurance contract terminated pursuant to this section or section 708 (a). If any insurance contract is terminated pursuant to this section, the Commissioner may require the investor to pay an adjusted premium charge in such amount as the Commissioner determines to be equitable, but not in excess of the aggregate amount of the premium charges which such investor otherwise would have been required to pay if such insurance contract had not been so terminated.

INSURANCE FUND

[SEC. 710. There is hereby created a Housing Investment Insurance Fund which shall be used by the Commissioner as a revolving fund for carrying out the provisions of this title and for administrative expenses in connection therewith. For this purpose, the Secretary of the Treasury shall make available to the Commissioner such funds as the Commissioner shall deem necessary, but not to exceed $10,000,000, which amount is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated. Premium charges, adjusted premium charges, inspection and other fees, service charges, and any other income received by the Commissioner under this title, together with all earnings on the assets of such Housing Investment Insurance Fund, shall

All payments made pursuant to claims of investors with respect to projects insured under this title, cash adjustments, the principal of an interest on debentures issued under this title, expenses incurred in connection with or as a consequence of the acquisition and disposal of projects acquired under this title, and all administrative expenses in connection with this title, shall be paid from said Fund. The faith of the United States is solemnly pledged to the payment of all approved claims of investors with respect to projects insured under this title, and, in the event said Fund fails to make any such payment when due, the Secretary of the Treasury shall pay to the investor the amount thereof, which is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated. Moneys in the Housing Investment Insurance Fund not needed for current operations under this title shall be deposited with the Treasurer of the United States to the credit of said Fund or invested in bonds or other obligations of, or in bonds or other obligations guaranteed by, the United States. The Commissioner may, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, purchase in the open market debentures issued under this title. Such purchases shall be made at a price which will provide an investment yield of not less than the yield obtainable from other investments authorized by this section. Debentures so purchased shall be canceled and not reissued.

[TAXATION PROVISIONS]

[SEC. 711. Nothing in this title shall be construed to exempt any real property acquired and held by the Commissioner under this title from taxation by any State or political subdivision thereof, to the same extent, according to its value, as other real property is taxed.

[SEC. 712. The Commissioners may make such rules and regulations as may be necessary or desirable to carry out the provisions of this title, including, without limiting the foregoing, rules and regulations relating to the maintenance by the investor of books, records, and accounts with respect to the project and the examination of such books, records, and accounts by representatives of the Commissioner; the submission of financial and operating statements and the approval thereof; the submission of claims for payments under insurance contracts, the proof of the validity of such claims, and the payment or disallowance thereof; the increase of the established investment if the investor shall make capital improvements or additions to the project; the decrease of the established investment if the investor shall sell part of the project; and the reduction of the outstanding investment for the appropriate operating year or operating years pending the restoration of dwelling or nondwelling facilities damaged by fire or other casualty. With respect to any investor which is subject to supervision or regulation by a State banking, insurance, or other State department or agency, the Commissioner may, in carrying out any of his supervisory and regulatory functions with respect to projects insured under this title, utilize, contract with, and act through, such department or agency and without regard to section 3709 of the Revised Statutes.

[First, to families which are to be displaced by any low-rent housing project or by any public slum-clearance or redevelopment project initiated

The Board shall have power to sue and be sued, complain and defend in any court of competent jurisdiction in the United States or its territories or possessions. It shall by formal resolution state any alleged violation of law or regulation and give written notice to the association concerned of the facts alleged to be such violation, except that the appointment of a Supervisory Representative in Charge, a conservator or a receiver shall be exclusively as provided in subsection (d) (2) hereof. The Board may apply to the United States district court of the district where the association affected has its home office for the enforcement of any order of the Board and such court shall have power to enforce any such order which has become final. The Board shall be subject to suit by any Federal savings and loan association with respect to any matter under this section or regulations made thereunder, or any other law or regulation, in the United States district court for the district where the home office of such association is located, and may be served by serving a copy of process on any of its agents and mailing a copy of such process by registered mail, to the Home Loan Bank Board, Washington, District of Columbia.*

The Board shall have exclusive jurisdiction to appoint a Supervisory Representative in Charge, conservator, or receiver. If, in the opinion of the Board, a ground for the appointment of a conservator or receiver as herein provided exists and the Board determines that an emergency exists requiring immediate action, the Board is authorized to appoint ex-parte and without notice a Supervisory Representative in Charge to take charge of said association and its affairs who shall have and exercise all the powers herein provided for conservators and receivers. Unless sooner removed by the Board, such Supervisory Representative in Charge shall hold office until a conservator or receiver, appointed by the Board after notice as herein provided, takes charge of the association and its affairs, or for six months, or until thirty days after the termination of the administrative hearing and final proceedings herein provided, or until sixty days after the final termination of any litigation affecting such temporary appointment, whichever is longest. The Board shall have the power to appoint a conservator or receiver but no such appointment of a conservator or receiver shall be made except pursuant to a formal resolution of the Board stating the grounds therefor and except notice thereof is given to said association stating the grounds therefor and until an opportunity for an administrative hearing thereon is afforded to said association. Such hearing shall be held in accordance with the provisions of the Administrative Procedure Act and shall be subject to review as therein provided and the review by the court shall be upon the weight of the evidence. A conservator shall have all the powers of the members, the directors, and officers of the Federal association and shall be authorized to operate it in its own name or conserve its assets in the manner and to the extent authorized by the Board. The Board shall appoint only the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation as receiver for any Federal savings and loan association, which shall have power as receiver to buy at its own sale subject to approval by the Board. With the consent of the association expressed by a resolution of the board of directors or of its members, the Board is authorized to appoint a conservator or receiver for a Federal association without notice and without hearing. The Board shall have power to make rules and regulations for the reorganization, merger, and liquidation of Federal associations and for such associations in conservatorship and receivership and for the conduct of conservatorships and receiverships. Whenever a Supervisory Representative in Charge, conservator, or receiver, appointed by the Board pursuant to the provisions of this section, demands possession of the property, business and assets of any association, the refusal of any officer, agent, employee, or director of such association to comply with the demand shall be punishable by a fine of not more than $1,000 or by imprisonment for not more than one year or both by such fine and imprisonment.

INDIVIDUAL MINORITY VIEWS OF REPRESENTATIVE WRIGHT PATMAN ON H. R. 7839

This housing bill as reported has more harm in it than good. It would be better to have no bill at all than to pass this bill with all of its bad features.

The interest rate increase of 1 percent on home mortgage loans is indefensible. On a 25-year home mortgage for $9,600, an increase of one-half of 1 percent in interest means $814 the borrower must pay, or 15 percent more. This illustration is for an increase of one-half of 1 percent, whereas the bill provides for an increase of twice that much.

The financing plan of this housing bill was referred to as a fraud and a hoax by an important housing official, who stated it is "completely and absolutely unworkable."

We have 12 million substandard dwelling units in the United States. One-third of our Nation is ill-housed. We need to build 2 million new homes each year for the next 10 years to provide decent housing in America. The administration has programed less than 1 million new starts for this year. The home builders want to build 1,400,000 homes and recondition 500,000 more this year. The mortgage bankers and landlords—who profit from housing shortages—naturally want the smallest number started this year.

CONGRESS DELEGATED MORE POWERS THAN RETAINED

Twelve powerful men who have more control over the economic affairs of our country than the United States Congress or the Executive were not brought before the committee or consulted on this important bill.

Their actions will determine whether this bill or any other bill involving credit or money will work.

Congress in delegating such enormous powers to a small group has delegated more powers than are necessary for an expanding, dynamic, progressive economy than it has retained for itself.

The cost and availability of credit and money are determined in our national economy by the Federal Open-Market Committee.

This Committee, operating under powers granted by Congress, makes it possible for money to be easy or hard; to make interest rates high or low; or to create a climate that causes our Nation to progress or suffer a depression.

The 12 men composing the Federal Open-Market Committee consist of the 7 members of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System and 5 representatives of the Federal Reserve banks, each of whom is selected by a board of 9 directors of the Federal Reserve bank he represents. The 9 directors consist of 6 members named by the private commercial banks and 3 named by the Board of Governors. A more correct statement is the Federal Open-Market Committee consists of the 7 members of the Board of Governors and 5 presidents of Federal Reserve banks who are obligated to the private bankers for their selection.

A comparable situation would be created if the railroad owners helped to fix freight rates by having their representatives members of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The Federal Open-Market Committee can hold interest rates short or long term at any rate it desires.

Mr. Marriner S. Eccles was Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board longer than any other person. He was doubtless more familiar with every detail of the operations of the Federal Reserve System than any other person.

Mr. Eccles, in answer to questions—when he was before congressional committees—often stated that the Federal Open-Market Committee had the power to determine the availability of credit, interest rates, prices of Government bonds, and other important matters.

When Mr. Eccles was testifying before the House Committee on Banking and Currency, in March 1947—and while Senator Mike Monroney was then a Member of the House and a member of the Banking and Currency Committee of the House—a question was asked by Mr. Monroney and an answer given by Mr. Eccles, as follows:

MR. MONRONEY. Do you mean to say that with your present Open-Market Committee, and the operation of the Federal Reserve, as it now stands, that, regardless of what the national income is, or other economic factors, you can guarantee to us that our interest rate will remain around 2.06 percent?

MR. ECCLES. We certainly can. We can guarantee that the interest rate, so far as the public debt is concerned, is where the Open-Market Committee of the Federal Reserve desires to put it.

It is recognized that the Government rates determine the commercial rates in the market.

If Congress will instruct the Open-Market Committee to hold the long-term rate at a certain point—or not allow it to go above a certain point—we will have a stable long-term mortgage rate that can be relied upon. It should not be above 2½ percent.

These hearings on H. R. 7839 on housing are incomplete because the Federal Open-Market Committee has not been heard from. Not one member of this important Committee has been called as a witness.

Under our United States Constitution the 160 million people of the United States have entrusted to 435 Representatives in the House of Representatives, and 96 Members of the United States Senate, or 531 in all—the Congress—with all powers over money and credit.

These 531 have delegated these powers over money and credit to the 12 members of the Open-Market Committee. Who are these 12? Are they responsible to and serve the people? Do they serve the private commercial banks? How are they selected?

WHO ARE THE TWELVE?

I doubt that any 12 Members of the United States Congress can name all 12 of the members of the Federal Open-Market Committee. This is no criticism of Congress; it is just a statement of a shocking fact. Members of Congress are busy people. They are forced to deal only with pressing problems. This has not become a pressing problem but it is becoming more pressing and urgent every day. Another depression caused by this group will make it the most urgent and pressing problem. Then a change will be made. We should not be compelled to suffer our country to go through another wringer—a horrible, crushing depression—in order to bring this important, neglected problem to the attention of Congress.

The policies and practices of the Open-Market Committee have been very beneficial to the private banks and money lenders since early 1951. Their policies were highly detrimental to the people in 1953. I believe their policies over a long period of time have favored the banks and were often injurious to the general welfare of the people.

It is impossible for our Committee on Banking and Currency to adequately consider this bill without dealing with the policies and practices of the Open-Market Committee.

SITUATION ON BOARD NOT IN PUBLIC INTEREST

The 7 members of the Board of Governors are selected 1 every 2 years—for a 14-year term. There is 1 unfilled vacancy on the Board now, leaving 6 members. The term of 1 of these 6 expired January 31, 1954, but he continues to serve until the place is filled. One of the 5 remaining has the power and privilege under a special law passed 2 or 3 years ago for his special benefit to quit the Board of any time and immediately accept a position with private banking interests, notwithstanding the general law that would require him to wait 2 years before accepting such employment. Congress was asked to pass this law with the understanding that this member would accept a definite position that Congress was advised had been offered to him. He did not accept any position but has continued to stay on the Board of Governors.

These Board members, although selected by the President, feel under no obligation to the Executive. All the present members were selected by Presidents Roosevelt and Truman. However, the President can appoint the Chairman when he desires to do so. Evidently he is satisfied with the present Chairman, Mr. Martin. The President has plenty of power to change the situation if Mr. Martin, the present Chairman, should decide to go against the Burgess' hard-money, high-interest policy. Mr. Martin could be replaced immediately by the President, appointing another of the present Board members, Chairman or the President could fill one of the vacancies on the Board of Governors and appoint the person so appointed Chairman of the Board. The present Chairman is serving during good behavior. The one in charge of the administration's hard-money, high-interest policy, Dr. Randolph Burgess, the unconfirmed Deputy Secretary of the Treasury, determines good behavior in Mr. Martin's case.

WHO HOLDS BALANCE OF POWER?

So the Open-Market Committee at present is composed of 6 Board members—1 whose term has expired and 1 who has a job-hunting license for a position with the private banking interest that is affected by the decisions he makes, and 5 members selected by private banks. The job-hunting license holder of the Board holds the balance of power.

Even though the members of the Board of Governors recognize their duty to serve the public interest—I do not charge willful misconduct or corruption—just take a look at who surrounds them, looking over their shoulders, or sitting across the table, with the right to interrupt and advise them and some actually voting on the pending question while they are performing their duties to the public.

First, 12 presidents of the 12 Federal Reserve banks selected by private banks.

Second, 12 members of the Advisory Committee selected by private banks in the 12 Federal Reserve districts.

In that situation the 6 Board members are surrounded by 24 of the finest, most influential, and most logical persuaders in the United States who represent the private banks and who are obligated to the private banks for their selections.

If a mistake is made it is not likely that it will be made on the side of the public interest with this topheavy banker setup.

During the first half of 1953 the Burgess hard-money, high-interest policy forced long-term Government bonds down to 89. They—the money masters—became afraid and took an about-face but public confidence had been shaken—the damage had been done. These bonds are now back at par. They should be kept there. If they are protected interest rates will be reasonable and there will be plenty of money for housing.

This bill, H. R. 7839, provides for an increase of 1 percent in interest rates for housing. It provides the rate may be fixed at $2\frac{1}{2}$ percent above the rate on long-term Government bonds. The traditional spread is $1\frac{1}{2}$ percent. This bill arbitrarily raises it to $2\frac{1}{2}$ percent.

This 1 percent increase, if allowed or forced on mortgage loans, will become a pattern, and doubtless cause the rate to spread clear across the debt board.

Let us see what that will do.

INCREASE ANNUAL PER CAPITA BURDEN, 200 PER FAMILY

All debts in our country, including the National debt, debts of States, counties, cities, political subdivisions, and private debts, including installment debts, aggregate about $640 billion. A 1 percent increase in interest rates will mean an added interest burden of $6.4 billion annually. The $6.4 billion divided among the 160 million people means an annual interest increase of $40 per capita or $200 for a family of five.

This family of five will have to buy $200 less food or $200 less in necessities of life in order to pay the $200 increase in interest rates.

The $200 extra for interest will probably go into the hands of those who do not need it and will not use it to buy goods and services. It will be taken from a family who would spend it and help the whole country.

A diversion of purchasing power results and the country is harmed.

TESTIMONY ABOUT 1 PERCENT INTEREST INCREASE

The printed hearings on the Housing Act of 1954, H. R. 7839, contain the testimony of T. B. King, Acting Assistant Deputy Administrator (Loan Guaranty), Department of Veterans' Benefits of the Veterans' Administration, March 5, 1954, commencing at page 215.

I am inserting herewith questions I asked Mr. King, commencing at page 224 of the hearings and his replies thereto.

Mr. PATMAN. Now, section 201 subparagraph (1), would give the President authority to set maximum interest rates on VA and FHA mortgages. That is the point you brought out.

Mr. KING. Yes, sir.

Mr. PATMAN. Heretofore Congress has always done that, has it not?

Mr. KING. There was prescribed by the Congress several years back authority which permitted the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs, with the concurrence of the Secretary of the Treasury—

Mr. PATMAN. But it was for a definite amount, was it not?

Mr. KING. Well, it featured a margin.

Mr. PATMAN. That is right.

Mr. KING. It featured a margin, but the margin was more restrictive than the one proposed here.

Mr. PATMAN. This permits a 2½ percent increase in addition to the long-term rate?

Mr. KING. Yes, sir; it contemplates that the market may need as high as a 2½ percent spread.

Mr. PATMAN. Isn't it a fact that in the past, 1½ percent was the normal spread?

Mr. KING. That is a point on which the Veterans' Administration insisted, until everybody got a little bit tired of hearing us insist on it, Congressman.

Mr. PATMAN. I beg your pardon?

Mr. KING. We maintained that point at considerable length, over the years.

Mr. PATMAN. One-and-a-half percent?

Mr. KING. Yes, sir. We were adverting primarily to the situation, the market situation, which was in vogue, or which was experienced, prior to the March 1951 accord between the Treasury and the Federal Reserve Board.

Mr. PATMAN. So this is about a 75 percent increase?

Mr. KING. No, sir; the point is that that 1½ percent has not been reflected by experience since March 1951.

Mr. PATMAN. Do you mean it should be more?

Mr. KING. I say the market has demanded more.

Mr. PATMAN. It should be more?

Mr. KING. I say that under conditions which have been facing the lending industry, and due to the supply-and-demand factors which have obtained since March 1951, one would be hard put to insist that that 1½ percent pattern always would be adequate and should be maintained.

Mr. PATMAN. The point I was attempting to make, though, was that regardless of the merits or demerits, an increase from 1½ to 2½ percent is about a 75 percent increase; is it not?

Mr. KING. Yes, sir.

Mr. PATMAN. Roughly?

Mr. KING. Yes, sir.

Mr. PATMAN. Now, in the case of public housing bonds, that is a similar situation, I assume. The Treasury established a rate of 27⁄8 percent as the average yield on long-term Governments.

Mr. KING. That is right.

Mr. PATMAN. That rate we are discussing is 2½ percent above the long-term yield, isn't it?

Mr. KING. Yes, sir.

Mr. PATMAN. On this basis, the Veterans' Administration mortgages could go to about 5½ percent, and FHA mortgages could go to 6½ percent. FHA can charge between one-half and one percent premium, for instance. Conventional mortgages under that condition would be about 7 percent, wouldn't they?

Mr. KING. I think they probably wouldn't be making as many conventional mortgages, Congressman.

Mr. PATMAN. If they did they would be at 7 percent; would they not?

Mr. KING. Yes; usury laws in many States would hold it down to that.

Mr. PATMAN. This looks like a sort of a heads-I-win-and-tails-you-lose deal, since when the interest rates on Government bonds are rising, this provision can be used to force up interest rates on mortgages. But if the yield on Governments drops, mortgage rates would not necessarily reflect that drop, because section 201 (1) does not govern the action of the FHA Commissioner. Under the authority we are giving him in title I of this bill, he could keep the rate on FHA mortgages at 6 percent, plus 1 percent for insurance, no matter how far the yield on Governments dropped. With such a rate on FHA mortgages, of course, no VA loans would be made. Do you agree with that?

Mr. KING. Yes, sir.

I would point out, Congressman, however, that as we sit here today I believe these 15-year Governments yield $2\frac{1}{2}$.

Mr. PATMAN. At this particular time?

Mr. KING. Yes, sir.

Mr. King makes the point that the market has demanded more interest since March 1951. This was caused by the Open-Market Committee permitting Government bonds to go down in price until they earned much more than $2\frac{1}{2}$ percent, the long-term rate. In other words, the action of the Open-Market Committee permitted $2\frac{1}{2}$ percent bonds to go down in value—as low as 89—which resulted in a corresponding rise in interest rates on these bonds which made the spread or margin much less than $1\frac{1}{2}$ percent.

This situation has been changed as long-term $2\frac{1}{2}$ percent bonds are now back at par where they were before the so-called accord between the Federal Reserve and Treasury. Therefore, there is no reason to provide for a higher interest rate in this bill. The fact is, the interest rates to veterans and others that were raised on their housing loans because of the reduction in price of the long-term governments should now be changed—and it should be done immediately—to put the rates back where they were. There is reason to keep these rates up. The same argument that was used to justify the increases is applicable now to justify decreases. A reason cannot be given for holding up these rates but flimsy excuses are given that will not hold water.

The mortgage lenders and investors will be unduly benefited by a $2\frac{1}{2}$ percent interest spread provided in this bill. That is 1 percent more than the traditional rate and will result in giving the lenders, if it is granted, a bonus of that much—a pure bonus.

REGULATION X

This bill, H. R. 7837, restores a regulation X by imposing controls. No emergency exists to justify such controls. The authority is vested in the administration under this bill to do the following:

1. Change or vary interest rates.
2. Change FHA downpayments.
3. Change mortgage amortization terms.
4. Change fees and charges.
5. Change maximum dollar limits per room or per unit.

The Administrator has already testified that he will make certain changes in the event this provision becomes a law.

It imposes rigid controls in peacetime and when no emergency exists justifying such controls.

HOUSING ACT OF 1954

MARCH 29, 1954.—Committed to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union and ordered to be printed

Mr. SPENCE, from the Committee on Banking and Currency, submitted the following

MINORITY REPORT

[To accompany H. R. 7839]

This report is filed on behalf of those members whose signatures appear at the end of the report.

We of the minority find ourselves in fundamental disagreement with the majority on numerous major aspects of H. R. 7839. These include: (1) Failure to maintain traditional veterans' housing preferences; (2) failure to provide a realistic workable secondary mortgage market; (3) delegation to the President of authority to set maximum interest rates on FHA and VA mortgages; (4) delegation to the President of authority to control real-estate credit; (5) failure to authorize any units of low-rent public housing; (6) failure to establish safeguards against "mortgaging-out" under the various FHA rental housing programs; and (7) failure to require builders of FHA and VA houses to give the home buyer a warranty against defective construction.

In order that the House may be fully cognizant of the seriousness of these deficiencies, a detailed analysis of each is set forth below.

VETERANS' PREFERENCE

The minority regrets that your committee has not seen fit to continue the traditional congressional policy of veterans' preference in the field of housing. We believe the veteran, by his wartime service, earned the right to the preference that he has been accorded. Even if this were not true, however, he would be entitled to this preference because his lengthy absence from civilian life has placed him at a decided disadvantage in obtaining adequate housing. Unfortunately H. R. 7839 does much to dilute that preference.

Amendments to title II of the National Housing Act contained in title I of the bill would have immeasurable effect on the GI home loan program in several respects. The proposed increase in loan-to-value ratios and the reduction in cash down payments, together with the increase in the permissible term of the loan which will make lower monthly carrying charges possible, will make considerably more liberal financing terms possible for home purchasers under the FHA program. This, of course, would tend to dilute the preference which has been available to veterans obtaining GI financing, since the amendments would place nonveterans in virtually an equal position in respect to housing credit terms.

On the other hand, it is noted that the only action which the President could take in respect to VA guaranteed home loans would be to make GI loan terms more restrictive. All eligible veterans, including recent veterans of the Korean conflict, will be deprived to a considerable degree of the preferred position they heretofore enjoyed in respect to housing credit.

In the reconstitution of the Federal National Mortgage Association provided under title III of the bill, there is no provision that preferred support continue to be given to GI loans under the reconstituted secondary market facility. Similarly, GI loans are not enumerated among the special Fannie May assistance programs authorized by subsection 301 (b) of the bill.

Under present law, the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs is authorized, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, to establish such rate of interest on VA mortgages, not in excess of 4½ percent, as he may find the loan market demands. The National Housing Act provides similar authority for adjustment of maximum interest rates by FHA, up to a maximum of 6 percent for most home mortgages. Since the Federal Housing Commissioner has adequate authority already to authorize an upward adjustment of the interest rate on FHA loans, the effect of section 201 is to make an upward adjustment of the interest rate for GI loans possible whenever the mortgage bankers decide to tighten the market.

The bill provides that the average yield on all marketable Government bonds with a maturity of 15 years or more shall be the base for comparison with FHA and VA interest rates. While the majority of VA loans are written for terms of 20 or 25 years, under the statutory maximum of 30 years, the best available estimates indicate that such mortgages will probably have an average life of not over 10 or 12 years. Accordingly, the inclusion of extremely long-term issues such as the 3¼ percent issue maturing in 1983 in the average used for comparison with mortgage interest rates will result in maintaining an artificially high maximum interest rate on home mortgages for veterans.

FEDERAL NATIONAL MORTGAGE ASSOCIATION

Title III is the most important section of the Housing Act of 1954. An adequate and readily available supply of mortgage financing is a prime requirement for a high and sustained volume of homebuilding. Yet, according to the consensus of testimony before the committee, title III in its present form imposes unduly restrictive requirements upon FNMA and may actually have the effect of deterring mortgage lending instead of sustaining it. Specifically it was pointed out to the committee that the 3 percent nonrefundable contribution to the Federal National Mortgage Association, to be borne by the lender upon mortgage sales to FNMA, will unduly restrict use of the facility. It is noted, in passing, that it is unlikely lenders will assume the burden of the 3 percent contribution. Rather, the homebuilder, or more likely, the home buyer will ultimately pay it. Consequently, under the bill Federal credit (and equity capital provided by home purchasers) will be used to build up a multi-million-dollar secondary market reserve facility which will then be turned over to banks and insurance companies, who sold mortgages to FNMA but otherwise contributed little to acquire ownership share.

Under title III, the FNMA requirement to purchase at or below market price, the 3 percent contribution and the service fee, may result in a discount of home mortgages of 6½ to 7 percent under today's market condition.

The president of the National Association of Homebuilders testified:

On a $12,000 loan, for example, this formula would result in a cost for permanent mortgage financing of $750 to $850. This equals, and probably exceeds, the extremely high discounts which characterized the mortgage market during last summer's unusual credit stringency.

Furthermore, the requirement that the Association liquidate its portfolio of old mortgages and limit its new purchases to mortgages which can be readily resold does not contribute additionally to the stability of the mortgage market now provided by conventional private brokerage operations. These requirements in fact create the danger that an undue increase in the mortgage supply arising from FNMA sales may lead to price declines.

Preference heretofore accorded GI mortgage loans in the secondary market operations of the FNMA is not continued under the bill. GI loans are not specifically included in the category of home mortgage loans for which FNMA is authorized to provide special assistance. Neither, apparently, is the special assistance which FNMA has given FHA section 213 cooperatives to be continued. The bill establishes no priority for use of the limited total of $700 million authorized for the special assistance secondary market operations under section 301 (b). In the aggregate this amount could only assist the construction of approximately 70,000 dwelling units. To operate practically in the field of housing that needs special assistance by secondary market support, a system of priorities and a larger sum would appear to be required.

Finally it would appear that an appropriate policy statement indicating specifically the purpose that a secondary market facility is intended to serve should be included.

The National Association of Home Builders, representing the industry that does the constructing, has suggested the following:

It should help provide an adequate and stabilized mortgage market so that homes may be provided in the volume, in areas, of the size, and at the prices that the homebuying market requires.

The provisions of title III, in the opinion of the NAHB—will prove unworkable and possibly do more to depress than to assist the mortgage market. Its terms go far beyond those reasonably necessary to prevent excessive use and, in effect, amount to a complete denial of the facility to the very users for whom it is intended.

INTEREST RATES

Under the authority vested in the President by title II of H. R. 7839 to adjust interest rates, fees, and service charges, maximum financing charges on federally aided home mortgage loans may go as high as 7 percent on the lowest priced housing (the new FHA sec. 221 program), 6½ percent on the other FHA-insured mortgages, and 5½ percent on VA-guaranteed home mortgage loans.

In this connection it is pointed out that under section 203, the FHA Commissioner already has authority to raise interest rates on most insured mortgages as high as 6 percent. On the other hand, under present law the maximum rate on GI home loans cannot be higher than 4½ percent. Consequently, it appears that the net effect of the new authority proposed under section 201 of the bill is to enable increases in interest rates to be made on GI home loans.

Concerning the desirability of establishing maximum limits and using automatic formulas as guides in setting effective financing charges on federally aided home mortgages, we recall the witness representing the Veterans' Administration stating that there is "considerable administrative experience to the effect that maximums tend to become minimums as well."

Provision for a 2½ percent spread over the yield on long-term marketable Government bonds under title II of the bill represents a rise of 1 percentage point in the spread that investors were willing to accept prior to the inauguration of the tight credit policies in early 1951. In view of the considerable easing of the money and credit supply since mid-1953, it does not appear necessary to provide for an increase in the traditional spread of 1½ percent between the maximum rate on federally aided home mortgages and the yield on long-term Government bonds, unless it is intended to reimpose restrictive tight money conditions on the economy.

Furthermore, in view of the testimony presented before the committee that the estimated average life of VA and FHA mortgages is considerably less than 15 years, using the yields on bonds with from 15 to 30 years remaining to maturity as the basis for setting maximum interest rates on such mortgages is highly questionable.

CONTROL OF REAL ESTATE CREDIT

Subsection 201 (5) would give the President authority to control real estate credit. It was under similar authority contained in the Defense Production Act of 1950 that regulation X was issued.

In the opinion of the minority, real estate credit controls are in reality a rationing mechanism, not a credit control mechanism. They are, moreover, a one-way rationing mechanism. They ration housing solely on the basis of the ability of the people who need housing to raise the downpayment. In recommending the termination of real estate credit controls on June 16, 1952 (p. 15, H. Rept. 2177, 82d Cong., 2d sess.), your Committee on Banking and Currency stated:

Evidence was presented to your committee that the inevitable discriminatory aspect of credit controls; namely, that they bear most heavily upon those in the lower income groups, who have less ready cash, had in the existing situation overshadowed the anti-inflationary aspect.

In 1953, a proposal to restore this authority was rejected by your committee.

Only a grave national emergency would justify the reimposition of real estate credit controls. In the admitted absence of such an emergency, the minority is opposed to granting the President authority to reimpose them.

LOW-RENT PUBLIC HOUSING

Several facts were developed throughout the hearings on H. R. 7839 with reference to the need for congressional action on the size of the low-rent public housing program, even though this issue is not dealt with in this measure.

Emphasis was placed by administration spokesmen and by a large majority of other witnesses on proposals to accomplish slum clearance, urban redevelopment, and urban renewal. Great hope was expressed that new programs under sections 220 and 221 under the Federal Housing Administration would make it possible to rehabilitate old homes, sound in structure, and provide new housing at low cost and with liberal financing terms for families presently living in substandard housing.

The minority agrees totally with the objectives of these programs. However, if old housing is to be rehabilitated and refinanced, one fact is very clear. A substantial number of families, probably half, presently living in the substandard units will be forced to vacate because their economic status will not permit them to live in the more expensive remodeled and modernized homes. It is also a fact that a program of rehabilitation will reduce, rather than enlarge, the housing supply. In those instances where slum housing is demolished as part of an urban renewal program, at least half of the tenants of the old property will have insufficient incomes to permit home purchases even of the proposed $7,600 house ($8,600 in high-cost areas), if it can be built, with no downpayment and 40 years to pay.

It follows, therefore, that unless provision is made to rehouse low-income families, displaced through either renewal or slum clearance, these programs cannot be undertaken and the objectives of H. R. 7839 can never be realized.

The President in his housing message recognized that fact when he urged that 35,000 units of low-rent public housing be provided in fiscal year 1955 and during each of the following 3 years. Administrator Albert M. Cole indicated that such a program was essential for the rehousing of many displaced families. While it is the opinion of the minority, that a program of 35,000 public housing units would be entirely inadequate, even if limited to families displaced by slum clearance, urban renewal, or for other public purposes, it would at least have been something.

The entire issue of public housing has always been within the initial jurisdiction of the House Committee on Banking and Currency. The Housing Act of 1949 provided for 810,000 of such units to be built at the rate of 135,000 a year for a 6-year period. That still represents basic national policy, except as it has been amended by legislative limitations on appropriation bills voted under a waiver of rules. The size of the program goes to the very heart of the public housing issue. But no reference to size is contained in H. R. 7839.

The minority recommends that the proposed Housing Act of 1954 be amended by striking unit limitations adopted in the passage of the Independent Offices Appropriation Acts for fiscal years 1953 and 1954, thereby returning to the basic provisions of the Housing Act of 1949. If that were done the President would have to increase or decrease the size of the public housing program in line with economic needs and considerations. It would make it possible for him to carry out the program he proposed, and to meet the needs of families of low income displaced by the slum clearance and urban renewal program he recommends. It is the desire of the minority to make his program realistically workable.

At the same time, by establishing the size of the low-rent public housing program as part of a total housing program, it would be returned to its place of proper jurisdiction; namely, with the basic legislative committee, the House Committee on Banking and Currency.

PROTECTION AGAINST "MORTGAGING-OUT"

It is the opinion of the minority that every reasonable legislative safeguard must be provided against abuses in existing and proposed rental housing programs where the Federal Government is assuming large risks. Members of Congress will recall that under the FHA 608 rental housing program there were instances where mortgagors completed projects for less than the amount of the mortgage and pocketed the difference plus normal profits. This was commonly referred to as "mortgaging-out."

When FHA title IX, as part of the Defense Housing and Community Facilities and Services Act of 1951, was adopted, it was amended with bipartisan sponsorship to require that the mortgagor certify upon completion of the physical improvements on the mortgaged property the amount, if any, by which the proceeds of the mortgage loan exceeded the actual costs of the physical improvements, and to pay within 60 days after such certification to the mortgagee for application to the reduction of the principal amount of the mortgage the amount so certified to be in excess of actual cost. It provided protection against kickbacks and other abuses. Last year, the Congress added an identical provision to FHA title VIII (Wherry Act military housing).

Efforts of the minority to protect the new programs under FHA section 220 and 221 and existing programs under FHA sections 207 (rental housing) and 213 (cooperatives) with identical safeguards were defeated.

MANDATORY BUILDER'S WARRANTY

The minority feels that the buyer of a 1- or 2-family house, built with Federal assistance, should be given a warranty by the builder that the house has been built according to the plans and specifications on which the Federal assistance was based. Such a provision was included in last year's housing bill, as reported by your committee. It passed the House without opposition but was eliminated in conference. A mandatory builder's warranty would carry out the chief recommendation resulting from the Rains subcommittee's investigation of housing constructed under the FHA and VA programs. The subcommittee found that the purchasers of FHA and VA houses generally bought through purchase contracts which did not contain, or incorporate by reference, plans or specifications which would in any way protect the buyers. On the basis of these contracts, they rarely had any legal basis for suit against the builders. The minority feels that a mandatory builder's warranty is an absolute necessity if the defective construction of FHA and VA houses is to be prevented in the future.

In taking this position, however, the minority wishes to emphasize that the requirement of a warranty is not a reflection on the honest builder. In fact, providing the buyer with a warranty is a common practice in many other lines of industry. When a person buys a house he is, as a rule, making a lifetime investment and he should have reasonable protection.

It is the intention of the minority to offer amendments on the floor of the House with the view to correcting the several major deficiencies, described above, contained in H. R. 7839. We are firmly convinced that the adoption by the House of these amendments to the Housing Act of 1954 is an absolute necessity if the President's laudable recommendations to provide the country with a new and dynamic housing program are to be transferred by this Congress into concrete statute form.

23 value of a property upon which there is located a dwelling
24 designed principally for a single-family residence, where the 25 mortgagor is the owner and occupant and establishes (to the

1 satisfaction of the Commissioner) that his home which he
 2 occupied as an owner or as a tenant was destroyed or dam-
 3 aged to such an extent that reconstruction is required as a
 4 result of a flood, fire, hurricane, earthquake, storm, or other
 5 catastrophe which the President, pursuant to section 2 (a)
 6 of the Act entitled 'An Act to authorize Federal assistance
 7 to States and local governments in major disasters and for

9 certificates shall not be transferable except on the books of 10 the Association. Subject to such terms and conditions as
11 may be prescribed by the board of directors, such certificates
12 shall be convertible into capital stock of the Association hav-
13 ing an equal par value, but no such conversion shall be per-
14 mitted or made until such time as all of the outstanding capi-
15 tal stock of the Association held by the Secretary of the 16 Treasury has been retired and the Secretary of the Treasury
17 does not hold any of the obligations of the Association pur-
18 chased under section 304 (c) of this title. After all of the
19 stock held by the Secretary of the Treasury has been retired,
20 the Association may effect the direct issuance of stock in lieu
21 of and in the same manner as is provided in this subsection
22 for the issuance of convertible certificates. Such dividends
23 as may be declared by the board of directors in its discretion
24 shall be paid by the Association to its stockholders, but in any

1 one fiscal year the general surplus account of the Association
2 shall not be reduced through the payment of dividends (other
3 than to the Secretary of the Treasury) which exceed in the
4 aggregate 5 per centum of the par value of the outstanding
5 stock of the Association.

6 “(d) Within sixty days following the effective date of
7 the Housing Act of 1954, as of the day following a cutoff
8 date to be determined by the Association, the Association is
9 authorized and directed to issue and deliver to the Secretary
10 of the Treasury, and the Secretary of the Treasury is au-
11 thorized and directed to accept capital stock of the Associa-
12 tion having an aggregate par value equal to the sum of (1)
13 the amount of $21,000,000 (being the amount of the origi-
14 nal subscription for capital stock of $20,000,000 and paid in 15 surplus of $1,000,000 of the Association) and (2) an
16 amount equal to the Association's surplus, surplus reserves,
17 and undistributed earnings, computed as of the close of the 18 cutoff date.

19 “(e) The capital stock of the Association delivered to 20 the Secretary of the Treasury pursuant to subsection (d) of
21 this section shall be in exchange for (1) the note or notes
22 evidencing the aforesaid original $21,000,000 (upon which
23 the accrued interest shall have been paid through the cutoff
24 date referred to in subsection (d) of this section); and (2)
25 the release to the Association of any and all rights or claims

1 which the United States might otherwise have or claim in
2 and to the Association's capital, surplus, surplus reserves, and
3 undistributed earnings, computed as of the close of the afore-
4 said cutoff date.

5 “(f) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, any
6 institution, including a national bank or State member bank
7 of the Federal Reserve System, trust company, or other
8 banking organization, organized under any law of the United
9 States, including the laws relating to the District of Columbia,
10 shall be authorized to make payments to the Association of 11 the nonrefundable capital contributions referred to in sub-
12 section (b) of this section, to receive stock or convertible
13 certificates of the Association evidencing such capital con-
14 tributions, and to hold or dispose of such stock or certificates,
15 subject to the provisions of this title.

16 “(g) As promptly as practicable after all of the capital
17 stock of the Association held by the Secretary of the Treasury
18 has been retired, the Housing and Home Finance Adminis-
19 trator shall transmit to the President for submission to the 20 Congress recommendations for such legislation as may be 21 necessary or desirable to make appropriate provisions to
22 transfer to the owners of the outstanding capital stock of the 23 Association the assets and liabilities of the Association in con-
24 nection with, and the control and management of, the second-
25 ary market operations of the Association under section 304

1 of this title in order that such operations may thereafter be
2 carried out by a privately owned and privately financed
3 corporation.

4 "SECONDARY MARKET OPERATIONS

5 "SEC. 304. (a) To carry out the purposes set forth in
6 paragraph (a) of section 301, the operations of the Asso-
7 ciation under this section shall be confined, so far as prac-
8 ticable, to mortgages which are deemed by the Association
9 to be of such quality, type, and class as to meet, generally,
10 the purchase standards imposed by private institutional mort-
11 gage investors. In the interest of assuring sound operation,
12 the prices to be paid by the Association for mortgages pur-
13 chased in its secondary market operations under this section,
14 should be established, from time to time, at or below the mar-
15 ket price for the particular class of mortgages involved, as
16 determined by the Association. The volume of the Asso-
17 ciation's purchases and sales, and the establishment of the 18 purchase prices, sale prices, and charges or fees, in its sec-
19 ondary market operations under this section, should be deter-
20 mined by the Association from time to time, and such de-
21 terminations should be consistent with the objectives that
22 such purchases and sales should be effected only at such
23 prices and on such terms as will reasonably prevent excessive
24 use of the Association's facilities, and that the operations of 25 the Association under this section should be within its in-

1 come derived from such operations and that such operations
2 should be fully self-supporting.

3 “(b) For the purposes of this section, the Association
4 is authorized to issue, upon the approval of the Secretary of
5 the Treasury, and have outstanding at any one time obliga-
6 tions in an aggregate amount sufficient to enable it to carry
7 out its functions under this section, such obligations to have
8 such maturities and to bear such rate or rates of interest as 9 may be determined by the Association with the approval of
10 the Secretary of the Treasury, and to be redeemable at the 11 option of the Association before maturity in such manner
12 as may be stipulated in such obligations; but the aggregate
13 amount of obligations of the Association under this sub-
14 section outstanding at any one time shall not exceed ten times
15 the sum of its capital, capital surplus, general surplus, re-
16 serves, and undistributed earnings, and in no event shall any 17 such obligations be issued if, at the time of such proposed
18 issuance, and as a consequence thereof, the resulting aggre-
19 gate amount of its outstanding obligations under this sub-
20 section would exceed the amount of the Association’s owner-
21 ship pursuant to this section, free from any liens or encum-
22 brances, of cash, mortgages, and bonds or other obligations
23 of, or bonds or other obligations guaranteed as to principal
24 and interest by, the United States. The Association shall
25 insert appropriate language in all of its obligations issued

1 under this subsection clearly indicating that such obligations,
2 together with the interest thereon, are not guaranteed by
3 the United States and do not constitute a debt or obligation
4 of the United States or of any agency or instrumentality
5 thereof other than the Association. The Association is
6 authorized to purchase in the open market any of its obli-
7 gations outstanding under this subsection at any time and
8 at any price.

9 “(c) The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized in 10 his discretion to purchase any obligations issued pursuant
11 to subsection (b) of this section, as now or hereafter in force,
12 and for such purpose the Secretary of the Treasury is au-
13 thorized to use as a public debt transaction the proceeds of 14 the sale of any securities hereafter issued under the Second
15 Liberty Bond Act, as now or hereafter in force, and the pur-
16 poses for which securities may be issued under the Second
17 Liberty Bond Act, as now or hereafter in force, are ex-
18 tended to include such purchases. The Secretary of the
19 Treasury shall not at any time purchase any obligations
20 under this subsection if (1) all of the capital stock of the 21 Association held by the Secretary of the Treasury has been
22 retired, or (2) such purchase would increase the aggregate
23 principal amount of his then outstanding holdings of such 24 obligations under this subsection to an amount greater than 25 $500,000,000 plus an amount equal to the total of such

1 reductions in the maximum dollar amount prescribed by
2 section 306 (e) as have theretofore been effected pursuant
3 to that section: Provided, That such aggregate principal
4 amount under this subsection (e) shall in no event exceed
5 $1,000,000,000. Each purchase of obligations by the Sec-
6 retary of the Treasury under this subsection shall be upon
7 such terms and conditions as to yield a return at a rate
8 determined by the Secretary of the Treasury, taking into
9 consideration the current average rate on outstanding market-
10 able obligations of the United States as of the last day of 11 the month preceeding the making of such purchase. The Sec-
12 retary of the Treasury may, at any time, sell, upon such 13 terms and conditions and at such price or prices as he shall 14 determine, any of the obligations acquired by him under 15 this subsection. All redemptions, purchases, and sales by 16 the Secretary of the Treasury of such obligations under this 17 subsection shall be treated as public debt transactions of the 18 United States.

19 “(d) The Association may not purchase participations
20 or make any advance contracts or commitments to purchase
21 mortgages for its operations under this section, except that
22 the Association may, in the discretion of its board of directors,
23 issue a purchase contract (which shall not be assignable or 24 transferable except with the consent of the Association) in 25 an amount not exceeding the amount of the sale of mortgages

1 purchased from the Association, entitling the holder thereof
2 to sell to the Association mortgages in the amount of the
3 contract, upon such terms and conditions as the Association
4 may prescribe.

5 "SPECIAL ASSISTANCE FUNCTIONS

6 "SEC. 305. (a) To carry out the purposes set forth in
7 paragraph (b) of section 304, the President, after taking
8 into account (1) the conditions in the building industry and
9 the national economy and (2) conditions affecting the home
10 mortgage investment market, generally, or affecting various 11 types or classification of home mortgages, or both, and 12 after determining that such action is in the public interest,
13 may under this section authorize the Association, for such 14 period of time and to such extent as he shall prescribe, to 15 exercise its powers to make commitments to purchase and
16 to purchase such types, classes, or categories of home mort-
17 gages (including participations therein) as he shall 18 determine.

19 "(b) The operations of the Association under this sec-
20 tion shall be confined, so far as practicable, to mortgages
21 (including participations) which are deemed by the Asso-
22 ciation to be of such quality as to meet, substantially and
23 generally, the purchase standards imposed by private insti-
24 tutional mortgage investors but which, at the time of sub-
25 mission of the mortgages to the Association for purchase, are

1 not necessarily readily acceptable to such investors. Sub-
2 ject to the provisions of this section, the prices to be paid
3 by the Association for mortgages purchased in its opera-
4 tions under this section shall be established from time to
5 time by the Association. The Association shall impose
6 charges or fees for its services under this section with the 7 objective that all costs and expenses of its operations under
8 this section should be within its income derived from such
9 operations and that such operations should be fully self-
10 supporting.

11 “(e) The total amount of purchases and commitments
12 authorized by the President pursuant to subsection (a) of 13 this section shall not exceed $200,000,000 outstanding at
14 any one time: Provided, That, notwithstanding such limi-
15 tation, the President pursuant to subsection (a) of this
16 section may also authorize the Association to exercise its 17 powers to enter into commitments to purchase immediate 18 participations and to make related deferred participation
19 agreements as hereinafter in this subsection provided, but 20 only to the extent that the total amount of such immediate 21 participation commitments and purchases pursuant thereto
22 (but not including the amount of any related deferred par-
23 ticipation agreements or purchases pursuant thereto) shall 24 not in any event exceed $100,000,000 outstanding at any
25 one time, and any such deferred participation agreements

1 shall be made by the Association only on the basis of a
2 commitment by it to purchase an immediate participation
3 of a 20 per centum undivided interest in each mortgage and
4 a related deferred participation agreement by the Asso-
5 ciation to purchase the remaining outstanding interest in
6 such mortgage conditional upon the occurrence of such a
7 default as gives rise to the right to foreclose.

8 “(d) The Association may issue to the Secretary of 9 the Treasury its obligations in an amount outstanding at any
10 one time sufficient to enable the Association to carry out
11 its functions under this section; such obligations to mature
12 not more than five years from their respective dates of issue;
13 to be redeemable at the option of the Association before
14 maturity in such manner as may be stipulated in such obli-
15 gations. Each such obligation shall bear interest at a rate
16 determined by the Secretary of the Treasury, taking into
17 consideration the current average rate on outstanding mar-
18 ketable obligations of the United States as of the last day
19 of the month preceding the issuance of the obligation of the 20 Association. The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to 21 purchase any obligations of the Association to be issued under
22 this section; and for such purpose the Secretary of the Treas-
23 ury is authorized to use as a public debt transaction the 24 proceeds from the sale of any securities issued under the
25 Second Liberty Bond Act, as now or hereafter in force, and

1 the purposes for which securities may be issued under the
2 Second Liberty Bond Act, as now or hereafter in force, are
3 extended to include any purchases of the Association's
4 obligations hereunder.

5 ~~“MANAGEMENT AND LIQUIDATING FUNCTIONS~~

6 ~~“SEC. 306. (a)~~ To carry out the purposes set forth in 7 paragraph ~~(e)~~ of section 301, the Association is authorized
8 and directed, as of the close of the cutoff date determined
9 by the Association pursuant to section 303 ~~(d)~~ of this title,
10 to establish separate accountability for all of its assets and
11 liabilities ~~(exclusive of capital, surplus, surplus reserves, and~~
12 ~~undistributed earnings to be evidenced by capital stock as~~
13 ~~provided in section 303 (d) hereof, but inclusive of all rights~~
14 ~~and obligations under any outstanding contracts)~~, and to
15 maintain such separate accountability for the management
16 and orderly liquidation of such assets and liabilities as pro-
17 vided in this section.

18 ~~“(b)~~ For the purposes of this section and to assure that,
19 to the maximum extent, and as rapidly as possible, private
20 financing will be substituted for Treasury borrowings other-
21 wise required to carry mortgages held under the aforesaid
22 separate accountability, the Association is authorized to issue,
23 upon the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, and have
24 outstanding at any one time obligations in an aggregate
25 amount sufficient to enable it to carry out its functions under

1 this section; such obligations to have such maturities and to
2 bear such rate or rates of interest as may be determined by
3 the Association with the approval of the Secretary of the
4 Treasury; and to be redeemable at the option of the Associa-
5 tion before maturity in such manner as may be stipulated in
6 such obligations; but in no event shall any such obligations be
7 issued if, at the time of such proposed issuance, and as a
8 consequence thereof, the resulting aggregate amount of its
9 outstanding obligations under this subsection would exceed
10 the amount of the Association's ownership under the afore-
11 said separate accountability, free from any liens or encum-
12 brances, of cash, mortgages, and bonds or other obligations
13 of, or bonds or other obligations guaranteed as to principal
14 and interest by, the United States. The proceeds of any 15 private financing effected under this subsection shall be 16 paid to the Secretary of the Treasury in reduction of 17 the indebtedness of the Association to the Secretary of the 18 Treasury under the aforesaid separate accountability. The 19 Association shall insert appropriate language in all of its 20 obligations issued under this subsection clearly indicating 21 that such obligations, together with the interest thereon, are 22 not guaranteed by the United States and do not constitute 23 a debt or obligation of the United States or of any agency
24 or instrumentality thereof other than the Association. The
25 Association is authorized to purchase in the open market any

1 of its obligations outstanding under this subsection at any
2 time and at any price.

3 “(c) No mortgage shall be purchased by the Associa-
4 tion in its operations under this section except pursuant
5 to and in accordance with the terms of a contract or commit-
6 ment to purchase the same made prior to the cutoff date
7 provided for in section 303 (d); which contract or commit-
8 ment became a part of the aforesaid separate accountability;
9 and the total amount of mortgages and commitments held by
10 the Association under this section shall not, in any event,
11 exceed $3,350,000,000: Provided, That such maximum
12 amount shall be progressively reduced by the amount of 13 cash realizations on account of principal of mortgages held
14 under the aforesaid separate accountability and by cancella-
15 tion of any commitments to purchase mortgages thereunder;
16 as reflected by the books of the Association; with the objective
17 that the entire aforesaid maximum amount shall be eliminated
18 with the orderly liquidation of all mortgages held under the 19 aforesaid separate accountability: And provided further,
20 That nothing in this subsection shall preclude the Association
21 from granting such usual and customary increases in the 22 amounts of outstanding commitments (resulting from in-
23 creased costs or otherwise) as have theretofore been covered
24 by like increases in commitments granted by the agencies of
25 the Federal Government insuring or guaranteeing the mort-

1 gages. There shall be excluded from the total amounts set
2 forth in this subsection and subsection ~~(e)~~ of this section
3 the amounts of any mortgages otherwise transferred by law
4 to the Association and held under the aforesaid separate
5 accountability.

6 “~~(d)~~ The Association may issue to the Secretary of the 7 Treasury its obligations in an amount outstanding at any
8 one time sufficient to enable the Association to carry out its 9 functions under this section; such obligations to mature not 10 more than five years from their respective dates of issue, to 11 be redeemable at the option of the Association before ma-
12 turity in such manner as may be stipulated in such obliga-
13 tions. Each such obligation shall bear interest at a rate
14 determined by the Secretary of the Treasury, taking into
15 consideration the current average rate on outstanding mar-
16 ketable obligations of the United States as of the last day of 17 the month preceding the issuance of the obligation of the 18 Association. The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to 19 purchase any obligations of the Association to be issued
20 under this section, and for such purpose the Secretary of the 21 Treasury is authorized to use as a public debt transaction
22 the proceeds from the sale of any securities issued under the
23 Second Liberty Bond Act, as now or hereafter in force, and
24 the purposes for which securities may be issued under the
25 Second Liberty Bond Act, as now or hereafter in force, are

1 extended to include any purchases of the Association's obliga-
 2 tions hereunder.

3 “(e) Of the $3,650,000,000 total amount of invest-
 4 ments, loans, purchases, and commitments heretofore au-
 5 thorized to be outstanding at any one time under this title
 6 III prior to the enactment of the Housing Act of 1954, a
 7 total of not to exceed $300,000,000 shall be applicable as
 8 provided in section 305 of this title, and a total of not to ex-
 9 ceed $3,350,000,000 shall be applicable as provided in sub-
 10 section (e) of this section.

11 “SEPARATE ACCOUNTABILITY

12 “SEC. 307. The Association shall establish and at all
 13 times maintain separate accountability for (a) its secondary
 14 market operations authorized by section 304 hereof, (b) its
 15 special assistance functions authorized by section 305 hereof,
 16 and (c) its management and liquidating functions authorized
 17 by section 306 hereof.

18 “BOARD OF DIRECTORS

19 “SEC. 308. (a) The Association shall have a Board
 20 of Directors consisting of five persons, one of whom shall be 21 the Housing and Home Finance Administrator as Chairman
 22 of the Board, and four of whom shall be appointed by said
 23 Administrator from among the officers or employees of 24 the Association, of the immediate office of said Administrator, 25 or (with the consent of the head of such department or

1 agency) of any other department or agency of the Federal
2 Government. The board of directors shall meet at the call
3 of its chairman, who shall require it to meet not less often 4 than once each month. Within the limitations of law, the 5 board shall determine the general policies which shall govern
6 the operations of the Association. The chairman of the 7 board shall select and effect the appointment of qualified per-8 sons to fill the offices of president and vice president, and 9 such other offices as may be provided for in the bylaws, with 10 such executive functions, powers, and duties as may be pre-11 scribed by the bylaws or by the board of directors, and 12 such persons shall be the executive officers of the Associa-
13 tion and shall discharge all such executive functions, powers,
14 and duties. The basic rate of compensation of the position
15 of president of the Association shall be the same as the basic 16 rate of compensation established for the heads of the con-
17 stituent agencies of the Housing and Home Finance Agency.
18 The members of the board, as such, shall not receive com-
19 pensation for their services.

20 "GENERAL POWERS

21 "SEC. 309. (a) The Association shall have power to 22 adopt, alter, and use a corporate seal, which shall be judi-23 cially noticed; by its board of directors, to adopt, amend, and 24 repeal bylaws governing the performance of the powers and 25 duties granted to or imposed upon it by law; to enter into

7 bylaws, all instruments necessary or appropriate in the 8 exercise of any of its powers; in its corporate name, to sue
9 and to be sued, and to complain and to defend, in any court

18 to hold, rent, maintain, modernize, renovate, improve, use,
19 and operate such property, and to sell, for cash or credit, 20 lease, or otherwise dispose of the same, at such time and in 21 such manner as and to the extent that the Association may 6 “(b) Except as may be otherwise provided in this title,

7 in the Government Corporation Control Act, or in other

14 “(c) The Association, including its franchise, capital,

22 other real property is taxed, and (2) the Association shall,
23 with respect to its secondary market operations under sec-
24 tion 304 after the cutoff date referred to in section 303 (d)-
25 of this title, pay annually to the Secretary of the Treasury,

1 for covering into miscellaneous receipts, an amount equiva-
2 lent to the amount of Federal income taxes for which it would
3 be subject if it were not exempt from such taxes with respect
4 to such secondary market operations.

5 “(d) The Chairman of the Board shall have power to 6 select and appoint or employ such officers, attorneys, em-
7 ployees, and agents, to vest them with such powers and 8 duties, and to fix and to cause the Association to pay such 9 compensation to them for their services, as he may deter-
10 mine, subject to the civil service and classification laws.
11 Bonds may be required for the faithful performance of their 12 duties, and the Association may pay the premiums therefor.
13 With the consent of any Government corporation or Federal 14 Reserve bank, or of any board, commission, independent
15 establishment, or executive department of the Government,
16 the Association may avail itself on a reimbursable basis of 17 the use of information, services, facilities, officers, and em-
18 ployees thereof, including any field service thereof, in carry-
19 ing out the provisions of this title.

20 “(e) No individual, association, partnership, or corpora-
21 tion, except the body corporate created by section 302 of 22 this title, shall hereafter use the words ‘Federal National 23 Mortgage Association’ or any combination of such words,
24 as the name or a part thereof under which he or it shall do
25 business. Every individual, partnership, association, or cor-

1 portion violating this prohibition shall be guilty of a mis-
2 demeanor and shall be punished by a fine of not exceeding 3 $100 or imprisonment not exceeding thirty days, or both, for 4 each day during which such violation is committed or 5 repeated.

6 “(f) In order that the Association may be supplied with 7 such forms of obligations or certificates as it may need for 8 issuance under this title, the Secretary of the Treasury is 9 authorized, upon request of the Association, to prepare such 23 upon.

6 principal and interest by, the United States.

7 “OBLIGATIONS OF ASSOCIATION LEGAL INVESTMENTS

8 “SEC. 311. All obligations issued by the Association

2 subdivisions in which the project is situated of at least 20
3 per centum of the annual contributions to be paid by the
4 Authority, the amounts of such payments in lieu of taxes shall

21 provided further, That, prior to execution of the contract for

1 be levied if the property were privately owned, or, in the
 2 case where the project is taxed, its estimate of the annual
 3 amount of the local cash contribution, and shall thereafter
 4 include the actual amounts in its annual reports. Contracts

 24 appointed by the Home Loan Bank Board; and (iv)
 25 unsafe or unsound operation. The Board shall have

1 exclusive jurisdiction to appoint a Supervisory Repre-

1 thereon is afforded to said association. Such hearing
2 shall be held in accordance with the provisions of the
3 Administrative Procedure Act and shall be subject to
4 review as therein provided and the review by the court
5 shall be upon the weight of the evidence. A conservator
6 shall have all the powers of the members, the directors,

10 The Board shall appoint only the Federal Savings and
11 Loan Insurance Corporation as receiver for any Federal
12 savings and loan association, which shall have power
13 as receiver to buy at its own sale subject to approval by

16 "CAPITALIZATION

17 "SEC. 303. (a) The Association shall have nonvoting
18 capital stock, to which the Secretary of the Treasury initially
19 shall subscribe as provided in subsections (d) and (e) of 20 this section. The stock of the Association shall have a par
21 value of $100 per share, and shall not be transferable ex-
22 cept on the books of the Association. At the option of the 23 Association such stock shall be retireable at par value at any 24 time, except that retirements of stock (other than stock
25 held by the Secretary of the Treasury) shall not be made if,

1 as a consequence thereof, the amount remaining outstand-
2 ing would be less than $100,000,000. With respect to such
3 stock held by him, the Secretary of the Treasury shall be
4 entitled to cumulative dividends for each fiscal year or por-
5 tion thereof, from the date or dates the capital represented by 6 such stock is initially utilized, until such stock is retired, at 7 rates determined by him at the beginning of each such fiscal 8 year, taking into consideration the current average interest
9 rate on outstanding marketable obligations of the United 10 States as of the last day of the preceding fiscal year. The 11 Secretary of the Treasury shall permit the retirement of the 12 stock held by him in the manner provided in this section.
13 Funds of the capital surplus and the general surplus accounts
14 of the Association shall be available to retire the capital stock
15 held by the Secretary of the Treasury as rapidly as the 16 Association shall deem feasible.

17 “(b) The Association shall accumulate funds for its
18 capital surplus account from private sources by requiring
19 each mortgage seller to make payments of nonrefundable
20 capital contributions equal to not less than 3 per centum of
21 the unpaid principal amount of mortgages therein involved
22 in purchases or contracts for purchases between such seller
23 and the Association, or such greater percentage as may from 24 time to time be determined by the Association. In addition,
25 the Association may impose charges or fees for its services

1 with the objective that all costs and expenses of its operations
2 should be within its income derived from such operations
3 and that such operations should be fully self-supporting.
4 All earnings from the operations of the Association shall
5 annually be transferred to its general surplus account. At 6 any time, funds of the general surplus account may, in the
7 discretion of the board of directors, be transferred to reserves.
8 All dividends shall be charged against the general surplus
9 account. This subsection (b) shall not apply to the special
10 assistance functions of the Association under section 305 of 11 this title or to the management and liquidating functions of 12 the Association under section 306 of this title.

13 “(c) Until such time as all of the stock held by the Sec-
14 retary of the Treasury has been retired and the Secretary 15 of the Treasury does not hold any of the obligations of the 16 Association purchased under section 304 (c) of this title
17 the Association shall issue, from time to time, to each mort-
18 gage seller its convertible certificates (only in denominations 19 of $100 or multiples thereof) evidencing any capital con-
20 tributions made by such seller pursuant to subsection (b) of 21 this section, which certificates shall not be transferable except 22 on the books of the Association. Subject to such terms and 23 conditions as may be prescribed by the board of directors, 24 such certificates shall be convertible into capital stock of the 25 Association having an equal par value, but no such conversion

1 shall be permitted or made until such time as all of the 2 outstanding capital stock of the Association held by the Sec-
3 retary of the Treasury has been retired and the Secretary of 4 the Treasury does not hold any of the obligations of the Asso-
5 ciation purchased under section 304 (c) of this title. There-
6 after, the Association may effect the direct issuance of stock in 7 lieu of and in the same manner as is provided in this subsec-
8 tion for the issuance of convertible certificates. Such dividends
9 as may be declared by the board of directors in its discretion
10 shall be paid by the Association to its stockholders, but in any
11 one fiscal year the general surplus account of the Association
12 shall not be reduced through the payment of dividends (other 13 than to the Secretary of the Treasury) which exceed in the 14 aggregate 5 per centum of the par value of the outstanding
15 stock of the Association.

16 “(d) Within ninety days following the effective date of 17 the Housing Act of 1954, as of the day following a cutoff
18 date to be determined by the Association, the Association is 19 authorized and directed to issue and deliver to the Secretary
20 of the Treasury, and the Secretary of the Treasury is au-
21 thorized and directed to accept, capital stock of the Associa-
22 tion having an aggregate par value equal to the sum of (1)
23 the amount of $21,000,000 (being the amount of the origi-
24 nal subscription for capital stock of $20,000,000 and paid-in 25 surplus of $1,000,000 of the Association) and (2) an

1 amount equal to the Association's surplus, surplus reserves,
2 and undistributed earnings, computed as of the close of the
3 cutoff date.

4 “(e) The capital stock of the Association delivered to 5 the Secretary of the Treasury pursuant to subsection (d) of
6 this section shall be in exchange for (1) the note or notes
7 evidencing the aforesaid original $21,000,000 (upon which
8 the accrued interest shall have been paid through the cutoff
9 date referred to in subsection (d) of this section), and (2)
10 the release to the Association of any and all rights or claims
11 which the United States might otherwise have or claim in 12 and to the Association's capital, surplus, surplus reserves, and 13 undistributed earnings, computed as of the close of the afore-
14 said cutoff date.

15 “(f) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, any
16 institution, including a national bank or State member bank
17 of the Federal Reserve System, trust company, or other bank-
18 ing organization, organized under any law of the United
19 States, including the laws relating to the District of Columbia,
20 shall be authorized to make payments to the Association of the 21 nonrefundable capital contributions referred to in subsection
22 (b) of this section, to receive stock or convertible certificates
23 of the Association evidencing such capital contributions, and 24 to hold or dispose of such stock or certificates, subject to the 25 provisions of this title.

1 “(g) As promptly as practicable after all of the capital
2 stock of the Association held by the Secretary of the Treasury
3 has been retired, the Housing and Home Finance Adminis-
4 trator shall transmit to the President for submission to the
5 Congress recommendations for such legislation as may be
6 necessary or desirable to make appropriate provisions to
7 transfer to the owners of the outstanding capital stock of the 8 Association the assets and liabilities of the Association in con-
9 nection with, and the control and management of, the second-
10 ary market operations of the Association under section 304
11 of this title in order that such operations may thereafter be 12 carried out by a privately owned and privately financed
13 corporation.

14 “SECONDARY MARKET OPERATIONS

15 “SEC. 304. (a) To carry out the purposes set forth in
16 paragraph (a) of section 301, the operations of the Asso-
17 ciation under this section shall be confined, so far as prac-
18 ticable, to mortgages which are deemed by the Association
19 to be of such quality, type, and class as to meet, generally,
20 the purchase standards imposed by private institutional mort-
21 gage investors, and the Association shall not purchase any 22 mortgage insured or guaranteed prior to the effective date
23 of the Housing Act of 1954. In the interest of assuring
24 sound operation, the prices to be paid by the Association
25 for mortgages purchased in its secondary market operations

1 under this section, should be established, from time to time,
2 at the market price for the particular class of mortgages
3 involved, as determined by the Association. The volume
4 of the Association's purchases and sales, and the establish-
5 ment of the purchase prices, sale prices, and charges or fees,
6 in its secondary market operations under this section, should 7 be determined by the Association from time to time, and such 8 determinations should be consistent with the objectives that 9 such purchases and sales should be effected only at such
10 prices and on such terms as will reasonably prevent excessive
11 use of the Association's facilities, and that the operations of 12 the Association under this section should be within its in-
13 come derived from such operations and that such operations
14 should be fully self-supporting.

15 “(b) For the purposes of this section, the Association
16 is authorized to issue, upon the approval of the Secretary of 17 the Treasury, and have outstanding at any one time obliga-
18 tions having such maturities and bearing such rate or rates
19 of interest as may be determined by the Association with the 20 approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, to be redeemable 21 at the option of the Association before maturity in such 22 manner as may be stipulated in such obligations; but the 23 aggregate amount of obligations of the Association under this 24 subsection outstanding at any one time shall not exceed ten
25 times the sum of its capital, capital surplus, general surplus,

1 reserves, and undistributed earnings, and in no event shall
2 any such obligations be issued if, at the time of such pro-
3 posed issuance, and as a consequence thereof, the resulting 4 aggregate amount of its outstanding obligations under this
5 subsection would exceed the amount of the Association's own-
6 ership pursuant to this section, free from any liens or encum-
7 brances, of cash, mortgages, and bonds or other obligations
8 of, or bonds or other obligations guaranteed as to principal
9 and interest by, the United States. The Association shall
10 insert appropriate language in all of its obligations issued
11 under this subsection clearly indicating that such obligations,
12 together with the interest thereon, are not guaranteed by
13 the United States and do not constitute a debt or obligation
14 of the United States or of any agency or instrumentality
15 thereof other than the Association. The Association is 16 authorized to purchase in the open market any of its obli-
17 gations outstanding under this subsection at any time and
18 at any price.

19 “(c) The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized in 20 his discretion to purchase any obligations issued pursuant
21 to subsection (b) of this section, as now or hereafter in force,
22 and for such purpose the Secretary of the Treasury is au-
23 thorized to use as a public debt transaction the proceeds of 24 the sale of any securities hereafter issued under the Second

1 Liberty Bond Act, as now or hereafter in force, and the pur-
2 poses for which securities may be issued under the Second
3 Liberty Bond Act, as now or hereafter in force, are ex-
4 tended to include such purchases. The Secretary of the
5 Treasury shall not at any time purchase any obligations
6 under this subsection if (1) all of the capital stock of the 7 Association held by the Secretary of the Treasury has been
8 retired, or (2) such purchase would increase the aggregate
9 principal amount of his then outstanding holdings of such
10 obligations under this subsection to an amount greater than 11 $500,000,000 plus an amount equal to the total of such 12 reductions in the maximum dollar amount prescribed by 13 section 306 (c) as have theretofore been effected pursuant
14 to that section: Provided, That such aggregate principal
15 amount under this subsection (c) shall in not event exceed 16 $1,000,000,000. Each purchase of obligations by the Sec-
17 retary of the Treasury under this subsection shall be upon
18 such terms and conditions as to yield a return at a rate
19 determined by the Secretary of the Treasury, taking into
20 consideration the current average rate on outstanding market-
21 able obligations of the United States as of the last day of
22 the month preceding the making of such purchase. The Sec-
23 retary of the Treasury may, at any time, sell, upon such 24 terms and conditions and at such price or prices as he shall
25 determine, any of the obligations acquired by him under

1 this subsection. All redemptions, purchases, and sales by
2 the Secretary of the Treasury of such obligations under this
3 subsection shall be treated as public debt transactions of the
4 United States.

5 “(d) The Association may not purchase participations
6 or make any advance contracts or commitments to purchase
7 mortgages for its operations under this section, except that
8 the Association may, in the discretion of its board of directors,
9 issue a purchase contract (which shall not be assignable or 10 transferable except with the consent of the Association) in 11 an amount not exceeding the amount of the sale of mortgages
12 purchased from the Association, entitling the holder thereof
13 to sell to the Association mortgages in the amount of the 14 contract, upon such terms and conditions as the Association
15 may prescribe.

16 “SPECIAL ASSISTANCE FUNCTIONS

17 SEC. 305. (a) To carry out the purposes set forth in 18 paragraph (b) of section 301, the President, after taking 19 into account (1) the conditions in the building industry and 20 the national economy and (2) conditions affecting the home
21 mortgage investment market, generally, or affecting various 22 types or classifications of home mortgages, or both, and after 23 determining that such action is in the public interest, may 24 under this section authorize the Association, for such period
25 of time and to such extent as he shall prescribe, to exercise

1 its powers to make commitments to purchase and to purchase
2 such types, classes, or categories of home mortgages (includ-
3 ing participations therein) as he shall determine.

4 “(b) The operations of the Association under this sec-
5 tion shall be confined, so far as practicable, to mortgages
6 (including participations) which are deemed by the Asso-
7 ciation to be of such quality as to meet, substantially and
8 generally, the purchase standards imposed by private insti-
9 tutional mortgage investors but which, at the time of sub-
10 mission of the mortgages to the Association for purchase, are 11 not necessarily readily acceptable to such investors. Sub-
12 ject to the provisions of this section, the prices to be paid
13 by the Association for mortgages purchased in its opera-
14 tions under this section shall be established from time to 15 time by the Association. The Association shall impose
16 charges or fees for its services under this section with the 17 objective that all costs and expenses of its operations under 18 this section should be within its income derived from such 19 operations and that such operations should be fully self-
20 supporting.

21 “(c) The total amount of purchases and commitments
22 authorized by the President pursuant to subsection (a) of 23 this section shall not exceed $200,000,000 outstanding at 24 any one time: Provided, That, notwithstanding such limita-
25 tion, the President pursuant to subsection (a) of this section

1 may also authorize the Association to exercise its powers
2 to enter into commitments to purchase immediate partici-
3 pations and to make related deferred participation agree-
4 ments as hereinafter in this subsection provided, but 5 only to the extent that the total amount of such immediate
6 participation commitments and purchases pursuant thereto
7 (but not including the amount of any related deferred par-
8 ticipation agreements or purchases pursuant thereto) shall
9 not in any event exceed $100,000,000 outstanding at any
10 one time, and any such deferred participation agreements
11 shall be made by the Association only on the basis of a
12 commitment by it to purchase an immediate participation
13 of a 20 per centum undivided interest in each mortgage and
14 a related deferred participation agreement by the Asso-
15 ciation to purchase the remaining outstanding interest in
16 such mortgage conditional upon the occurrence of such a
17 default as gives rise to the right to foreclose.

18 “(d) The Association may issue to the Secretary of 19 the Treasury its obligations in an amount outstanding at any
20 one time sufficient to enable the Association to carry out
21 its functions under this section, such obligation to mature
22 not more than five years from their respective dates of issue,
23 to be redeemable at the option of the Association before
24 maturity in such manner as may be stipulated in such obliga-
25 tions. Each such obligation shall bear interest at a rate

1 determined by the Secretary of the Treasury, taking into
2 consideration the current average rate on outstanding mar-
3 ketable obligations of the United States as of the last day
4 of the month preceding the issuance of the obligation of the
5 Association. The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to
6 purchase any obligations of the Association to be issued under
7 this section, and for such purpose the Secretary of the Treas-
8 ury is authorized to use as a public debt transaction the
9 proceeds from the sale of any securities issued under the
10 Second Liberty Bond Act, as now or hereafter in force, and
11 the purposes for which securities may be issued under the
12 Second Liberty Bond Act, as now or hereafter in force, are 13 extended to include any purchases of the Association's
14 obligations hereunder.

15 “MANAGEMENT AND LIQUIDATING FUNCTIONS

16 “SEC. 306. (a) To carry out the purposes set forth in 17 paragraph (c) of section 301, the Association is authorized
18 and directed, as of the close of the cutoff date determined
19 by the Association pursuant to section 303 (d) of this title,
20 to establish separate accountability for all of its assets and
21 liabilities (exclusive of capital, surplus, surplus reserves, and
22 undistributed earnings to be evidenced by capital stock as
23 provided in section 303 (d) hereof, but inclusive of all rights
24 and obligations under any outstanding contracts), and to
25 maintain such separate accountability for the management

1 and orderly liquidation of such assets and liabilities as pro-
2 vided in this section.

3 “(b) For the purposes of this section and to assure that,
4 to the maximum extent, and as rapidly as possible, private
5 financing will be substituted for Treasury borrowings other-
6 wise required to carry mortgages held under the aforesaid
7 separate accountability, the Association is authorized to issue,
8 upon the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, and have
9 outstanding at any one time obligations having such matu-
10 rities and bearing such rate or rates of interest as may be 11 determined by the Association with the approval of the Sec-
12 retary of the Treasury, to be redeemable at the option of the 13 Association before maturity in such manner as may be stipu-
14 lated in such obligations; but in no event shall any such 15 obligations be issued if, at the time of such proposed issuance,
16 and as a consequence thereof, the resulting aggregate amount 17 of its outstanding obligations under this subsection would 18 exceed the amount of the Association's ownership under the 19 aforesaid separate accountability, free from any liens or
20 encumbrances, of cash, mortgages, and bonds or other
21 obligations of, or bonds or other obligations guaranteed
22 as to principal and interest by, the United States. The pro-
23 ceeds of any private financing effected under this subsection
24 shall be paid to the Secretary of the Treasury in reduction of 25 the indebtedness of the Association to the Secretary of the

1 Treasury under the aforesaid separate accountability. The
2 Association shall insert appropriate language in all of its
3 obligations issued under this subsection clearly indicating
4 that such obligations, together with the interest thereon, are
5 not guaranteed by the United States and do not constitute a
6 debt or obligation of the United States or of any agency
7 or instrumentality thereof other than the Association. The 8 Association is authorized to purchase in the open market any
9 of its obligations outstanding under this subsection at any
10 time and at any price.

11 “(c) No mortgage shall be purchased by the Associa-
12 tion in its operations under this section except pursuant
13 to and in accordance with the terms of a contract or commit-
14 ment to purchase the same made prior to the cutoff date
15 provided for in section 303 (d), which contract or commit-
16 ment became a part of the aforesaid separate accountability,
17 and the total amount of mortgages and commitments held by
18 the Association under this section shall not, in any event,
19 exceed $3,350,000,000: Provided, That such maximum
20 amount shall be progressively reduced by the amount of 21 cash realizations on account of principal of mortgages held
22 under the aforesaid separate accountability and by cancella-
23 tion of any commitments to purchase mortgages thereunder,
24 as reflected by the books of the Association, with the objective
25 that the entire aforesaid maximum amount shall be eliminated

1 with the orderly liquidation of all mortgages held under the
2 aforesaid separate accountability: And provided further,
3 That nothing in this subsection shall preclude the Association
4 from granting such usual and customary increases in the
5 amounts of outstanding commitments (resulting from in-
6 creased costs or otherwise) as have theretofore been covered
7 by like increases in commitments granted by the agencies of
8 the Federal Government insuring or guaranteeing the mort-
9 gages. There shall be excluded from the total amounts set
10 forth in this subsection and subsection (e) of this section
11 the amounts of any mortgages otherwise transferred by law
12 to the Association and held under the aforesaid separate
13 accountability.

14 “(d) The Association may issue to the Secretary of the 15 Treasury its obligations in an amount outstanding at any 16 one time sufficient to enable the Association to carry out its 17 functions under this section, such obligations to mature not 18 more than five years from their respective dates of issue, to 19 be redeemable at the option of the Association before ma-
20 turity in such manner as may be stipulated in such obliga-
21 tions. Each such obligation shall bear interest at a rate
22 determined by the Secretary of the Treasury, taking into
23 consideration the current average rate on outstanding mar-
24 ketable obligations of the United States as of the last day of 25 the month preceding the issuance of the obligation of the

1 Association. The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to
2 purchase any obligations of the Association to be issued
3 under this section, and for such purpose the Secretary of the 4 Treasury is authorized to use as a public debt transaction
5 the proceeds from the sale of any securities issued under the
6 Second Liberty Bond Act, as now or hereafter in force, and
7 the purposes for which securities may be issued under the
8 Second Liberty Bond Act, as now or hereafter in force, are
9 extended to include any purchases of the Association's obliga-
10 tions hereunder.

11 “(e) Of the $3,650,000,000 total amount of invest-

5 areas, and the approximate degree of the benefit to such other 6 areas is estimated by the Administrator at 20 per centum or 7 more of the total benefits, the Administrator shall provide that,
8 for the purpose of computing the amount of the local grants-
9 in-aid for the project, there shall be included only such portion 10 of the cost of such facility as the Administrator estimates to 11 be proportionate to the approximate degree of the benefit of 12 such facility to the urban renewal area: And provided further,
13 That for the purpose of computing the amount of local grants-14 in-aid under this section 110 (d), the estimated cost (as 15 determined by the Administrator) of parks, playgrounds,

24 plan.

6 1953) during which the contract for loan or advance is made,
7 which applicable rate for each six-month period shall be
8 determined by the Secretary of the Treasury by estimating
9 the average yield to maturity, on the basis of daily closing
10 market bid quotations or prices during the month of May
11 or the month of November, as the case may be, next preced-
12 ing such six-month period, on all outstanding marketable
13 obligations of the United States having a maturity date of 14 fifteen or more years from the first day of such month of May 15 or November, and by adjusting such estimated average an-
16 nual yield to the nearest one-eighth of 1 per centum. Any
17 contract for loan made may be revised or superseded by a
18 later contract, so that the going Federal rate, on the basis
19 of which the interest rate on the loan is fixed, shall mean
20 the going Federal rate, as herein defined, on the date that
21 such contract is revised or superseded by such later contract.

Representative or two in the House to speak for them.

I think that once the citizens of the District of Columbia were granted the voting privilege, once they were given true home rule, it would be found that the District of Columbia legislation passed by Congress would be greatly modified from the kind of legislation which too frequently passes Congress. After all, there is nothing the people of the District of Columbia can do about the situation, as citizens of the United States, politically speaking, because they are disfranchised citizens.

I shall not be a party to that kind of unfair legislation which is proposed for the District of Columbia.

Therefore, I shall stand on the record I made in the committee today, and upon the argument I have just completed on the floor of the Senate.

ADJOURNMENT TO MONDAY

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, in accordance with the unanimous-consent agreement already entered, I move that the Senate now adjourn until Monday next at 12 o'clock noon.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 6 o'clock and 58 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned, the adjournment being under the order previously entered, until Monday, April 5, 1954, at 12 o'clock meridian.

House of Representatives

THURSDAY, APRIL 1, 1954

The House met at 11 o'clock a. m.
The Chaplain, Rev. Bernard Braskamp, D. D., offered the following prayer:

O Thou who art the God and Father of us all, we thank Thee for the privilege of communing with Thee in the fellowship of prayer.

We pray that Thou wilt come nearer unto us with Thy companionship and counsel than we have ever known.

May we be inspired with a new and greater faith in Thy divine power and wisdom, for we are very conscious of our own limitations as we face hard tasks and heavy burdens.

Wilt Thou bless every effort that the Congress is making to bring more of the comforts and happiness of home to all the members of the human family.

Grant that at the eventide of this day we may not be ashamed to leave the record of our work in Thy hands.

Hear us in Christ's name. Amen.

INTERIOR DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATION BILL, 1955

Mr. FENTON, from the Committee on Appropriations and on behalf of Mr. JENSEN, reported the bill (H. R. 8680) making appropriations for the Department of the Interior for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1955, and for other purposes, which was read a first and second time and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union and ordered to be printed.

Mr. KIRWAN reserved all points of order on the bill.

(Mr. KERSTEN of Wisconsin asked and was given permission to extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD.)

[Mr. KERSTEN of Wisconsin's remarks will appear hereafter in the Appendix.]

HOUSING ACT OF 1954

Mr. ELLSWORTH. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 485 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 7839) to aid in the provision and improvement of housing, the elimination and prevention of slums, and the conservation and development of urban communities, and all points of order against said bill are hereby waived. After general debate, which shall be confined to the bill, and shall continue not to exceed 3 hours, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Banking and Currency, the bill shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule. It shall be in order to consider without the intervention of any point of order the substitute amendment recommended by the Committee on Banking and Currency now in the bill, and such substitute for the purpose of amendment shall be considered under the 5-minute rule as an original bill. At the conclusion of such consideration the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted, and any Member may demand a separate vote in the House on any of the amendments adopted in the Committee of the Whole to the bill or committee substitute. The previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit with or without instructions.

Mr. ELLSWORTH. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SMITH], and at this time I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, the resolution before us is a rule making in order consideration of the bill H. R. 7839, otherwise known as the housing bill, reported to the House by the Committee on Banking and Currency. The rule which makes this bill in order is a wide-open rule in every respect.

The bill, as Members of the House will note, consists of an amendment which strikes out the original bill and inserts language prepared by the committee in the form of a new bill. The rule takes this situation into consideration by providing, first of all, that there can be no point of order made against consideration of the substitute, then that the substitute, or committee amendment, shall be considered under the 5-minute rule as an original bill. So for all practical purposes we are considering not a committee amendment, but an original bill.

In addition to the provision in the rule just mentioned, namely, that the substitute or the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute be considered as an original bill, the Committee on Rules also provided in the resolution that any Member may demand a separate vote in the House on any amendment adopted in the Committee of the Whole to the bill or to the committee substitute.

As a further protection to all Members of the House, one motion to recommit is provided in the rule, and the motion to recommit may be made with or without instructions.

So, Mr. Speaker, the rule before us gives the House utter freedom to work its will on the bill when this rule is adopted. The rule provides for 3 hours of general debate, the time to be equally divided between the majority and the minority.

The bill as reported deals mostly with the recommendations of the advisory committee which was appointed by the President and has certain objectives.

First. Maintaining a high volume of residential construction, with the assistance of mortgage insurance, secondary market, and other credit facilities of the Federal Government;

Second. Providing a more even flow of home mortgage credit to all areas and assuring flexibility in home mortgage terms to keep pace with general economic conditions;

Third. Placing much greater emphasis on improving and conserving our existing supply of housing through—

(a) FHA insurance programs which will assist repair and rehabilitation work of homeowners, provide mortgage insurance for rehabilitation projects, and bring mortgage terms for existing housing up to those applicable to new housing; and

(b) Financial assistance to help the community attack on a new broad basis its overall problem of urban blight and deterioration through rehabilitation and conservation, as well as slum clearance and urban redevelopment;

Fourth. Providing mortgage insurance to assist in bringing new privately built housing within the financial reach of a larger segment of our increasing population; and Fifth. Substituting private sources of funds for Government expenditures wherever possible, especially in connection with the provision of a secondary market for home mortgages.

Mr. Speaker, this rule provides opportunity for the House to work its will completely on this legislation, and I urge a favorable vote on the rule.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. MADDEN].

(Mr. MADDEN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, I am not opposed to the adoption of this rule, but there are some provisions in the bill which I am opposed to.

After debate and during the 5-minute rule, there must be major amendments adopted to provide for a practical method wherein people who are ousted from homes in slum areas can secure suitable housing within a reasonable price range. There is no provision in this bill for public housing. As the bill now stands, it is nothing more than a piece of political legislation to mislead millions of potential low-income home seekers that this administration is providing a method of aiding them in securing homes at a reasonable cost. As this bill is now written, it is a lenders or investors bill. This bill, for no reason whatsoever, adds an interest rate of 1 percent to the already high-interest rate which veterans and other home seekers are compelled to pay on long-time housing purchases.

We heard a great deal during the 1952 campaign by Candidate Eisenhower and leaders of the Republican Party in speeches delivered in Chicago, New York, Detroit, and other critical housing areas, regarding their endorsement of a program to clear these areas of slums, substandard dwellings and trailer camps. This program, as it was outlined during the campaign, was beautiful, sounded beautiful, but, only yesterday, on the floor of this House, we saw where the Appropriations Committee, by providing a wholly inadequate appropriation, killed any hope that the low-income home purchaser had to secure aid for proper housing during this administration. It was revealed during the hearings of the Banking and Currency Committee that a $7,600 home which includes the lot, could be purchased by a family living in a slum area at monthly payments of $67 a month over a period of 40 years. Considering the increased rate of interest and other carrying charges involved, if the purchaser continued the transaction up to the 40th year, his home would have cost him in the neighborhood of $32,000. In most instances, a home of this type would almost be considered a slum dwelling after 15 or 20 years. I am merely mentioning this fact to substantiate my contention that this bill is a lenders and investors piece of legislation and not a fulfillment of the promises made by this administration during the campaign to aid congested areas in securing low-priced housing.

The increase of 1-percent interest set out in this bill means that eventually this increased interest rate will spread over all debts, city and school district bonds, State debts, national debts, and charge accounts. It is estimated that the total amount of indebtedness for this increased 1-percent interest will cover over $600 billion of public and private indebtedness. One can see where this administration is using indirectly its added tight money policy under the cover of providing homes for families in the low-income bracket.

President Eisenhower stated over a month and a half ago that if unemployment continued beyond the month of March the Government would start an economic program which would bring more purchasing power into the pockets of millions throughout the country so that factories and industries could resume production. This legislation, with its high interest-bearing provision, will work directly in the opposite direction that President Eisenhower planned on using in order to increase purchasing power. In other words, this bill will take added millions out of the pockets of the consumers of America each year, and as the years pass the siphoning of purchasing-power money will become greater. At hearings before the Banking and Currency Committee the financing plan set out in this so-called housing bill was referred to as a fraud and a hoax by one of the housing officials who stated it was absolutely unworkable. Up to this time the President's dynamic program, which included slum clearance and other laudable and necessary legislation, has fallen far short of any practical and affirmative steps toward accomplishing the same. Unless this legislation is completely changed through amendments, either on the floor of this House or in the other body, slum clearance and the elimination of substandard dwellings will fall by the wayside along with so many of the other beautiful promises made by the Republican leadership in the campaign of 1952.

In the Calumet industrial area of northwest Indiana a great number of veterans, steelworkers, and other groups want to move from slum areas and trailer camps, but they must have homes in which to live. Ninety percent of these workers cannot purchase $12,000 or $15,000 homes. The high cost of living prohibits those families from that home market. Thousands of these workers are now working 3 and 4 days a week, which further congests the unemployment problem. This housing legislation could be made into an instrument to provide employment as well as homeowners. This cannot be accomplished by the bankers', builders', and investors' bill which is now under consideration.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. FISHER].

Mr. ELLSWORTH. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 additional minutes to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. FISHER. Mr. Speaker, in view of the understanding that an attempt will be made here today to revive and restore the public housing program after it was killed by Congress last year, I desire to address myself to that subject at this time.

The attempt to revive socialized housing, which has been so thoroughly discredited in recent years, brings the House to grip with one of the most important and significant issues that will be acted upon at this session of the Congress. Billions of dollars are involved. Deficit spending, an increased public debt is involved. The resumption of socialism in dealing with a part of America's housing is involved. Big government, centralized government, all the evils of bureaucracy are involved. So let us be sure we understand, as nearly as we can, what this is all about.

Let us take a brief look at the history of this thing. As you might expect, the first public housing began as a depression emergency measure back in 1933. Under the old National Industrial Recovery Act, with a touch of timidity, came the first authorization for socialism in housing in America. It did not look good, here in free enterprise America, but Rexwell Tugwell and his contemporaries said it was a depression measure and the emergency justified it. Only a few houses were involved, and little notice was given to the venture.

Then in 1937 the public housing proponents became a bit bolder. There had by that time been some softening of the natural resistance in this country to state socialism of that type. So in that year a more ambitious public housing program was authorized, but limited to only $28 million a year in subsidies. It seems that by having the Federal Government pay part of the rent bills for people each month some political value had been discovered in such a scheme, and so it began to grow. The CIO took it up, and has been one of the chief sponsors, along with the Americans for Democratic Action, since that time.

The next big drive came in 1949. By then resistance had been somewhat neutralized, and the proposal was bold and daring. No longer justified as a depression emergency, it was presented in 1949, with scant apology, in a pretense of respectability. Many false premises had been used in a nationwide scheme to snare endorsements and sell local unsuspecting groups and organizations. Those of you who were here then recall, I am sure, the lobby that was created from coast to coast—described by some as the best organized lobby in legislative history.

Someone in the House had the temerity to suggest that the program was going to cost a lot more money than the sugar-coated package would indicate. I believe it was the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WOLCOTT], who estimated the cost at $16 billion. That was promptly discounted by the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. SPENCE], who stated on the floor:

We hear a great deal of talk about $16 billion being spent over a period of 40 years. Experience has shown that the expenditures will not be anything like $16 billion. I have no doubt that $10 billion of $11 billion will be the limit of expenditures under this bill.

Now we know, based upon experience and upon the assumption that the projects will be occupied by those contemplated in the 1949 act, that the total cost will be $17 billion or more. And this does not include the high Federal administrative cost. It only includes the allowable Federal subsidies and the Federal income-tax losses on public-housing bonds held by investors.

Rushing to the relief of those who raised questions about the cost of the program, even President Truman got into the act, again, and dispatched an urgent letter to the Speaker saying, in part:

The facts are that the amount of money provided in H. R. 4009 to build 1,050,000 dwelling units will permit an average cost, at the most, of $8,465.

But what are the facts in 1954? According to the statistics branch of the Public Housing Administration, average costs are running as high as $12,107, just for the construction of a single apartment. Thus, the facts show that Mr. Truman was at least 50 percent off in the incorrect estimate he gave the Congress.

Now, Mr. Speaker, that must have been salesmanship at its best. Because it paid off. Some of the dubious Members decided that since the program would not cost so much, after all, they might as well go along and see how it would work out. And by now they have seen, and since 1949 many of those who originally voted for public housing have, with becoming statesmanship, realized the error and have voted to limit and reduce the evil.

Let me refer a little more to what happened in 1949. Some of you who are here now were not here then. And indeed some who were here then are not here now. The gentleman from Kansas [Mr.

REES] offered an amendment to strike the public housing feature from the bill. Battlegrounds were drawn, and on a record vote taken on that memorable day, June 29, 1949, the Rees amendment was defeated by the narrow margin of 4 votes—205 to 209. If only three Members who voted for socialized housing had voted the other way America would have been saved from this fantastically expensive experiment in socialized housing.

Well, for just whatever interest it may be to you, I will inform you that out of the 205 who resisted the pressures and voted against public housing in 1949, 136 of them are still here. Of the 209 who voted for socialized housing in 1949, 115 of them are still in Congress. I would not suggest, Mr. Speaker, that the one vote caused the reelection or the defeat of any one Member, or certainly comparatively few. But, percentagewise, the record shows that those of us who foresaw the evils and the dangers ahead fared a little better with our constituents than has been true with the proponents.

Now let me trace, very briefly, the legislative history of this program since 1949. Although the public-housing crowd were able to obtain unprecedented authority to bind the Government on mammoth housing projects without the consent of Congress, in the initiation of these projects, it was still necessary for them to come to Congress for some semblance of authority for new starts each year. Except for the initiative of our Appropriations Committee and of this House, taken subsequent to the enactment of the 1949 housing bill, Congress would not have any opportunity whatever to pass on authorizations for starts of new public housing units.

History reveals that it was not long after the enactment of the public housing law of 1949 until the American people began to wake up. People, you know, have a way of finding out things. The New York Times in a recent editorial wisely stated:

Never underestimate the intelligence of the American people, and never underestimate their knowledge of the facts in a given situation.

Many city councils had become victims of the public housing sales experts who roamed the country spending a million dollars a year in travel expense telling city councils that here was a chance to get something for nothing. Then they woke up, and the local people woke up. The news got around that the cost of these projects would be extremely high. They learned that all that glitters is not necessarily gold. They learned that the local communities had obligated themselves to forego all local taxes for a period of 40 years and that the Federal contribution in lieu of taxes was no more than 25 percent of the loss in what full local taxes would have been. They learned that all the bonds sold to finance such projects were tax free—written that way into the Housing Act of 1949—and that the Federal Government would lose tens of millions of dollars in revenue as a result.

They learned that they had obligated themselves to provide many utilities, such as sewerage, garbage disposal, fire and police protection, schooling facilities, and other services to the favored few who occupied the public housing projects—and all for free for 40 years. Yes; they learned that in order for a few local people to get rent at a third of the cost to other local people living across the street from them a burden was unloaded on the local community for a period of 40 years, and that there was nothing they could do about it—and nothing any future city council could do about it.

So, as evidence of public alarm and enlightenment, once they found out the plain truth, out of 78 local referendums that have been conducted, according to the Public Housing Authority itself, 48 of them were against public housing projects in local communities. And at least 45 city councils have voted against projects.

Speaking of referendums, Mr. Speaker, to talk about referendums is like waving red flags in front of the chronic public housers. They literally despise the word. In 1949 the gentleman from Florida [Mr. SIKES] offered an amendment to require local referendums. It was bitterly fought, believe it or not. It resulted in a tie vote in the Committee of the Whole, and the Chairman cast the deciding vote—against requiring local people to pass on the subject.

The Congress began to feel the public reaction. So, in 1951, my distinguished colleague from Texas, Mr. Gossett, who unfortunately for the country is no longer with us, although succeeded by one of our most able and conscientious Members [Mr. IKARD]—offered an amendment to an independent offices appropriation bill to reduce new housing starts to 5,000 for the following year. On a record vote it was approved by a vote of 181 to 113, with a number of Members who in 1949 voted for the program then realizing their mistake voting against continuing the program.

Then, the following year, in 1952, I offered a similar amendment to the appropriation bill and again on a record vote my amendment was adopted by a vote of 192 to 168. Over in the other body a record vote on the same amendment was taken a few days later, and 37 voted for 45,000 while 31 voted for the 5,000.

Last year, it will be recalled, the House committee, to its everlasting credit, brought out a bill which denied authorization for any new starts. The committee report stated:

The original budget estimates, in carrying out the provisions of the Housing Act of 1949 for the fiscal year 1954, proposed 75,000 dwelling units—

That was in the Truman budget—

This estimate subsequently was reduced in a revised estimate to authorize 35,000 units. The committee is of the opinion that continuation of this program is not justified and is not in accord with the program for economy and for a balanced budget.

And the House overwhelmingly and enthusiastically sustained the committee in that sound and courageous report. Again, on a record vote the House voted 245 to 157 against a motion by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. YATES] to recommit with instructions to authorize 35,000 units.

The conference report, it will be recalled, settled on 20,000. The able gentleman from California [Mr. PHILLIPS] in presenting the conference report, stated:

The Government is firmly committed, in the opinion of the subcommittee and the conferees, to contract for 8,189 units. Those are legal and binding contracts and we have no desire to attempt to stop them. In addition to the 8,189 prior units there are 834 which make a total of 9,023 units. In addition to that, there are 33,003 units contracted for which are subject to audit. These have had the contract reopened and have had what we call an escape clause or provision written in which says that they have no legal right, and that they are standing in line, and if and when the Congress at some future date allows more houses they have a priority.

And then the gentleman from California assured the House:

I believe that these 20,000 houses for this year should end this public housing program, and that in the future we should depend upon private industry with the help of FHA and similar supporting programs to carry on local construction.

The gentleman from California [Mr. PHILLIPS] was strongly supported in that position by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. THOMAS]. He very properly and eloquently reminded the House of the fantastic cost of this program; of the fact that the program would take care of one-tenth of those of comparable need who occupy them; of the further fact that there can be no more justification for paying part of the rent bills for these favored few than there would be to pay part of their medical bills or their grocery bills. And the House approved the action of the conferees, and by doing so spelled out the end of public housing in America unless some future Congress should see fit to reverse that action. And I understand such an attempt will take place here today.

In view of the history of this program, it is difficult to believe that today, after the great achievement of last year, we will march back down the hill. It is difficult for me, at least, to believe, that those who have so often reminded the country of the evil of this socialistic scheme will now faint and falter and fall at the feet of the foe.

If public housing was bad in 1949, as a matter of principle, it is equally as bad in 1954.

If, as a matter of principle, public housing was bad on yesterday, then as a matter of principle it is bad today. We have involved here a basic principle of government with the implications that are inescapable here in free enterprise America. I realize that political expediency is sometimes a powerful factor in legislation. But surely not when a basic principle is involved, as is true here today.

I have heard it rumored around here that some will compromise their position on the theory that the program will be resumed a little, because a little will not hurt very much. That is remindful of the contention that just a little pregnancy will not hurt—very much. This thing is either bad or it is good, as a matter of principle, and it should be so treated here today. Do you favor home ownership, or do you favor State ownership? Over the long pull the two just do not mix. So we cannot escape our responsibility here today. The great Edmund Burke once said:

For evil to succeed, it is only necessary for good men to do nothing.

The decision today will indeed be a momentous one. An English poet once wrote that—

Vice is a monster of such frightful mien
As, to be hated, needs but to be seen;
But, seen too oft, familiar with its face,
We first endure, then pity, then embrace.

Let us hope, Mr. Speaker, in this day of decision, that the traditional enemies of state socialism have not endured, then pitied, and now found to embrace the most socialistic and indefensible scheme that has ever been undertaken by the American Government.

Mr. ELLSWORTH. Mr. Speaker, I yield the gentleman 5 additional minutes.

Mr. COLMER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a brief question?

Mr. FISHER. I yield to the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. COLMER. I want to compliment the gentleman on the splendid work that he did when he offered the amendment before. I want to ask the gentleman if it is not a fact that if this ambitious program, as originally laid out for 40 years, were put into effect, and when people moved into all of the units, if we required them to take a deed in fee simple, without any obligation whatever, to the property that they took over, would the Federal Government not be better off in excess of $14 billion?

Mr. FISHER. The gentleman is absolutely correct. It is substantiated by the records and facts. It would be much better to give them a deed to these things instead of carrying this load by issuing bonds that are tax free for 40 years to raise the amount of revenue for the United States Treasury. The gentleman is absolutely correct.

(Mr. McCORMACK asked and was given permission to extend his remarks at this point and include two letters from the Comptroller General of the United States to the Administrator of the Housing and Home Finance Agency.)

(The letters referred to are as follows:)

COMPTROLLER GENERAL
OF THE UNITED STATES,
Washington, May 18, 1953.

The ADMINISTRATOR,
Housing and Home Finance Agency.

MY DEAR MR. ADMINISTRATOR: Reference is made to your letter of May 5, 1953, requesting a decision as to whether the second clause of the third proviso under the heading "Public Housing Administration" of the Independent Offices Appropriation Act, 1953 (66 Stat. 393, 403), is being correctly interpreted.

The proviso in its entirety reads:

"Provided further, That notwithstanding the provisions of the United States Housing Act of 1937, as amended, the Public Housing Administration shall not, with respect to projects initiated after March 1, 1949, (1) authorize during the fiscal year 1953 the commencement of construction of in excess of 35,000 dwelling units, or (2) after the date of approval of this act, enter into any agreement, contract, or other arrangement which will bind the Public Housing Administration with respect to loans, annual contributions, or authorizations for commencement of construction, for dwelling units aggregating in excess of 35,000 to be authorized for commencement of construction during any 1 fiscal year subsequent to the fiscal year 1953, unless a greater number of units is hereafter authorized by the Congress."

You state that three possible interpretations may be placed upon the second clause, as follows:

"1. That, from and after the effective date thereof, the PHA may continue to enter into loan and annual contributions contracts up to the entire 810,000 unit maximum authorized by section 10 (e) of the United States Housing Act of 1937, as amended, provided there is included in all such contracts entered into after said effective date provisions which make it clear that, under the terms of such contract, the PHA is in no way obligated to authorize the commencement of the construction of any of the units covered by such contract if such action would result in the commencement of the construction, during any fiscal year, of more than 35,000 units.

"2. That, from and after the effective date thereof, the PHA shall not, in 1 fiscal year, enter into any loan and annual contributions contracts which cover a greater number of units than is necessary for PHA to be in a position to continue to authorize the commencement of the construction at a rate of 35,000 units in succeeding fiscal years, but without increasing the outstanding backlog carried over from 1 fiscal year to the next, provided there is included in all such contracts entered into after said effective date provisions which make it clear that, under the terms of such contract, the PHA is in no way obligated to authorize the commencement of the construction of any of the units covered by such contract if such action would result in the commencement of the construction, during any fiscal year, of more than 35,000 units, or such greater number as thereafter might be authorized by the Congress for any fiscal year.

"3. That, from and after the effective date thereof, the PHA shall not enter into any new contracts for loans and annual contributions which would result in the number of units covered by such contracts and on which construction has not commenced exceeding 35,000 units at any time."

For reasons discussed in a statement dated May 5, 1953, by the Public Housing Commissioner, accompanying your letter, the second of these interpretations is being followed by the Public Housing Administration in administering the low-rent housing program. Among other things, it is pointed out that—

"The PHA has proceeded under the assumption that the objective called for by the proviso was to have 35,000 units ready for construction during the fiscal year 1953 and each subsequent fiscal year; and that its administration of the workload leading up to the point of construction, including entering into annual contributions contracts, preliminary loan contracts and program reservations, should be geared to that goal, making certain that nothing it did would bind it to authorize commencement of construction at faster rate than that provided by the proviso. In brief, the Agency felt that the proviso simply reduced the annual rate of 135,000 units, more or less, in the basic United States Housing Act to 35,000 units, and required it to reduce the rate of operations all along the line accordingly."

The necessity of preparing well in advance for the point at which construction can be authorized is explained as follows:

"It has been the experience of the Agency under the United States Housing Act of 1937, as amended, that in order to create a sufficient workload to result in a certain number of units ready for construction in a particular fiscal year, it was necessary to place many more than that under annual contributions contracts (up to the annual contributions contract a local housing authority cannot even start acquiring sites), a still larger number under preliminary contracts (where preliminary loans for surveys and planning were necessary) and still more under program reservations. This practice is necessary for two obvious reasons: (1) A certain number of projects under program reservations never reach the point of either preliminary loan contracts or annual contributions contracts, and a lesser number drop out between the preliminary loan contract stage and the annual contributions contract stage, (2) some projects progress from the stage of program reservation, preliminary loan contract, or annual contributions contract, to the construction stage in a relatively short time; others, for various reasons such as the size of the project, problems of design, cost, site selection and acquisition, reconciliation of local differences of opinion, relocation of slum-site dwellers, etc., may take years to reach the point of construction."

It is understood from the Commissioner's statements that the Public Housing Administration has considered sound administration to dictate maintenance of a balance between development and final authorization of projects, so that the number of units ready for construction would not be greater than legally could be begun under the statutory limitations and yet would be large enough to result in a sufficient number of units ready for construction as contemplated under the United States Housing Act of 1937, as amended. Also, it is noted that in order to make certain that any underestimation of units becoming ready for construction in a given year would not place the Public Housing Administration in a position of having legally bound itself to authorize construction of a greater number than that permitted by the proviso, there is being inserted in annual contributions contracts (sec. 110 (B)) a clause making applicable the provisions of the Independent Offices Appropriation Act, 1953. Of course, the question as to whether the clause should contain a mere reference to the act or whether the limitation of not to exceed 35,000 units should be spelled out in section 110 (B) is for administrative determination.

Examination of the legislative proceedings discloses nothing indicating an intent inconsistent with the plain meaning of the language employed in the proviso. Construed in its simplest form, such language directs that the rate of construction under provisions of the United States Housing Act of 1937, as amended, be changed from 135,000 (subject to some adjustment) to a maximum of 35,000 dwelling units during the fiscal year 1953 and each successive fiscal year and that no arrangement be made "which will bind the Public Housing Administration with respect to loans, annual contributions, or authorizations for commencement of construction" to authorize commencement of construction in excess of the rate specified.

The reasons advanced for selecting the second interpretation indicate such an evaluation of the proviso. In view of the Commissioner's explanation of the practical difficulties encountered in initiating projects and bringing them to a point where construction may be authorized, a factor recognized in the legislative discussions, there appears some possibility that any one of the three interpretations, in view of the savings clause utilized with respect to commencement of construction (it is understood informally that such clause limiting construction authorization would be incorporated in agreements under the third interpretation as well as in agreements under the other two interpretations), might be regarded as not contravening the terms of the proviso, although the first, and particularly the third, could be questioned on the ground that they did not adequately adjust preliminary negotiations. However, without passing on that phase of the matter, and recognizing that the mechanics by which the revised rate is to be given effect are primarily within the area of administrative discretion, it is the view of this Office that the specific steps contemplated by the second interpretation to adjust the rate of preliminary negotiations to the new rate of construction authorization are consistent with the statutory direction, which, reasonably construed, appears to require that there be maintained a program of negotiations as well as commitments to accomplish a construction rate of not to exceed 35,000 dwelling units, annually, on a fiscal year basis.

Accordingly, and in answer to your specific question, you are advised that this Office, on the basis presented, perceives no reason why the Public Housing Commissioner's interpretation of the second clause of the proviso is not legally proper.

Sincerely yours,

LINDSAY C. WARREN,
Comptroller General
of the United States.

COMPTROLLER GENERAL
OF THE UNITED STATES,
Washington, October 19, 1953.

The ADMINISTRATOR,
Housing and Home Finance Agency.

MY DEAR MR. ADMINISTRATOR: Reference is made to your letter of October 6, 1953, requesting a decision concerning the propriety of certain policies proposed by the Public Housing Commissioner to carry out program responsibilities in accordance with the terms of a proviso, appearing under the heading "Public Housing Administration," of the First Independent Offices Appropriation Act, 1954 (67 Stat. 298, 307), as follows:

"Provided further, That notwithstanding the provisions of the United States Housing Act of 1937, as amended, the Public Housing Administration shall not, with respect to projects initiated after March 1, 1949, (1) authorize during the fiscal year 1954 the commencement of construction of in excess of 20,000 dwelling units or (2) after the date of approval of this act, enter into any new agreements, contracts, or other arrangements, preliminary or otherwise, which will ultimately bind the Public Housing Administration during fiscal year 1954 or for any future years with respect to loans or annual contributions for any additional dwelling units or projects unless hereafter authorized by the Congress to do so."

If adopted, the proposed policies would—

"1. Limit authorization of commencement of construction to 20,000 units during the fiscal year 1954.

"2. Comply with the obligations under existing annual contributions contracts for units in excess of the 20,000 by advancing funds for planning, site acquisition, and other costs of development prior to authorization of commencement of construction."

The Public Housing Commissioner's program responsibilities, as modified for the fiscal year 1953 by provisions of the Independent Offices Appropriation Act, 1953 (66 Stat. 393, 403), were considered in Office decision of May 18, 1953, B-115087. The original rate of construction under the United States Housing Act of 1937, as amended, was reduced thereby from 135,000 (subject to some adjustment) to a maximum of 35,000 dwelling units each year, with the added direction that no arrangement be made which will bind the Public Housing Administration with respect to loans, annual contributions, or authorizations for commencement of construction to authorize commencement of construction in excess of the rate specified. It was agreed that the statutory direction at such time, reasonably construed, appeared to require that the Public Housing Administration maintain a program of negotiations as well as commitments to accomplish a construction rate of not to exceed 35,000 dwelling units, annually, on a fiscal-year basis.

You now advise that—

"Upon enactment of the lesser rate of 35,000 units per annum on July 5, 1952, the PHA amended as many annual contributions contracts as it could to incorporate such lesser rate of construction (such an amendment required the consent of the other party to the contract, the local housing authority) and incorporated such lesser rate in all new annual contributions contracts executed thereafter. As a result, the PHA now has approximately 47,699 units under annual contributions contracts which incorporate the 35,000-unit rate and approximately 8,255 units under annual contributions contracts which incorporate only the limitations of the basic act."

Any uncertainty in the present matter seems to arise in ascertaining whether commitments under existing annual contributions contracts covering units in excess of the 20,000 authorized to be constructed legally may be honored if it is administratively determined to do so. The problem, therefore, is not so much one of determining the extent of binding obligation assumed under such contracts as it is one of construing the legislative direction for the purpose of establishing whether or not it was intended that the obligations involved be abandoned. The prohibition in the proviso against any new arrangements that may ultimately bind the administration for additional units or projects, reasonably appears to negative any inference that its terms contemplate abandonment, in the absence of explicit direction to do so, of all existing contracts covering units over and above the 20,000 authorized to be constructed. Not only is there absent from the language employed any direction in this respect, but discussions during the legislative proceedings as a whole indicate that the problem of meeting commitments already undertaken was recognized and left for future resolution. In this connection, it is observed that the proviso also ordered a study of the low rent housing program to be made and submitted to the congressional committees for guidance in future legislation and that, in the final conference report (H. Rept. No. 997, 83d Cong., p. 10), it was commented "The conferees realize that one Congress cannot bind any other Congress on this or any other housing program."

Accordingly, if the Public Housing Commissioner should decide to adopt the policies set forth above, this office would not feel required to object thereto.

Sincerely yours,

LINDSAY C. WARREN,
Comptroller General
of the United States.

Mr. ELLSWORTH. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. CANFIELD].

Mr. CANFIELD. Mr. Speaker, I asked the gentleman from Texas [Mr. FISHER] to yield when he had concluded his remarks, but he did not have time, so I have taken this minute to ask him one simple question.

I wonder if he holds with the late Senator Taft and Senator ELLENDER that they were socialistic when they sponsored this very program.

Mr. FISHER. The gentleman asks that question of me?

Mr. CANFIELD. Yes.

Mr. FISHER. I am not going to undertake to appraise the minds of individuals and try to decide what they interpret as being socialism. But I say this, that if there were a condition where the State owned all of the houses in America and rented them to people at one-third of the cost, I would say that smacked of socialism to me; it may not to the gentleman.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS].

(Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi—

It comes as no surprise to you who have served with me here when I say that in the past I have opposed Federal public housing; as a matter of good conscience I have opposed it. My stand has been made known here time after time as the matter has been before us.

Mr. Speaker, those are not my words, although I subscribe to the thought. Those are the words of the distinguished majority leader, the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HALLECK], spoken in this House on April 22, 1953, just 12 months ago, and appearing at page 3677 of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. I yield.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Does not the gentleman realize that we now have a Republican President?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. Well, I am not sure.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Will the gentleman let me agree with him in that statement?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. I do know that the leadership of the Republican Party has been very active in its opposition to Fair Dealism and New Dealism, for 20 years; and the distinguished gentleman from Indiana, the majority leader [Mr. HALLECK], has a very consistent record of opposing New Deal and Fair Deal measures. That is, from the time that he came to Congress up to and until January 1953; but since that time I daresay he has the best record of any Member in the House in support of Fair Deal and New Deal measures. It is rather difficult for me to reconcile.

Mr. Speaker, it is my information, if the press is reporting this matter accurately, that the Republican Party—under the leadership of their great President—is supporting a public-housing amendment to this legislation. I was somewhat surprised by that because their position has always been the opposite.

The chairman of the Republican National Committee, Mr. Leonard W. Hall, speaking in opposition to a cooperative housing bill, which is just about half as socialistic as public housing, on March 22, 1950, when he was a distinguished Member of the House, said:

Mr. Chairman, I am opposed to the cooperative-housing features of this bill because it is another long step down the road to socialism. If a cooperative-housing bill like the one now before the House were enacted, it would hasten a day when Americans would be living in Government houses, working for the Government, and paying most of their income to the Government. In short, this kind of bill would speed up the creeping paralysis of socialism.

But that was Democratic socialism in those days.

Then the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ALLEN], the eminent and courageous chairman of the Rules Committee, on June 22, 1949, in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, made this statement:

I would say that the principal reason I am opposed to this bill is it is my unqualified belief that this nor any other Congress has the right—

He was speaking during debate on a public-housing bill—to tax one group of neighbors to provide some other neighbors selected by some bureaucrat—

He did not say "Democratic bureaucrat." Is it possible he could have intended to distinguish between Democratic and Republican bureaucrats?—with a ten- or twelve-thousand-dollar home for which the second man will have to pay but a fraction while the first man will pay the remainder for him.

Oh, here comes our beloved Speaker, our very dear Speaker, for whom all of us have the greatest respect. I love him and I know you love him. He is a great party man, he is a great American and a great statesman. But even our venerable Speaker is susceptible to changing his position. Let us see what he had to say.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Mississippi has expired.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield the gentleman 2 additional minutes.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, I will reread these words of wisdom into the RECORD. The present Speaker, debating the original public housing bill said this:

We have a national debt of $252 billion.

You see that was back in 1949. It is $274½ billion now, as I understand it. That was $22 billion ago.

He said further:

Our cost of Government is over $42 billion.

Well, the President says it is going to be $65½ billion next year.

Continuing:

We are groaning under heavy taxes of city, State, and Nation. All this at the time of a declining business.

We did not really know anything then about declining business, did we? Business is really hurting now.

There is only one chance for America and free people in every part of the globe. We must keep this country strong and solvent; to do this we must forego some of the things we would like to do.

I cannot read it all, but the Speaker said in closing:

Let us make this Nation one of self-respecting home owners rather than a nation of subsidized tenants in Government projects. Let us remain a free people.

I come now to the gentleman who sent this bill over here, the distinguished Housing Administrator, Mr. Cole, of Kansas. He is the gentleman, you know, whose name will be emblazoned across the pages of history as the only Republican Congressman to hold the distinction of being defeated by a Democrat in the history of the First District of Kansas. Why, he managed to lose even when his own party swept the rest of the country in a landslide. He said this about the so-called low-rent housing plan—this is Mr. Cole speaking, and appears in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of June 29, 1949:

For the following reasons I object to the low-rent housing plan:

1. The first objection is that it is privileged and discriminatory housing.
2. It will not clear the slums.
3. The poorer folks will not be housed under this program.
4. It builds a tremendous political machine.
5. It violates the rights of the minorities.
6. It is excessive in cost, and there are no brakes on the excessive cost.
7. It tends to destroy private homes and private business.
8. It tends to destroy our form of government.

And, if you will go back to the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of that day, you will see that he cited, in support of his position in opposition to the socialized plan of housing, none other than our President, then General Eisenhower.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Mississippi has expired.

Mr. ELLSWORTH. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. PATMAN].

BILL HARMFUL

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, this bill as presented by the committee does not contain help for the middle and low income groups. If there is to be a provision for public housing inserted, it will be the only attempt that I have heard of that will really be intended to help the low or the middle income groups. In 5 minutes it is difficult to explain a bill, and I shall not attempt to explain the bill except to say that this bill as presented by the committee has more harm in it than it has good.

ANTIVETERAN BILL

Although I am not impugning the motives of anyone or questioning their patriotism or desire to be helpful to their country—I am sure they have their own conception of things just like I do—but whether intended or not, I am sure it was not intended, this bill is a lenders' bill. It is an investors' bill. It may be called, if you analyze it carefully and evaluate its terms, an antiveterans' bill. Remember, I said "an antiveterans' bill." And, I can convince you that that is the truth.

This is a dangerous bill as it is presented by the committee. I did not vote for it for that reason. Now then, let me tell you just one thing about it. It increases interest rates 1 percent. What does an interest rate of 1 percent mean? We have debts in this country aggregating $640 billion, including the national debt, the debts of the States, counties, cities, political subdivisions, and installment purchases.

HIGH-INTEREST BILL

If we are going to lay down a pattern to be governed by, by voting for this bill and endorsing a 1-percent interest increase, that means $6.4 billion a year at 1 percent when it finally goes clear across the debt board. That is an increase of $40 per capita on 160 million people. On a family of 5, that means $200 a year it will cost that family. That means that this family of five, instead of buying food and clothing and the necessities of life with that $200, will have to take out of their meager budget the $200 for that purpose, and divert it to the payment of interest. That is what this bill means. This is a high interest bill. It means a per-capita annual increase when it goes clear across the board, of $40. Nothing has been said about that.

This is a dangerous bill. At the very time that interest rates should be going down, this bill does the opposite. Not so long ago the powers that be were persuaded to increase the veterans' interest rate up to 4½ percent, on home loans. It went up from 4 percent on the unanswerable argument, I will say, that Government bonds had gone down and therefore with the interest rate on those bonds of approximately 3 percent in order to give them 1½ percent spread or margin, they were entitled to 4½ percent. They were right about it. But since that time the hard money policy has been changed and Government bonds have gone back to par and the interest rate to 2½ percent. The same argument that caused the veterans' interest rate to go up to 4½ percent would now compel it to go to 4 percent in order to give them a margin of 1½ percent. But they are not putting it back.

This bill not only does not put it back, but it endorses a 1-percent additional increase on top of it.

There is a hidden bomb in this bill against the veteran. Let me invite it to your attention. It is hidden; it is hard to find. But this bill would increase the interest rate on the veterans without saying a word about it—not a word. It does not mention veterans.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. PATMAN] has expired.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 10 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, I shall address myself not to the bill as it is now but as some people hope it will be when it leaves the House today. I shall address myself to the so-called public housing, sometimes called socialized housing program which, I understand, it is intended to reinsert in this bill today.

I want to direct attention, and I want to talk particularly to my conservative friends on the Republican side, of whom there are many. I know that some of my Democratic friends over here are liberals. I can respect their views, because they believe in socialized housing. They are honestly for it. So I shall not address myself to them. They are the originators of the program. The others on this side are merely, as I understand, copying what has been done by the liberal group. Last year I want to remind you that when the public housing was a Truman program, this House after long debate and with the aid of the Republicans, with the minor exception of 23 votes on your side when you had a majority of the House absolutely repealed public housing. You put a stop to it. And you put a stop to it because it was described by leading Members of the Republican side of the House, quite aptly and rightly, as un-American. It was described as monstrous. It was described as uneconomical. It was described as socialistic, by your Members. And it was described as highly political.

Today we have the statement that the majority side, in spite of those statements, and in spite of its action a year ago, proposes now to reinstate and revivify the public housing that they have denounced so loudly over the years.

Mr. Speaker, how highly political can we get? I wonder if my good friends—and I have a great admiration and respect for many Republicans on that side—can stand for this thing.

I was amazed and shocked, and that is the reason I am making this talk this morning, when I read in this morning's paper that the President said that he is confident that the House with Republican leadership support will write into the general housing bill a provision explicitly authorizing the construction of 35,000 houses. You do not think you are going to get away with that. My New Deal friends over here are going to jump it right off. When did you get the notion that you could outdo the New Deal? This is not funny.

In last year's election my good State of Virginia, which is a conservative State, voted Republican, and many of the Southern States voted Republican. They voted Republican because they expected a sound, conservative Government and a balanced budget, and that is what they were promised. That is the reason they voted Republican. They voted Republican because they thought there was a standard to which they could repair that would not be hauled down at the first assault of political expediency.

This is an election year. Do not think you are going to make friends with those who advocated and originated this "monstrous" scheme, as you have heretofore termed it. You cannot do that.

Mr. HALLECK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I yield to the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. HALLECK. The gentleman has made reference to how the people of his State voted. The other day we had a motion to recommit to raise personal tax exemptions by $100, which the President said was the cornerstone of his program. The gentleman from Virginia now occupying the floor did vote against the motion to recommit, but none of his colleagues from his State on his side of the aisle did.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. That is entirely aside from the question we are discussing this morning. I am just wondering why my good friend from Indiana raised that question; to divert me from the question that is before the House today, that is, who are the New Dealers in this Congress? I knew who were the New Dealers in the last Congress, but who are the New Dealers in this Congress, as I tried to say a few minutes ago?

Of course this 35,000 is a small number. Yes, it is a small number of houses compared with what my friends on the right over here propose to do. But this thing of virtue—if this was a socialistic program with 75,000, it is just as socialistic with 35,000 and just as socialistic with 1,000. Virtue is not something like a garment, that can be donned and doffed at will. When you once yield it, virtue is gone forever. You cannot get it back.

I want to give a few figures here about this thing. I know the Members of this House do not understand it. It was referred to here awhile ago that this would be a cheaper program if you would build the house and make the tenant take a deed in fee simple to the property. I want to demonstrate.

There is $365 million a year authorized for subsidies and the program runs for 40 years, which comes to $14,520,000,000. That is a subsidy. But the total cost of the houses at the maximum cost, which is estimated by the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations at $14,000 per house, would be only $11,440,000,000. I expect to offer an amendment. If you would just give the tenants a deed for these houses when they are completed and stop paying this subsidy which is more than the cost of the houses, you would be doing a real New Deal thing, a really socialistic thing, and you would be doing a wonderful thing for these people, and you would also at the same time be saving the Treasury a good many billions of dollars.

Mr. Speaker, since my time is limited here on the floor, I want to say that I have been here a long time. I have looked to the Republican Party on the other side of the aisle for a conservative form of government. I never expected to see the day when, like today, the great Republican Party would be hitchhiking on the New Deal bandwagon. And I never expected to live to see the time when this unnatural thing would occur, that the great Republican elephant was seeking to ride piggyback on the Democratic donkey.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from New York [Mr. MULTER].

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Speaker, I take this minute to invite those gentlemen who have addressed the House and dubbed this public-housing program as socialistic to please stay on the floor during general debate, and when amendments are offered to the bill. At that time, I would like them to give us some statistics. Public housing has been built for 425,000 families since 1937, we have about 40 million families in this country. Someone should be able to point to at least 1 family out of those 425,000 families which has been converted to socialism or communism. I challenge the opponents of public housing to submit some evidence.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. ELLSWORTH. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 7839) to aid in the provision and improvement of housing, the elimination and prevention of slums, and the conservation and development of urban communities.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Michigan.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill H. R. 7839, with Mr. REECE of Tennessee in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

By unanimous consent, the first reading of the bill was dispensed with.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 15 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, the Committee on Banking and Currency has brought to the floor for consideration a most comprehensive housing bill. Without debating the question of liberality as a relative term, I think I can say that about the only criticism which we have heard about this bill is that it was too liberal. The fear all the way through from the original negotiations with respect to the President's program was that we were getting too liberal with respect to housing and the financing of housing. So I think when the Members read the report they will find that there is a degree of controlled liberality in the bill which satisfies the most liberal Members of Congress, but which should not alarm the most conservative Members of Congress.

The program as submitted to us by the President is a well-balanced program. It will make probable the production of up to 1,400,000 units a year of new homes; and it makes probable, through rehabilitation, repair, and modernization of old homes, an estimated number of newly conditioned homes between six hundred and seven hundred thousand. So we can refer to this bill, without fear of successful contradiction, as a bill which will make it possible for the American people to have something over 2 million livable units a year if it is enacted.

There are a great many benefits in the act to the potential home owner, and in consequence to the industry which will build and finance those homes. I should like to briefly state some of them, but before I go into the details of it I shall say that it has been confirmed, and I am at liberty to state that this bill contains 99 percent of the President's housing program. That means that this is an administration measure and that the great President of the United States gives his wholehearted support to 99 percent of its provisions. Any Members who are actuated to support or oppose this bill for the reason that the President might take a different attitude, I hope will have that fact in mind.

The bill liberalizes home construction and the financing of home construction in many respects, as I have said—and I shall enumerate them very briefly, for I assume we will get into the details as we go along with the reading of the bill. In the first place let me call attention to the fact that in the so-called title I provisions which you will recall have to do with modernization and repair of existing homes, we increase the insurance of a loan from $2,500 to $3,000 and increase the period of amortization from 3 to 5 years. That program has been of inestimable value in the repair of existing homes, and it has been used quite generally as ancillary to the slum-clearance programs and the urban redevelopment programs which are called in this bill urban renewal programs. It has been used extensively and because of the fact that we raise the amount which may be insured from $2,500 to $3,000 and increase the period of amortization from 3 to 5 years, we expect that provision will be used more extensively than it ever has been in the past.

Let me also say that the $10,000 maximum limit on the multiple-unit operations repair program has been changed from $10,000 to $1,500 per unit, whichever is the greater, and the term increased from 7 to 10 years. That will do much in the slum-clearance urban redevelopment to make available existing multiple dwellings for those not only who would be replaced by an urban renewal program, a slum-clearance program, but also for all others.

There is a chart in the report which will allow you to follow what I am about to say. It is found on pages 4 and 5. The chart speaks for itself.

Section 203, under which most of the construction is done for residence purposes, has been liberalized in the following respects—and this is probably the most important part of the FHA program: The maximum mortgage can now be 95 percent of the first $8,000 and 75 percent in excess of $8,000, as opposed to existing 80 percent in some cases. I ask you again to refer to the tables on pages 4 and 5 of the report. The maximum maturity of those same loans has been increased in this bill to 30 years. It was formerly graduated from 20 to 30. We moved that up to a maximum of 30 years; it is quite liberal.

Existing houses: Therein we consider that there are probably 600,000 to 700,000 units which may be made available under the rehabilitation program. Existing houses are eligible for the same mortgage-insurance terms as new houses; in other words, they are all in the same category; it does not make any difference whether it is an existing structure, an old house, or a new house, the same liberal insurance terms apply. Throughout the years existing construction has been limited to 80 percent. The mortgage can be insured as high as 95 percent on homes which, after the work has been done, sell for less than $8,000.

There are certain elements I think we should have in mind. There are a good many old structures, so-called old structures which by modernization, repair, alteration, can be made available to low-income people. For example, three-bedroom houses which might be rehabilitated under the terms of this bill may be sold on the market for less than a new two-bedroom house. I think we have really accomplished something in that respect.

The mortgage maximums on 1-, 2-, 3-, or 4-family units have been increased from $16,000 to $20,000, from $20,500 to $27,500, and from $25,000 to $35,000 respectively.

I think I should say in this respect it may be contemplated that temporarily new 1- or 2-family structures may be used for other than housing purposes. We have provided in the bill that these structures may be temporarily used for school purposes. Where we have an area in which there is an impact on facilities, including schools, due to changes caused by an influx of population and we all have that, I believe, in most of our districts, before facilities can be made available, especially schools, we provided that temporarily this housing can be used for school purposes until the localities have caught up with building demands in those respects.

We also amended section 207 which provides for insurance on rented properties. Section 207 under title II of the act has to do with multiple dwellings as opposed to the single-dwelling owner occupied. They are usually built, of course, for rental purposes.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Michigan has expired.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 5 additional minutes.

Mr. Chairman, throughout the bill, therefore, we have liberalized the provisions to a point where it surely will not be the fault of Government, it surely will not be the fault of the Congress if this bill is adopted, if anyone is denied the privilege of purchasing a home on very reasonable finance terms.

To make this program available and workable the bill will provide for an increase in the next year of almost $3,600,000,000 of new insurance authority. At the present time the authorization is about $22,500,000,000. FHA will have committed and used by the 30th of June this year about $21,400,000,000. We have new authority in this act for about $1,500,000,000 and the President may increase that, if necessity arises, by another $500 million, making $2 billion.

Then there will be the usual annual turnover of properties which come out from under insurance for various reasons, the programs expiring, the mortgages paid up, and so forth, of $1.6 billion, so it will make available for the next year about $3.6 billion. Consequently there will be ample insurance authority with respect to the FHA programs.

Mr. Chairman, I might say in closing that there will be a great deal of debate on the flexible provisions of this bill which give to the President, under very well defined conditions, the opportunity to vary the interest rate to fit the program into the economy generally. Notwithstanding any arguments to the contrary, we do not anticipate, if the economy remains as strong as it is and as strong as we expect it to be in the foreseeable future, any change in interest rates which are set as a maximum now of 4½ percent on FHA and 4½ percent on VA programs. The President is also given authority to vary the downpayment and the terms of amortization for the same purpose.

Now, we have heard during these last few months hours of debate on whether we are in a rolling adjustment or whether we are in a recession likely to go into a depression. Without arguing the point, may I say that it is going to be rather difficult for anyone who sees any danger to our economy resulting from this adjustment which we all agreed we would have to go through when we stopped inflation as a matter of Government policy and before economic stability could be established to argue against the provisions providing for flexibility in this bill. This period was foreseen by every economist in the country. Many politicians who are now decrying the fact that national income is not quite as high as it was last year—foresaw as long ago as 2 years that there would be of necessity a transition period between the stopping of inflation, whenever it was stopped as a matter of Government policy, and stability which we are seeking to accomplish under the policy of the present administration. We are going through that transition period now, and this bill is geared to that transition period. Whether it is inspired for political expediency or whether it is predicated on sincere economic thinking, those who are so fearful that anything is going to happen to our economy by reason of a slowing up of building construction as it applies to homes, better give these tools to the President to stop it.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 15 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, I think the matter that is considered by this bill is one of supreme importance. The strength of our Government is in the independence and in the self-respect of its citizens. For the people to be well housed not only means much for their comfort and convenience, but it is an insurance of the stability of our institutions. I say that because I have seen something of the conditions abroad. I have seen something of the conditions in South America. There is no middle class in some of those countries. In most of the South American countries, there are the very rich and the squalid poor. That is the reason there is very little stability, because the independent, self-respecting middle class is not there.

I am not afraid of socialism. Every step forward we have taken has been branded as socialism. When we passed the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation law it was considered socialistic. When we passed the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation law it was considered socialistic. The insurance of loans to our people in order that they might obtain homes was considered socialistic. Old-age assistance was socialistic, and all the other activities of the Federal Security Agency were socialistic.

If we had been frightened by words we would have made no progress. I am not frightened by words.

The public-housing program has been scuttled, but it was not scuttled by the Committee on Banking and Currency. It was destroyed by the Appropriations Committee who obtained a rule from the Rules Committee waiving all points of order. After we have considered these matters in the Committee on Banking and Currency for weeks, with a stroke of the pen they destroyed it. That is not the orderly process of legislation. That is not what the experience of mankind has taught us is good legislation. Parliamentary law has grown up like the common law, by the experience of mankind, through the years, by trial and error.

It was provided that legislative committees would pass upon legislative subjects and that the Appropriations Committee would appropriate. Yet now they come here and say, after a battle, that they have stricken out all of the public housing. They did not do it with any consultation or cooperation of the Committee on Banking and Currency.

I hope sincerely that this bill will do what it provides in its title, to provide for and to improve housing, to eliminate and prevent slums and to conserve and develop urban communities. I have serious doubts that it will accomplish any of these objectives. Public housing has been eliminated from the bill. The ultimate object of this bill is to clean up the slums and to furnish homes for the people. If this bill does not result in that, then it does not perform any service.

The authors of this bill have devised a fantastic scheme by which a man who now lives in a slum and wants to obtain a home can secure a loan, the maturity of which is 40 years, for a house costing with the land $7,600. The monthly payments, I understand, will be about $67. I do not know the income of people living in the slums who would be given the privilege of purchasing this character of property. But if they find they are unable to take advantage of the provisions of this law the whole program will fall to the ground for there is nothing other than this section that provides for any slum clearance.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SPENCE. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. McCORMACK. Will the gentleman express his opinion as to what kind of house one could build in the city for $7,600, having in mind a young couple with a growing family?

Mr. SPENCE. Unless the house is well taken care of, I imagine that at the end of the maturity period of 40 years they will have the mortgage but not the house.

That is the program they have substituted for public housing. At the end, however, of 20 years, if the mortgage is not in default the lender can ask for debentures which will be made in the sum of accrued interest and principal. He gets a negotiable instrument bearing interest, which he can dispose of; but the borrower still has to continue paying on his mortgage for the following 20 years.

There is another provision. While the majority party constantly criticizes legislation passed by the Democratic Congresses as socialistic, the subject I am about to discuss is cited as an example of how to stimulate private enterprise.

The secondary market for mortgages is the Federal National Mortgage Association. It is provided in the bill that when a lender sells his mortgages to FNMA he must accompany them with 3 percent of the amount of the mortgages so sold, for which he shall get certificates. When the certificates are sufficient to purchase the stock of FNMA, shares of stock will be issued to these persons as their interest may appear.

Of course, this 3 percent will be added to the cost of the mortgage and ultimately the stock now owned by the lender will have been paid for by the borrower. That is the fantastic device by which this corporation is going to be transferred from the Government to the private financial institutions.

These are just camouflage words, "socialism" and "private enterprise." They are used for the purpose of prejudicing and misleading.

I think if interest rates, charges, down-payments, and maturities are authorized to be fixed by an individual, it would be appropriate to give the power to the President. However, this discretion should not be given to any individual but should be incorporated in plain language in the law. As written, the bill gives to the lender no definite information as to what he will receive and to the prospective borrower no definite information as to what he shall pay. The President can change the interest rate as he desires within the limitation prescribed; that is, he can fix the rate anywhere within the periphery of the going interest rate and 2½ percent additional. This is a power which is essentially legislative, and I think the Congress, when it legislates on subjects of this character, should let the people know just what they are up against and what they have to pay, and what they can reasonably expect the loans will cost them. If this legislation fails, we have no substitute for it. If this legislation fails, the housing program fails. They have eliminated public housing entirely. No provision has been made which gives the veteran any benefit. There was no provision in the bill originally for any loan to the farmers. However, the Farm Home Administration provision was offered as an amendment in the committee and adopted. But, after all, the result of legislation depends upon the sympathetic manner in which it is administered, and I do not think the farmer is going to get very much help as a result of this bill.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SPENCE. I yield.

Mr. MADDEN. On a house which costs $7,600, has there been any estimate by members of your committee as to how much that would eventually cost the buyer, if he continued paying over a period of 40 years?

Mr. SPENCE. As I understand it, it would cost him $67 a month for 40 years. At the expiration of 40 years, he would pay considerably over $30,000 for the property.

Mr. FOUNTAIN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SPENCE. I yield.

Mr. FOUNTAIN. I have just made a computation on the basis of 480 months at $67 a month. The total paid, including the so-called $7,600 principal, interest and possibly taxes, would amount to $32,160 for a period of 40 years.

Mr. SPENCE. Yes, I think the gentleman is correct. There is no diminution of the amount of the monthly payment. That payment is made straight across the board. The last payment will be the same as the first payment. The first payment is $67 and at the end of 40 years, the last payment will be $67.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SPENCE. I yield.

Mr. McCORMACK. In order to have the record complete at this point, on the $7,600 house to be paid for over a period of 40 years, the total paid would be $32,438.40 and the monthly payment would be $67.58. And under this bill, if it becomes law, the Administrator can give a waiver or authorize the building of an $8,600 house in high-cost construction areas, as I understand it, in which event the cost over a period of 40 years would amount to $36,162.80 and the monthly payments would be $75.36.

Mr. SPENCE. I think that is correct.

Mr. TALLE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SPENCE. I yield.

Mr. TALLE. The gentleman has mentioned the figure of $67 a month. Will the gentleman state the items that are included in the $67? Surely it is not for the house alone?

Mr. SPENCE. No, no; I did not mean to say that. It includes the other services.

Mr. TALLE. Will the gentleman state what the services are?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 2 additional minutes. Sixty-seven dollars is the amount that the buyer would have to pay for housing. That is my point.

Mr. Chairman, I must decline to yield further.

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman who preceded me has resorted to poetic quotations to try to bolster his argument. I have in mind a quotation which I think is applicable to slum clearance:

Ill fares the land, to hastening ills a prey,
Where wealth accumulates, and men decay.
Princes and lords may flourish and may fade—

A breath can make them, as a breath has made;

But a bold middle class, the country's pride,
When once destroyed, can never be supplied.

It is a much more dangerous thing to our country to refuse to assist those who are in need by reasonable legislation than to be deterred by some slogan that says, "This is socialism." Everything we have done that has been progressive has been banded as socialism. That does not strike me at all. I am glad to go back and tell my people that I tried to do what I could. While it is unfortunate, we have to do it. It is truly American. It is truly patriotic and it is truly constitutional. The Constitution is not a straitjacket. I have as much reverence for the Constitution as any man in the world, but it must bend sometimes to meet the public good, and we expect to do what we can to see that that is accomplished. I wish to read this editorial from the Washington Post and Times Herald this morning:

DRAG ON URBAN RENEWAL

While the parliamentary tangle in which the housing program is caught is highly complicated, there is no question as to what the majority of the House was trying to do. They wanted to kill public housing. If they should succeed in this effort, they would strike a critical blow at the hopeful and progressive efforts of dozens of cities to rid themselves of the incubus of slums.

The original fault lies with the House Appropriations Committee, which sought to confine the housing program to the 35,000 units already under contract. It proposed to wind up public housing after permitting 20,000 of those units to be built next year and the other 15,000 units the following year. Since the Rules Committee refused to protect this legislative provision in an appropriation bill with a special rule, it was knocked out on a point of order with the hope that such action would halt all public housing. But the opposite seems to be true. There is now agreement that the elimination of this provision will leave the administration free to build all the 35,000 units now under contract next year.

It should not be supposed, however, that this is equivalent to approval of the President's housing program. After present contracts are carried out public housing would be completely stopped. The deplorable thing about this shortsighted decision is that it clouds the administration's entire housing efforts. The House Banking and Currency Committee has reported out a comprehensive housing bill with emphasis upon urban renewal. Well, urban renewal can go forward only if cities have some means of rehousing the families to be displaced from their worst slums. Experience has conclusively demonstrated that some of these families can be provided for only in public housing.

The law properly forbids cities to move their low-income families into the street in order to sweep away their blighted areas. In other words, a limited amount of public housing is the first essential of any comprehensive slum reclamation effort. It is most discouraging when politicians close their eyes to this established fact and pretend that there is something evil and un-American about this essential part of the antislum campaign. To our way of thinking, urban renewal is one of the most important items in the President's program, and it ought to be supported by funds for at least the 35,000 public housing units a year that the President requested.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. SPENCE] has consumed 17 minutes.

Mr. GAMBLE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. McDONOUGH].

(Mr. McDONOUGH asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. McDONOUGH. Mr. Chairman, the Committee on Banking and Currency held hearings for nearly 3 weeks, and spent considerable time in writing this bill, and I believe gave serious consideration to all aspects of housing and to all elements of the Nation that required housing, and to the economic situation that exists in the country, insofar as stimulating the construction of housing is concerned.

In my opinion, this is not only a housing bill for 1954, but it is a revision of the National Housing Act, and provides, among other things, many new features that have not heretofore been in the legislation, which will stimulate housing on various levels that have not heretofore been stimulated.

The question of the experiment, as someone has called it, of building a house for $7,600 to $8,600 for the low-income group in this country was quite thoroughly discussed. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. McCORMACK] just recently asked the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. SPENCE] where you could build such a house. During the hearings I had inserted at that point when the discussion was on a survey made by the Housing Administrator where such houses could be built and the cost of them. For the information of the gentleman from Massachusetts, at Boston a suitable house can be built, according to the study made, for $7,464, which could be financed over a period of 40 years, and could be obtained for a downpayment of approximately $200, which will include the cost of materials and labor, subcontractor's insurance, public-liability insurance, unemployment insurance, social-security tax, sales tax, and incidental job costs, general overhead, and profit. This is a five-room house made of material that is suitable, and can be financed according to the program.

Mr. NICHOLSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McDONOUGH. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. NICHOLSON. I was going to ask if they could build a house for $7,600, and where? I come from a rural area in Massachusetts, and the houses that are being built there, four-room houses, cost $10,000. The way they get this price, of course, may be through building a great many; it may be that volume gives them a little greater advantage.

Mr. McDONOUGH. Undoubtedly volume would help, but that information was in the survey by the Housing Administrator. Under the terms of the previous act, he was given an opportunity to make some research in that field, as outlined on pages 327 to 333 of the hearings, including the material that goes into the house, the cost of building, design, and so forth.

Mr. NICHOLSON. Is there any public housing in this bill?

Mr. McDONOUGH. No; there is no authority for additional public housing in this bill at all. I will discuss that a little later.

Mr. YATES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McDONOUGH. I yield.

Mr. YATES. I suppose the low cost of the house can be explained by size, when the Administrator appeared before our Subcommittee on Appropriations and testified about low-cost housing, I asked him what the size of the house would be, and he said it would be approximately 720 square feet, which would mean that the house had dimensions of about 25 by 30 feet.

Mr. McDONOUGH. True, the house is not large.

Mr. BOLLING. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McDONOUGH. I yield.

Mr. BOLLING. The gentleman pointed out what would be included in such a house, and, reading from page 330 of the hearings, I think it should be pointed out what is not included in the estimates of cost. They did not include architectural services, cost of the lot, land development, carrying charges during construction, financing cost, fire insurance, or hazard insurance. One of the great problems that was brought out in this hearing—and I am sure the gentleman will remember it—is that many of these areas where these houses are needed most are very high-cost land areas.

Mr. McDONOUGH. There is no doubt about the high cost of land in various areas. However, when we consider that the bill is now amended to $8,600 maximum cost for the house, whereas the original bill had a $7,000 limit of cost, more leeway is given. Even under the $7,000 limit, they were able to construct houses. The Administrator said that last year this type of house could be built for $6,127, for instance, in Long Beach, Calif., $6,152 in Los Angeles, Calif., and $7,032 in Richmond, Va. The review all over the Nation shows these houses can be built; and, in my opinion, we should challenge the building-materials industry to produce materials that can be incorporated in these houses and which can be occupied by people looking for low-cost housing who do not want to go into public housing and who can own them eventually over a number of years, a 40-year period, and have some possessive interest.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McDONOUGH. I yield.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. It has been our experience in South Bend, Ind., that they have been able to build three-bedroom houses for a complete price, including the land and everything, of $6,195, which is a very acceptable house and has ample room for the average family.

Mr. McDONOUGH. I thank the gentleman for that information.

Mr. MULTER. May we have the name of the place where such houses are built?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. South Bend, Ind., which is not a low-cost area, I would say.

Mr. BYRNE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McDONOUGH. I yield.

Mr. BYRNE of Pennsylvania. I understood the gentleman to state that a home could be built in Philadelphia for $7,254. Where in Philadelphia? You cannot buy a lot and house in Philadelphia for that kind of money.

Mr. McDONOUGH. The survey certainly anticipated the labor cost, material cost, in the Philadelphia area. I do not suppose it is downtown in the high-cost-land area.

Mr. BYRNE of Pennsylvania. I would like to know where.

Mr. McDONOUGH. It must be out in suburban Philadelphia; and it certainly is much less than public housing which we have been informed will cost as much as $12,000 to $14,000 a 4-room unit.

Mr. BYRNE of Pennsylvania. I do not know anywhere in Philadelphia where you can buy a house for less than $10,000.

Mr. McDONOUGH. I do not care to belabor the question any further on low-cost housing. I definitely believe it can be done and I think the provision in the bill is sound.

Mr. JONAS of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McDONOUGH. I yield to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. JONAS of North Carolina. Last year the record showed that the average FHA insured mortgage was only $7,500 throughout the United States.

Mr. McDONOUGH. The question of how long it takes a person to pay out the mortgage and how much it is going to cost you can figure on any house with a low or no downpayment, he is going to have to pay carrying charges, he is going to have to pay other charges, and it is going to take him a long time if he does not have the means of making a substantial downpayment. However, it will be a stimulus to an individual to own a house, it will be a challenge to him to find the money to pay for it and give him some independence that he will not have if he is living in a public housing project.

Insofar as public housing is concerned, as I said before, this bill provides no public housing. If there is an amendment proposed to it I certainly intend to vote against it and if such an amendment is put in the bill I intend to offer an amendment to provide that any community in the United States that does not want public housing built in their community may by referendum of the people of that State, county, or city, may vote that they do not want that kind of public housing in their community. We have had an experience with it in Los Angeles that attracted nationwide attention. We found that the Public Housing Authority is an autocratic type of bureaucracy that we did not like; it is not American and we should do everything possible to curtail its authority.

Mr. CURTIS of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McDONOUGH. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. CURTIS of Missouri. Is the gentleman going to discuss the actual monthly payments for this 40-year mortgage on a house costing $7,600? There is a great deal of confusion in my mind so far as the discussion by the minority ranking member of the committee is concerned when he talked about $67 a month. I have computed it at 4½ percent interest and it is $34 a month. Obviously the differential must be for services that have nothing at all to do with buying a particular house and lot.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from California has expired.

Mr. GAMBLE. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 5 additional minutes.

Mr. CURTIS of Missouri. I wonder if the gentleman will discuss that point, and also refer to where in the hearings the actual services that that additional $67 must include occur.

Mr. McDONOUGH. I think the $67 was an estimated figure, as I recall in the hearings. I do not know that anyone broke it down. I believe the gentleman from Missouri is correct; it can be much less than $67 per month. The $67 a month is on the assumption that an individual would assume the obligation with no payment down, a 40-year term. If he pays something against the original cost, he is going to reduce his payments.

Mr. CURTIS of Missouri. That is what I have computed. At 4½-percent interest, paying off all the principal in 40 years, it is $34.17 a month and not $67. I would like someone to explain what they mean by their figures or confusing the issue by trying to create the impression that the monthly amount actually being paid for the principal and interest of the building would be anything like $67.

Mr. McDONOUGH. I have some other points I should like to discuss here.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McDONOUGH. I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. SPENCE. I never meant to say that the rent for the house alone would be $67.

Mr. McDONOUGH. The gentleman means the monthly payments.

Mr. SPENCE. The monthly payments include all the services.

Mr. McDONOUGH. In the gentleman's opinion, it would be $67 a month for a $7,000 house. That is an assumed figure that came into the hearings.

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McDONOUGH. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. MULTER. There is no assumption about the figures. It is fact. If you will look at page 94 of the report of the President's Advisory Committee on Housing where they recommended a 40-year term, on a $7,000 house you will find the figure is $62.90 and $70.70 on an $8,000 house.

Mr. McDONOUGH. With no downpayment?

Mr. MULTER. No downpayments; and if you make a computation on that factually and according to the figures—mathematics will not lie—it will be $67.59. It is all right to talk about amortization and interest and stop there, but you cannot live in a house unless you pay your taxes, unless you pay for utility services, and unless you pay for insurance.

Mr. McDONOUGH. The gentleman can discuss that subject later. I do not yield further.

Mr. MORANO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McDONOUGH. I yield to the gentleman from Connecticut.

Mr. MORANO. I still would like to know what the other services are that are included in the $67. The gentleman from Missouri said it was $34 a month simply for the payment, as he computes it. Now, what are the other services included in the figure of $67.59 is what I would like to know?

Mr. McDONOUGH. That is something that the gentleman from Kentucky will have to explain because he assumed the figure of $67.

Mr. YOUNGER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McDONOUGH. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. YOUNGER. I think you will find that that includes taxes and insurance that are required to be paid, but those taxes will vary on a $7,000 house in regard to the city it is built in.

Mr. McDONOUGH. That is correct.

Mr. YOUNGER. You cannot give any exact figure.

Mr. McDONOUGH. That is right.

Mr. YOUNGER. A figure in one city will vary from the next city and it is not the same amount.

Mr. McDONOUGH. I have not had an opportunity to say anything about slum clearance and urban redevelopment and the renewal section.

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McDONOUGH. I yield.

Mr. MULTER. The gentleman referred to the fact that he might offer an amendment so as to preclude public housing being forced upon any community that did not want it. I just want to call his attention to the fact that under existing law no community—I know the situation in the gentleman's city—no community that does not want public housing can have it forced upon it under this act either as it is in the law now or as the amendment may be offered.

Mr. McDONOUGH. I think that that legislation was put in the act as a result of the experience we had in Los Angeles.

Mr. MULTER. I think it was the gentleman's own amendment.

Mr. McDONOUGH. At any rate, I am going to take every precaution to see that that is the law from here on if I can help it at all.

On the slum clearance and renewal and redevelopment section, it has been estimated that if we did not have that in the bill, we could build at least 1.2 million additional homes this year. With that in the bill—and we had experienced testimony from those who should know, for instance, Mr. Fritz Burns of Los Angeles, who has had some experience in it—with the urban redevelopment, we can add another million homes if the program is pursued with any vigor at all. The chairman of the committee said that some 600,000 additional homes may be produced, but I think that is one of the things that we should emphasize in this bill and urge a vigorous program on slum clearance and urban redevelopment and renewal.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from New York [Mr. DOLLINGER].

Mr. DOLLINGER. Mr. Chairman, much was expected toward solution of the Nation's housing problem as a result of the President's state of the Union message and his housing recommendations later sent to Congress. In these, he clearly indicated that no American family should have to be ashamed of its home; that the Federal Government would cooperate in providing housing, and that improving conditions under which every American family could obtain good housing was a major objective of national policy. He frankly acknowledged that many members of minority groups have had the least opportunity of all of our citizens to acquire good homes.

All the high hopes aroused by these statements were soon dispelled when the administration's housing bill was introduced. Let me emphasize here, that the housing shortage still exists to a deplorable degree. When mention was first made of the $7,000 house, the impression was created that the house would be available throughout the length and breadth of our country, which meant housing at a price that even the low wage earner could afford. It did not take long to blast that hope when the housing Administrator himself pointed out very clearly that the $7,000 house would not be available to those in the larger cities of our country, and it is now apparent that the $7,000 house could not become a reality in any part of our country.

The proponents of this bill say it is an experimental bill; it is said that if it is not found workable, it can be corrected. The experiment, although supposedly on housing is, in fact, an experiment with people who have not a chance in the world to get housing. However, it is sure to give bankers and builders another bonanza.

The scheduling of the independent offices appropriation bill for action, to be followed by the Housing Act of 1954, both to be disposed of in 1 week, was a smart political maneuver. It was apparent from the start that the independent offices appropriation bill would contain no appropriation for public housing. It was therefore the obvious intent of the leadership to schedule the housing bill after the independent offices appropriation bill so that if public housing were restored to the Housing Act of 1954 it would be an empty victory because there would be no money to carry out the wishes of the membership.

The housing bill before us offers no new, helpful, or substantial solutions for our grave housing problems; we can safely assume that no new private housing available to those in the low or middle income groups would be built as a result of this legislation; we find no proposal to provide public housing for low income families for which no new shelter is possible under any other plan or method yet found.

It is appalling that in this great Nation of ours, with our wealth, tremendous resources of manpower and materials, millions of our people are forced to live in squalor and homes unfit for human habitation. The 1950 census showed that there are 15 million substandard homes in our country.

There is a great demand for medium and low-cost housing. Most new homes are entirely out of reach for those earning up to $5,000 per year. They are not eligible for public housing, their housing needs remain unfulfilled, and no help is given them by the bill before us. It does nothing to correct the imbalance between incomes and housing costs. Figures show that only families with incomes of more than $5,000 could afford to meet monthly housing costs for the average FHA house or apartment.

A fair and sound housing program would permit the average moderate income family to acquire its own home, to make moderate monthly payments resulting from long amortization; it would provide for reasonable interest rates and no extra financing charges. Such homes should be provided on a large-scale basis at prices up to $10,000; they are desperately needed; they would help a large segment of our population who are now unable to procure the dwellings they deserve in a price range they can afford.

There is a great continuing need for public housing. We can afford to provide adequate housing for those who cannot provide decent housing for themselves, and it is our duty to do so.

In 1949, when the Housing Act was passed, the original goal set was 135,000 public housing units per year. While this number was modest, by comparison with the great need, yet it furnished some help. Since then, the number of units per year has been cut and cut by Congress, and the final blow came last year, when Congress provided only enough funds for the Public Housing Program to complete construction of merely 20,000 units and killed the program as of June 30, 1954. Ignoring the crying need for public housing, the Banking and Currency Committee has refused to put into this bill any provision for the continuation of the public housing program. Are we to abandon the millions now living in places unfit for human habitation, those being displaced by slum clearance and public improvements, those forced to live in dangerous firetraps?

The promise that provisions would be made for minority housing has also been conveniently forgotten. The bill before us makes vague reference to minority housing in very broad language but, here again, there is no real help. There is nothing contained in the bill which gives the assurance that an individual in that category will be able to obtain a site of his own choosing and get a builder to build, let alone a bank to assure its financing. Yet the figures show that 70 percent of the persons referred to live in dwellings that are dilapidated, not fit for human occupancy.

Consider other factors involved in the housing shortage which have far-reaching importance. Our population is increasing; it is imperative that a large amount of substandard housing be replaced; new construction has never begun to meet the demand. Many cities eager to go ahead with improvement programs are deterred because adequate housing is unavailable for those who would be forced to move from their homes by slum clearance and public improvements. It is estimated that at least 2 million new homes a year must be built to meet current needs. We must face the fact that if that level is not met, we will never be able to eliminate slums and substandard housing.

The present bill would encourage overuse of existing housing. Practical urban redevelopment necessitates a substantial amount of slum clearance and rebuilding in dilapidated areas. Mere rehabilitation of housing which has long since become useless will not do a satisfactory job in areas which should be rebuilt. I would point out that public housing is a good investment, and is more economical than slums, urban decay, and human misery caused by substandard housing. A progressive housing program would stimulate economic prosperity and would take care of the many millions who now live in substandard dwellings and those who aspire to own or rent decent homes.

I am not advocating the policy of Government intervention in any field. I am just as happy as the next person to have private industry build homes, provided that private industry would be interested in building homes at a price that people who are in dire need of housing can afford to purchase or rent.

There is no denial of the fact that there is much housing in New York, new construction, in certain sections of the city, that is unoccupied because the rents charged are so exorbitant that it is obviously intended for those in the high income brackets. There is no doubt but that by this time there must be an over-production of apartments for those in the high income brackets because the large number of unrented apartments in brand new developments proves it. Yet, builders continue to build the expensive homes and apartment houses, indicating clearly that there is no intention on their part to cooperate in the building of private low cost housing developments. This is unassailable proof that the Government must continue its public housing program.

I have in previous years stated my position in this matter and have fought for an adequate public housing program. I do not wish to be repetitious, but I must raise my voice and strenuously object to a measure that is as wholly inadequate as the one before us. The housing shortage is too severe, too many people are in dire need of shelter, to allow this administration to go uncriticized when it professes to help and says that all the people in this country should have decent housing, and then dares to bring out a bill which does absolutely nothing for those who must look to the Federal Government for help.

When called upon to answer for this hypocrisy, the Banking and Currency Committee will blame the Appropriations Committee, and that committee will pass the buck to someone else. There is no excuse. The administration has had its way in other things it sought to accomplish. For instance, they found it possible to give assistance to 8 percent of the population to the tune of over $800 million, when they passed the tax bill, but refused to allow the little fellow—the overwhelming majority of the people—a $100 increase in personal exemptions. Now the sad story is being repeated, they are not helping to give housing to the millions who desperately need it, but are giving jobs to builders and more profits to the banks by furthering the higher-priced building program.

Title II permits an increase of interest on veterans and FHA mortgage loans. It would allow a substantial increase of interest rates. The Democrats in committee moved to strike out title II but the motion was defeated. Since power is sought to permit an increase of interest rates on veterans' mortgages, it means that the rates will be increased; another giveaway at the expense of our veterans and others. Economic factors warrant a decrease of interest rates at present and not an increase as is surely contemplated.

I am unalterably opposed to the measure before us; it is a keen disappointment to the American people as a whole; it does not begin to solve their housing problems; it offers no constructive program under which we can proceed for the benefit of those who must look to us for assistance in their grave housing needs.

(Mr. HELLER (at the request of Mr. DOLLINGER) was given permission to extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD.)

Mr. HELLER. Mr. Chairman, it has been stated time and again—and it merits repetition—that if the Republicans would only support the administration its program would have a reasonable chance of success. A case in point is housing legislation.

Earlier this year President Eisenhower submitted to Congress a request for 35,000 housing units to be constructed during each of the next 4 years, making a total of 140,000 such units. Under the Housing Act of 1949, passed by the 81st Congress, a housing program had been authorized for 810,000 units to be constructed over a period of 6 years. It was one of the first great measures I supported after I came to this House in that year.

Unfortunately, that program has never been completed. In recent years it was continually whittled down to a mere shadow of the original program. When the President submitted his proposal calling for only 35,000 units annually, it was indeed a bitter disappointment to many of us in the large urban areas of the country where millions of people are living in substandard dwellings. Nevertheless, it was felt that inadequate as the President's proposal may be it will still continue the housing program on a smaller scale and in time, it was hoped the administration and Congress would awaken to the dire need for adequate housing for low-income families.

The disappointment, however, became even greater when the House Appropriations Committee voted to slash the funds for public housing, thereby killing the program entirely. Whether anything can still be retrieved in the House is a matter of conjecture, but in the meantime it is quite evident that the Republicans choose to ignore the low-income families who are doomed to continue living indefinitely in slums and depriving them of every opportunity to obtain decent housing. By their action, the Republicans also show that they are discriminating against the large cities and the critical need for housing in those cities.

Mr. Chairman, the people in the large urban centers are fighting a tough battle against slums. At times it appears to be almost a hopeless situation. One would, therefore, expect that the Members of this House, who are closer to the people, would be a little more sympathetic toward those who are struggling to live under more wholesome conditions where they can rear their children in better surroundings. The New York Times stated editorially in its issue yesterday as follows:

There is a city problem, just as there is a farm problem. One big city problem is the overcrowded, unwholesome slum, and we cannot believe that the Republicans will be so foolish politically, so shortsighted democratically, so lacking in human feeling as to abandon, or virtually destroy, public housing as a policy, this year, next year, or in the foreseeable future. Private enterprise cannot build at a rental these people can pay.

Unfortunately, the public-housing policy is by now virtually abandoned. The hopes of hundreds of thousands of low-income families throughout the country of ever obtaining decent housing are shattered. The effort to eliminate slums and firetraps in order to maintain a higher standard of living and proper standards of health has been dealt a severe blow. The people of the large urban areas will bitterly resent the scuttling of the public-housing program.

Mr. Chairman, we cannot afford to sentence these families to spend the rest of their lives in slums unfit for human habitation. It is not too late to provide for continuation of our public-housing program, even if it is at the very modest and limited scale proposed by the President. We must not fail our people. We must continue to provide adequate housing for them.

(Mr. FINE (at the request of Mr. DOLLINGER) was given permission to extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD.)

Mr. FINE. Mr. Chairman, the Democratic members of the House Banking and Currency Committee have done an excellent job of pointing out the many serious deficiencies which appear in the proposed administration Housing Act of 1954, H. R. 7839, now being considered by the House. I fully endorse the views of their minority report. While the act does contain a few provisions which may be of some help in alleviating the Nation's serious housing problems, its most serious defect is its absolute failure to make any provision at all for low-rent public housing.

The Democratic Housing Act of 1949 provided for 810,000 low-cost public housing units to be built over a 6-year period, but Republican opponents of public housing successfully prevented full accomplishment of this program by limitations on appropriation bills. President Eisenhower has now requested 140,000 low-cost housing units over a 4-year program. While 35,000 units annually, in my opinion, is insufficient, at least they represent a step in the right direction.

Earlier this week, the Republicans in an appropriation bill ignored the request of their administration and recommended that the entire low-cost housing program be ended immediately. There is a great deal of confusion within the majority party as to just what action was taken with respect to the low-cost housing program but even the most optimistic observers admit that the bill would permit little more than completion of units on which commitments have already been made. Unless some action is taken to add low-cost housing provisions to the legislation being considered today, said program will soon come to a complete halt.

Administration spokesmen claim that H. R. 7839 will be of great aid in rehabilitating slum areas. Certainly, we all know the pressing need for such a program and agree with its objective. However, when slum areas are expensively remodeled the cost will become too great for many of the present occupants to pay. Many of them will have to move to less expensive quarters. And, unless Congress takes some action to revive the low-cost-housing program, decent housing at rents they can afford to pay will simply not exist.

I have always believed that a decent home in which to live and bring up a family is one of the fundamental necessities which every American should have. It is a sad paradox, indeed, that many low-income families are forced to live in substandard dwellings in the large cities of the richest country in the world. There is a specific example of that situation in my own district in New York in what is called the Washington-Clearmont area of the Bronx. This area has a population density more than four times as great as the rest of Bronx County. Many of its buildings are old and contain numerous violations of the building code. Some of them have been condemned and later reopened because of increased demand for housing. In many cases, a single room provides housing for a whole family. Because of these crowded conditions, it is inevitable that disease and delinquency rates should rise far above average.

These conditions are not the fault of the residents of the Washington-Clearmont area. They are good people and good citizens. But many of them are in low-income brackets. And the cost of housing is such in New York that they could not afford to pay the high rents that are charged for really livable dwellings even if they were available. Consequently they are forced into inadequate quarters. The fault is not theirs, but they must pay the penalty.

It is bad enough for adults to be forced to live in such substandard accommodations, but it is even worse for children. Our children are America's future—and we simply cannot afford to doom them to an environment where they merely exist from day to day, with little hope for improvement.

I have seen the effects of the deplorable housing situation in my own district, and because of this it is a problem which is very close to my heart. Ever since coming to Congress I have exerted all my efforts in the struggle to secure some assistance for these unfortunate people in their struggle to secure something better in life for their families.

Decent housing is not just a problem for the people who are forced to live in blighted areas—it is a problem for democracy. We cannot afford to ignore this situation and, in effect, tell the rest of the world that we are willing to let some unfortunate people live in squalor in the midst of plenty.

I urge the Congress to take immediate action to provide urgently needed low-cost housing.

(Mr. ROOSEVELT (at the request of Mr. DOLLINGER) was given permission to extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD).

Mr. ROOSEVELT. Mr. Chairman, I am in complete agreement with my friend and colleague, the gentleman from New York [Mr. DOLLINGER], and with the position of the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. MULTER], both of whom are members of the committee.

The very first time on which I had occasion to address the House, when I came here some 5 years ago, was in support of the National Housing Act of 1949. As I sit here today listening to the arguments on the Housing Act of 1954 it would seem as though I am merely hearing the echoes of the past.

The very same people who rose in June of 1949 to condemn the public housing program and insisted there was no need for public housing for our ill-housed low-income families because private real estate interests would take care of them, are again making the very same argument. The opponents of public housing, it seems, will just not look at the facts; they will not recognize that many of the low-income families who were ill-housed in 1949 are ill-housed today and that many who had adequate housing in 1949 are ill-housed today. The opponents of public housing just will not admit that they were wrong when in 1949 they said there was no need for public housing.

Mr. Chairman, in 1949 it was argued that if we enacted a program for public housing, we would start down the road to socialism. We have had some public housing in the last 5 years, and while I will admit that there has been an unfortunate change in the concept of Government during that period, I wonder whether any of my colleagues on the other side of the aisle would want to claim that the President, by recommending a program for public housing, was furthering the cause of socialism.

Mr. Chairman, the slums of America breed disease, juvenile delinquency, and crime. The slums of America breed malcontents. Why is it that the present administration is willing to recognize that communism feeds and grows on depressed economic circumstances and is willing to foster a program to assist in the building of adequate housing abroad but will not fight for a program of adequate housing at home? I just do not understand why it is that while the President is perfectly willing to make a nationwide television broadcast in support of his tax program for giving tax benefits to those relatively few people who derive substantial income from stock dividends, he has made no similar attempt to persuade the members of his own party to support him in his stated advocacy of at least a minimal program for public housing. In fact the President, at his press conference yesterday, sought to add to public confusion when he suggested that the elimination of appropriations for public housing units not already contracted for was a legislative victory for his position. All of this would suggest either confusion on his part or mere lip-service to the real needs of the people.

The bill before us today instead of representing progress in the field of housing represents serious retrogression. It might well be called "The No Housing Act of 1954." It not only contains no reference to the size of the public housing program that should be undertaken, but it fails to make adequate provision for those who will be forced to vacate the homes to be rehabilitated under the slum clearance, urban redevelopment, and urban renewal programs. Instead of providing housing for low-income families, this bill will make homeless many more thousands of families who are unable to afford these more expensive remodeled homes.

The bill before us today is, in my judgment, a bad bill and I completely agree with the report of the minority on the Banking and Currency Committee in their enumeration of its basic faults.

Ordinarily you would expect that a housing program would be beneficial to those who need homes, and would give encouragement to those who build homes. This bill is designed to protect neither the builders nor the buyers but rather the moneylenders.

This bill, Mr. Chairman, while unfair to most of our prospective homeowners, is particularly unfair to our veterans. It weakens the provisions for veterans preference, it makes it more difficult for veterans to get GI loans, and makes it possible, and I would say probable, that there will be a tremendous increase in interest rates for GI loans.

Last year when the administration decreed its bonanza for the bankers and the moneylenders by raising interest rates, and started the spiral of unemployment, veterans were faced with the necessity of paying 4½ percent interest rates on GI loans instead of 4 percent. The additional expense over the life of most veterans' mortgages created by this ½ percent interest rate increase meant the loss of one bedroom to the average GI with limited resources who wanted to buy a house. Now the Republican Party comes before us with a bill which would authorize increasing interest rates on veterans' loans to 6 percent.

And there is another giveaway in this bill. Under title III, Federal credit will be used to build up a multimillion dollar reserve which will eventually be turned over to the banks and insurance companies, and the Federal National Mortgages Association will be required to liquidate its old mortgages by selling them to the bankers at a discount.

This bill is also deficient by not requiring a builders' warranty for homes built with Federal assistance. There are many honest builders in our country. In fact, I would say that the unscrupulous builder is the rare exception. But there are unscrupulous builders and we have all seen evidence of how some of our GI's have made a lifetime investment in housing which has fallen apart soon after its construction. If the builder and the lender are to have the advantage of Federal guaranty, the Federal Government should provide the purchaser with adequate protection against the builder who is dishonest. The buyer of a 1- or 2-family house built with Federal assistance should be given a warranty by the builder that the house was constructed according to the plans and specifications on which the Federal assistance was based.

Finally, Mr. Chairman, I want to record my opposition to that section of this bill which authorizes controls on real estate credit. Controls on credit are perfectly proper and, in fact, necessary during periods of emergency when it is important to curb inflation and to discourage the use of scarce materials which may be needed for national security. But, in a time such as this, when unemployment is rising and purchasing power contracting, the continued vigor of the construction industry is of the utmost importance if our economy is to prosper. This bill is supposed to encourage more building, but if credit controls are imposed we know that the people who need housing the most, the people without money available for large down payments, will be unable to purchase housing and consequently more people will be laid off and more people will be ill-housed.

An adequate housing program is essential to the well-being of our national economy and constitutes a vital ingredient of the standard of living of the American people. But this bill does not offer any hopeful or substantial solutions to this vital national problem. It will not build any new private housing which would not otherwise have been built. If anything, it is restrictive of additional private housing by making it more expensive for our veterans and others to pay the monthly carrying charges for the homes they might otherwise have been able to afford. This bill does not adequately provide for public housing for those low income families who have no other means of finding decent homes. And in those instances in which the bill might provide hope for new housing it negates its own purpose by making carrying charges high and by restricting prices to unrealistic levels.

I sincerely hope, Mr. Chairman, that at such time as amendments to this bill will be in order, it will be possible to revise the bill so as to give some hope to the ill-housed one-third of this Nation. The American people are a lot smarter than many of you may realize. They will not be fooled by your merely telling them you voted for a housing bill if they do not see houses produced as a result of that bill. In the period in which the 83d Congress has been in session, there have been many giveaways to the few. Let us now give a little to the many.

(Mr. ADDONIZIO (at the request of Mr. DOLLINGER) was given permission to extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD.)

Mr. ADDONIZIO. Mr. Chairman, the bill before us, H. R. 7839, is a blow to those of us who are genuinely concerned about the housing problem. It will not accomplish the things claimed for it. Prior to its introduction this country was subjected to one of the greatest campaigns of political hokum ever witnessed. The public relations boys had a veritable field day waxing eloquent over the wonders of the President's housing program. We were told that the country was to have a brandnew dynamic and progressive housing program. We were told that everyone without regard to either economic status or race, creed, or color, was, for the first time, to have an opportunity to acquire decent, safe, and sanitary housing.

Well, time has passed, and the bright tinsel and ribbon wrapped about the President's housing program by the high-pressure boys has become a bit faded and torn. Upon tearing away the remaining wrapping and examining the contents, H. R. 7839, we find that it is a rather jaded and threadbare piece of merchandise.

The President in his housing message, for example, promised to do something to help minorities secure adequate housing. Now is there anything in this bill that will help minority groups secure adequate housing? Oh, no; quite the contrary. Section 306 repeals the one law, other than the public housing law, which has been of substantial assistance to minority groups in securing housing. That law authorized FNMA to give special assistance to FHA 213 groups. Last year a representative of the National Association for Advancement of Colored People appeared before the House Committee on Banking and Currency and warmly endorsed the extension and liberalization of that act. Nevertheless, the present administration is apparently determined to kill it.

Upon examination, other provisions of H. R. 7839 prove to be equally disappointing. The Congress has always taken the view in regard to both the veteran of World War II and the veteran of the Korean conflict that he is entitled to a preference in the field of Government-aided housing. Congress correctly has recognized that the veteran, having been absent from civilian life for an extended period of time, was at a decided disadvantage in securing adequate housing.

The bill before us will drastically dilute the veteran's housing preference. Under the authority vested in the President by section 201, it will be possible to raise the interest rate on GI mortgages now at 4½ percent to 5½ percent. On a mortgage of $10,000 with a term of 20 years, an increase of 1 percent in the present rate would result in a total increased payment of $1,325 during the life of the mortgage.

Section 201 of the bill would also give the President authority to control real estate credit. I believe that real estate credit controls are in reality a rationing mechanism, not a credit control mechanism. They are moreover, a one-way rationing mechanism. The ration housing solely on the basis of the ability of the people who need housing to raise the downpayment. They would be particularly hard on the recently returned Korean veteran who marries, needs a home, is a good risk, but has not had the opportunity to acquire enough money to make a large downpayment. In 1952 I joined with a majority of the members of the Committee on Banking and Currency in voting to terminate real-estate credit controls. The committee report which accompanied the Defense Production Amendments of 1952 stated:

Evidence was presented to your committee that the inevitable discriminatory aspect of credit controls; namely, that they bear most heavily upon those in the lower-income groups, who have less ready cash, had in the existing situation overshadowed the anti-inflationary aspect.

The major veterans' organizations, including the American Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and the Disabled American Veterans, have all announced their opposition to section 201. I understand that an amendment will be offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. PATMAN] to strike section 201 from the bill. I shall be happy to support the gentleman's proposal.

One of the more delightful goodies in the public relations packaged housing program that we were presented last January was the low-cost house which everyone could buy which as has been said would make every man a king. It was a $7,000 house with no down payment and 40 years to pay. Many hailed it as the answer to a substitute for low-rent public housing. This new animal is to be found in the proposed section 221 of the National Housing Act. But it has a New Look. It no longer costs $7,000. It now costs $7,600 and $8,600 in high-cost areas, and is confined to people displaced by slum clearance or urban renewal projects. I presume most of the large metropolitan areas such as Newark, N. J., may be classified as high-cost areas. The total monthly charge on an $8,600 house amounts to $75.36 per month. Does anyone in this body believe that people living in slums can pay $75 per month for housing? The rents in public housing projects average less than $40 per month. In the course of 40 years this $8,600 house will have cost the purchaser $36,172.80.

There is another feature of this proposal which I find particularly intriguing. At the end of 20 years the lender may sell the mortgage back to the Government for the accrued interest and unpaid principal. At that time the home buyer will still owe approximately $7,100 of his original $8,600. This is indeed a remarkable proposal.

I was gratified when the President endorsed the present low-rent public housing program. I had hoped that the partisan bitterness that surrounded this subject in the past would be ended and that an objective determination could be made regarding the rate of public housing required by the Nation. I was keenly disappointed, therefore, when the President recommended but 35,000 units for the next 4 years. Even this inadequate proposal, however, is missing from H. R. 7839. Under it not one single unit of public housing is authorized.

Several facts were developed throughout the hearings on H. R. 7839 with reference to the need for congressional action on the size of the low-rent public housing program, even though this issue is not dealt with in the bill.

Emphasis was placed by administration spokesmen and by a large majority of other witnesses on proposals to accomplish slum clearance, urban redevelopment, and urban renewal. Great hope was expressed that new programs under sections 220 and 221 under the Federal Housing Administration would make it possible to rehabilitate old homes and thus provide new housing at low cost and with liberal financing terms for families presently living in substandard housing.

I agree totally with the objectives of these programs. However, if old housing is to be rehabilitated and refinanced, one fact is very clear. A substantial number of families, probably half, presently living in the substandard units will be forced to vacate because their economic status will not permit them to live in the more expensive remodeled and modernized homes. It is also a fact that a program of rehabilitation will reduce, rather than enlarge, the housing supply. In those instances where slum housing is demolished as part of an urban renewal program, at least half of the tenants of the old property will have insufficient incomes to permit home purchases even of the proposed $7,600 house—$8,600 in high-cost areas—if it can be built.

It follows, therefore, that unless provision is made to rehouse low-income families, displaced through either renewal or slum clearance, these programs cannot be undertaken and the objectives of H. R. 7839 can never be realized.

It is my understanding that amendments are to be offered from both sides of the aisle to correct the many deficiencies, including the ones which I have discussed, contained in H. R. 7839. It is my intention to support all amendments which will make this bill a genuine and workable housing law. In its present form I am firmly convinced that it would not transfer the laudable housing recommendations of the President into concrete statute form.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. PATMAN].

(Mr. PATMAN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

WILL MOVE TO STRIKE OUT HIGH INTEREST AND REGULATION X TITLE

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, when this bill is read under the 5-minute rule, I expect to offer an amendment to strike out title II. Title II commences at page 146. It includes the proposed increase in interest rates from 1.5 percent, above the long-term interest rate—a rate that has become traditional—to 2.5 percent above the rate for long-term Government bonds. If title II is stricken out, it will also strike out the attempt that is made to reimpose Regulation X. Regulation X had to do, as you remember, with controls over real estate transactions.

The report of the minority members on this bill states:

In recommending the termination of real estate credit controls on June 16, 1952, your Committee on Banking and Currency stated:

"Evidence was presented to your committee that the inevitable discriminatory aspect of credit controls; namely, that they bear most heavily upon those in the lower-income groups, who have less ready cash, had in the existing situation overshadowed the anti-inflationary aspect."

Our committee, almost unanimously, did away with credit controls in June 1952. There was only 1 dissenting vote out of 27 members; it was almost unanimous.

This bill we have before us will reimpose credit controls. That could be in the very worst form in which they were ever used. So my motion to strike out title II will, if it is adopted, strike out a provision that would increase interest rates by a full 1 percent. Also it will strike out this attempt to reimpose Regulation X. I hope that the amendment will be adopted.

This interest rate increase is serious. There is a tendency on the part of a lot of people in our country and particularly certain groups to want to raise interest and service charges more and more. As they outline what they have in mind they do not impress you as being too burdensome on the people, but when you analyze what they have proposed and when you carefully evaluate what will be done in the event the proposal is adopted, you discover that it boils down to this simple fact, that they are denying more people the opportunity of spending their money as they would like to spend it, No. 1; and No. 2, that those people must spend less and less for food and clothing and automobiles, electric appliances, and other things for their comfort and for the necessities of life for themselves and their families and pay more and more for interest and service charges.

I do not know of a bill coming before this House where that is pictured and pinpointed more than in this particular bill on housing. When the effort is made to raise this traditional spread or margin of interest from 1½ percent, which is added to the long-term going rate on Government bonds—that is, if the long-term rate on Government bonds is 2½ percent, then the 1½ percent margin should be added; and that is all right. I am not objecting to it. It has become a pattern over the years, for decades. It is very reasonable. It is all right. It is enough. It is not too much. It is all right. But now in this bill, for the first time, an effort is made arbitrarily to increase that 1½ percent, to 2½ percent or an increase of a full 1 percent.

Let us see what that means in dollars and cents to the average person. The total debts in our Nation today are approximately $640 billion. That means a national debt of approximately $275 billion; State, county, city, political subdivisions, school districts, and all other public debts, and then private debts, including charge accounts at stores and installment purchases, aggregating about $640 billion. If you just increase interest rates 1 percent, and that is what this means, 1 percent now, it will gradually go clear across the debt board and apply to the $640 billion, and the debt is going to get greater, not smaller. Our debts cannot become smaller. I know we complain about it, but we cannot make our debt smaller. If we do, we do not have enough money to do business on. It sounds idiotic, but it is true that our money system is based on debt. If everybody paid their debts we would not have any money to do business on. We would be reduced to barter. Therefore, we cannot pay off all these debts. We are going to have $640 billion from now on and more in order to have a dynamic, expanding economy.

Mr. MERRILL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. I yield to the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. MERRILL. Does the gentleman mean to imply that this bill if passed will bring about an automatic increase in interest rates?

Mr. PATMAN. Yes, I do.

Mr. MERRILL. Does not the gentleman realize that this bill gives the President the right to set the maximum interest rate, and if conditions warrant he could reduce the interest rate as well as increase it? Therefore, it is not really accurate to say that an automatic increase in interest rates comes as the result of this bill.

Mr. PATMAN. It will automatically come as the result of this bill because it will be there if the President and his board want to do it, and investors will go on a strike as they did a year ago on the veteran home mortgage rate, and say, "We won't let you have the money unless you raise that Federal interest rate, which you have a right to do, from 4 to 4½ percent." They had to raise it on the veterans. But that same board could now reduce it to 4, and the same facts that justified the increase from 4 to 4½ percent would compel the reduction now. But that board is not doing it and will not do it.

I say that whenever any board has the power to increase it 2½ percent they are going to sit right back and say, "We will make the loans when you give us the limit that Congress said, and not before." They have done it before and they will do it again. That means a 1-percent increase across the board. That means that you are telling the families of this country, "Congress has endorsed the proposal of compelling you to spend less and less for food and clothing and the other necessities of life in order that you may be compelled to pay more and more as interest."

Where that is so detrimental to the country is that if you let that family of five keep that $200 and let them spend it, it is buying power. It goes into the bloodstream of business and commerce. It turns over 10, 20, 30, or 40 times during the year, and helps everybody. But if you deny them that privilege of paying that $200 into the bloodstream of business and getting something that will help them buy a new hat or buy more of the comforts and conveniences of life, and require them to pay it into this other channel where it will go into the hands of people who will not spend it that way, since they already have plenty and they will not buy an extra hat or an extra pair of shoes or an extra automobile, it is depressing and discouraging and harmful to the country. I hope you will vote for that amendment.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. JAVITS].

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. Chairman, we were greeted this morning by those who would oppose public housing with a tactic, which I am sure will not take in the Republican side—government by jibe. They know, and we know, that with power there is responsibility and that responsibility must be exercised in the interest of the country, and that when it is recognized, as it is in this situation, it will be exercised by any responsible American majority. In addition to that, history marches on. The country does not stand still and developments in the country do not stand still. Except for those who hold doctrinaire ideas that anything the Government does, whether it is the Federal Reserve System or agricultural price supports or aid for road building or public works such as rivers and harbors and low-rent public housing and, in fact, FHA itself—is creeping or galloping or some kind of socialism—most people feel that low-rent public housing as part of a whole housing program is in accord with American policy and ideas. Well, that is perfectly all right. Our country was made that way.

Taking the more or less middle group, there seems to be a general conviction that urban redevelopment or renewal and slum clearance is extremely desirable, and it now becomes clear, as a fact—not an opinion—that urban renewal and slum clearance, a great social and economic program, with which the great majority of the American people agree, is simply impossible—unless you are going to be inhuman to a great many American families—if it does not have a component of public housing; and also that you cannot depend on the States and the cities to supply their own public housing.

This the President's Advisory Committee on Government Housing Policies and Programs found as a fact, and I refer to page 200 of the hearings before the committee. After an exploration of all the alternatives which were available to public housing, they came to the conclusion that you could not carry through a reasonable and balanced housing program, which the administration is for unless it had a component of public housing, and they said:

We are convinced that the program of public housing contained in the Housing Act of 1949 should be continued.

That component the administration has requested at a minimum at 35,000 public-housing units per year for 4 years. So I hope that my Republican colleagues will not be taken in by jibes from the other side because they are now charged with the power which involves the responsibility based upon the facts, and in view of the established condition of urban renewal they are meeting a condition and not a theory.

Mr. YATES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JAVITS. I yield.

Mr. YATES. I should like to state that there appeared at the hearings of our subcommittee on appropriations a delegation from the city of Akron, and included in that delegation was a member of the Akron Chamber of Commerce. The chamber of commerce for this past year has opposed a public-housing program. But this year they came in and stated they not only had no objections, but it was a necessary part of slum clearance.

Mr. JAVITS. Well, the new Director of Public Housing in this administration said he had applications from 1,100 cities, and that certainly is a representative part of our country involving 500,000 units, to participate in this program. Of course, he could not entertain those applications as the law stands now. The administration's program before us today, which I know will be offered as part of this bill, covers just about the preliminary loan contracts, that is, projects actually in being upon which the preliminary work has been done and which largely are vital and essential elements of the slum clearance and the urban redevelopment program, so much so that I think it is fair to say—and I believe that any Member can say to his constituency whether it likes public housing or not—that this is an integral and essential element of the administration's housing program, and demonstrably so on the facts.

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JAVITS. I yield.

Mr. MULTER. Would the gentleman inform the committee if he knows the purport of the amendment which may be offered from his side of the aisle? Can he state what the new number of public housing units may be in that amendment and for how long a time it will apply?

Mr. JAVITS. The gentleman addressing the Committee does not believe it will help to get public housing into any partisan "hasle." The gentleman is now confident that the House will have before it every conceivable kind of proposal for this public-housing program which anyone could ask. It will have before it I understand a continuance of the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill provision for the balance of 810,000 units of public housing, a bill in which, as the gentleman knows, I took an active part. It will have from the gentleman who is asking the question I understand, the President's program—which I am also quite prepared to offer myself. It will have other proposals along the same line, and of course the House will make its choice.

I must say that my purpose in addressing the Committee is to get a maximum amount of support for the administration's program which though I am for much more, as all know, strikes me as the practical way in which to get the maximum support for the minimum public-housing components within the concept of a balanced housing program, and the objective of 1,500,000 new housing units in the coming fiscal year.

Mr. YATES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JAVITS. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. YATES. The Speaker says that he favors the construction of 35,000 units in the present backlog and 35,000 units in the present year. Is that the gentleman's proposal?

Mr. JAVITS. I think the gentleman knows what the President's proposal is and I have just stated my position. I am glad to have the support of the Speaker of the House for a program, but the President's program is 35,000 units public housing per year for 4 years, and I am confident that whether offered by someone else or by me, that program will be offered for adoption by the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JAVITS. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. MULTER. My question was directed to determining whether or not there had been any change in the President's program from that contained in his message.

Mr. JAVITS. I know of no change.

Now, we have an effort to have a housing program that will meet the fundamental needs of the three income levels in the community. I think the Members should have in mind how those are divided. Roughly speaking 20 percent of American families come in the brackets each of $2,000 to $3,000 a year, $3,000 to $4,000 a year, and $4,000 to $5,000 a year of income. Essentially, this housing program should be designed to meet those needs, and a vital ingredient of it is public housing.

In addition, I believe that the maximum limits for section 203 housing in this bill do not meet the requests of those who are doing the construction, either for planning or for the amount which they require in order to do the housing job which the country expects of them. I believe the situation is such that we should meet their views and leave them no reason why they are not going to do the housing job which is in the interests of the country.

And the final point which I wish to put before the committee before we are through with the consideration of this bill is the situation of minorities with respect to housing. They are having a rough time of it. The FHA could help the situation if they would adopt a policy not to lend their guaranty to any form of segregation in housing, but that they are going to comply with the spirit and the letter of the Constitution, they have that power and I hasten to add had it in the previous administration which made so much of its civil rights stand and did not use it either. I do not think it is enough, as far as minorities are concerned, to encourage projects which will serve them. I think the FHA should take a foursquare view of that whole program and carry out the Constitution in respect of it.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JAVITS. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. I understand the gentleman's views, and I have the greatest respect for his ability. I wonder if he heard the gentleman from Mississippi this morning when he was speaking about the socialism in this housing program? Did the gentleman hear that?

Mr. JAVITS. Yes; I did.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. For my own information and information of the Members of the House, would the gentleman tell us the difference between the socialism in this bill and the one that was in the TVA yesterday?

Mr. JAVITS. Of course, as the gentleman knows, it often depends on whose ox is gored. The fundamental philosophy of the great middle group in our country is, I believe, that when it is demonstrable that to perform an essential social or economic function the help of the Government is needed, the Government should help; and that whether or not we are drifting into a Socialist society depends upon the overall quotient which that represents in the whole economic activity and output of the country.

I submit that even if you take the whole Government budget which is not for defense, which comes to something in the area of plus $20 billion and lay it beside a gross national product of $360 billion per annum this country if anything is the greatest fortress of private initiative that was ever known to mankind—and that is after you enact the administration's public housing program and everything in this housing bill.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. The gentleman still has not said anything about the TVA.

Mr. JAVITS. I believe I have.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. RAINS].

(Mr. RAINS asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. RAINS. Mr. Chairman, this is a long bill; it fills many pages, and I frankly think that if we had written about 3 or 4 lines extending FHA, put some more money in FNMA, we would get just as many houses as we will with all this bill filled with platitudes and fond hopes.

The bill needs amending in many places even to approach the jobs outlined. First of all, in order to get the job of housing done you have got to have credit and money, and this bill will not provide any mortgage credit or mortgage money available for loans in North Carolina, Alabama, Texas, or any other of the places away from the great metropolitan lending centers of the Nation. Unless an amendment is adopted to this uncertain language having to do with what we call "Fannie May" in the committee, there will not be any mortgage money available with which to do the fine things set out in the bill of particulars in the legislation itself.

Under the 5-minute rule I hope to offer just a plain simple amendment to strike out the platitudes and go back to the secondary market provisions that we now have by putting some more money in FNMA where we can get it out in the hinterlands as well as in the great cities.

I did not oppose the fantastic provisions in this bill in the committee having to do with 40 years on a mortgage on about an $8,000 house, but I call your attention to one thing: Does anyone expect a house costing $8,000 to last 40 years?

This bill proposes to guarantee on behalf of the Government the payment of that mortgage. Two years ago as a member of the subcommittee I traveled all over the Nation and looked at houses in many cities. I tell you that many of the houses built under an $8,000 guaranteed mortgage will be fit only for slums in 15 years, yet we are called on in this bill to extend the term to 40 years with no downpayment. I leave that with you. I know it is not meant to implement that proposed program and the fine sounding phrases in this housing bill. I think we might as well be frank with each other. If we were to indulge in a great expansive program of 40 years, no downpayment, $8,000 houses, guaranteed payment by the Federal Government, look out about 15 years from now for a huge deficit, because they will not last.

I do not understand either why we should give to the President the right to bounce the interest rate up and down tied on to some kind of formula that it is 2½ percent above the going rate of the Treasury. I am alarmed about the fluctuating jumping up and down of the situation, because how is a home buyer going to know what rate he can get his mortgage money? How can you operate with any degree of certainty under that type of provision?

I think that part of the bill should be stricken and that there should be a firm, straight, positive interest rate in this bill.

I do not believe a single person, with the exception of my long-time, good friend, Albert Cole, who also has some reservations, came before the committee and said, "I am for this bill wholeheartedly." I do not remember it if anyone did. I was not there all the time but I read all of the hearings. The home builders are against the FNMA provision as unworkable. I do not say they are against the whole bill, I do not mean that, but they are against certain provisions of the bill. The lenders do not like FNMA and many other provisions of the bill. Actually, and I am being very kind, this is a poorly written product and it will not do that which it is intended to do.

I tried to get from Mr. Cole when he appeared before our committee what the housing program of the administration was, actually how many houses will this bill build per year? I could not get it. I could not even find out whether the administration had any goal that they hoped to achieve so far as housing was concerned.

I noticed in the press 2 or 3 days ago Mr. Hollyday of FHA apparently disagreeing with some of my good friends on the committee. He thinks we will do well to build 900,000 units a year.

We need an expanded, ever increasing housing program in this country. I am not a gloom or doom boy, but I want to tell you now that the housing industry of this country is one of the major aspects of a well-rounded, well-balanced, up-and-coming economy and if we do not build more than a million housing units next year there is going to be a lag in the economy of this country that will be reflected in the national income for next year.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAINS. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I was trying to check on the statement that the gentleman made, which to me is rather amazing, the attitude which the administration takes about this bill, and when the gentleman stated that Mr. Hollyday made the statement he would do well if—what did the gentleman say?

Mr. RAINS. If we built 900,000 units.

Mr. WOLCOTT. That is rather amazing to me. Where was he quoted to that effect?

Mr. RAINS. I read it in a newspaper story. As I remember it was in one of the Washington papers.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Really, I am amazed.

Mr. RAINS. I was amazed, too, when I saw it. Whether he was misquoted or not I do not know.

Mr. WOLCOTT. He was misquoted, or he said the wrong thing before the committee.

Mr. YATES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McDONOUGH. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. YATES. As a matter of fact, will not the housing industry have to build closer to 2 million housing units a year to keep up with the advance in our population which it is anticipated by 1970 will be closer to 200 million?

Mr. RAINS. Well, actually just in the usual growth we have we will need to build 1,300,000 units under some bill of this type with aid from the Government. We need and likely will build 600,000 units by private builders alone. That is just the average that we will need. To even approach the total needs of this country we will have to build 3 million units a year, because there are 15 million substandard houses in this Nation right today. Even at the going rate, if we continue year in and year out, with all of the aids, we do not catch up the slack and at the end of 15 years, going as we are, we will still have the same number of substandard houses. So we need truly, and I quote the President or some of his press agents, a "dynamic housing program."

I would like to believe that this is going to do the job, but it will not do the job unless you furnish the mortgage money with which to do it.

One other thing. I am concerned about another needed amendment. That is the amendment having to do with warranties to the man who buys one of these houses.

Last year this House placed in the housing bill an amendment known as the warranty provision, not a guaranty but just a warranty, not that the house was perfect but that it was built in accordance with the plans and specifications. Why not do that? Why not give him at least a reasonable break? I believe if you could have seen all of the jerry-built houses that I and some other Members on both sides of a special committee have seen over this country, you would agree that home purchasers, under these Government programs, should receive a builders' warranty.

Mr. Chairman, throughout the course of the hearings the proponents of this bill, if there are any, were unable to show the committee that an effort was made by the Housing Agency, or by the President's Advisory Committee on Government Housing Policies and Programs, to bring together all official existing data, published and unpublished, available in appropriate Government agencies, on the Nation's housing needs so that we might take a look at the total problem. For the life of me, I do not see how it was possible for the Administration or for the distinguished Presidential Housing Committee to evolve a housing program, dynamic or otherwise, without defining the job they were attempting to tackle.

Everyone is interested in knowing how big is our housing job. Knowing that we can tailor its size, the methods to be used, and time it will take to meet the problem, are we setting forth on a 20-year, 40-year, or a 100-year program?

There are those outside of Government asking the same question. Unlike the administration they dug into the facts. Fortune magazine made a study from the point of view of what's good for business. The National Association of Home Builders made a study relating to the market and the housing industry's capacity, present and potential, to produce. The National Housing Conference made a study as to what are the needs of the people, and what is required to meet them over the next 20-year period.

They all began from the same set of facts dug out of the Census Bureau, the Bureau of Labor Statistics, and from other official sources. They all indicate that the job is much larger, and our capacity to do it is much greater than the administration would appear to believe.

The Fortune magazine article of last February spelled out the housing market for the next several years as some 1,400,000 additional units a year, divided this way: 1,100,000 new homes, 200,000 conversions, and 100,000 farm homes.

Appearing before our committee, spokesmen for the National Association of Home Builders indicated a market for 2 million homes a year, new and rehabilitated. Of that number the home builders recommend 1,400,000 new homes each year. Their president told our committee that there should be 1 million new, larger, better-designed homes. These presumably would be for upper income families. He recommended 250,000 lower cost homes which he believed could be built under section 221, proposed for FHA, if cost limits were raised from $7,000 as recommended by the administration, to $7,600 in low-cost areas and $8,600 in high-cost areas, as agreed to by the committee. To that he added 150,000 new rental units to be provided under the urban-redevelopment program to replace demolished slum structures.

Then they would recondition 600,000 homes a year to round out their 2 million figure.

The National Housing Conference, supported by the American Federation of Labor, the Congress of Industrial Organizations, and others recommended a total of at least 2 million new homes each year over the next 20 years. Their estimate was based on an analysis of need made from official Government data.

All of these groups predicated their estimates on a continued high productivity in this country. May I make my position very clear. I believe that this country is capable of maintaining a full economy and of achieving full employment. I believe that a housing program that is dynamic in fact rather than words alone is essential to the maintenance of a full economy. I believe that some day in the foreseeable future this body is going to face up to the facts of the disintegration of our national housing plant, and that it will have the courage and know-how to meet that problem, not with any grudgingly granted half-way measures that are destined by their very inadequacy to failure.

Let us look right now at some unpleasant facts. The 1950 census reveals that we have 15 million substandard homes. Ten million of them are in our urban centers. Some 10 million of the total must be replaced and approximately 5 million are subject to rehabilitation.

Other housing needs arise from the formation of new families, undoubling of families who now lack separate homes, the migration of 3 million families each year, and the desire of many single persons for separate dwellings. In addition, we must replace homes which are demolished by fire or other disaster or are cleared in highway and other construction programs. Finally, many hundreds of thousands of units reach obsolescence each year. These must be replaced or our housing condition deteriorates.

The sum of these annual requirements may range from 1.3 million to 2.4 million units per year. If we replace the homes which were substandard in 1950 during the next 20 years and at the same time meet our annual new needs, we must build from 2 million to 2.4 million new homes per year. If we do not achieve this level of new construction, we will never be able to clear slums and eliminate substandard housing. Indeed, at present levels of construction our present substandard units will never be replaced, and we will have more substandard housing in 1970 than we had in 1950. Even if we build 2 million units a year and rehabilitate 400,000 additional units each year, 5 million American families will still be using homes which were substandard in 1950 when the year 1970 arrives.

Those are facts, my friends, and believe me, we are only deluding the American people when we tell them through our highly trained advertising experts and public relations specialists that the legislation we are considering here today is going to clean up American slums and provide adequate homes, new or rehabilitated, for our families of greatest need.

Let us look at the record. Since the end of World War II housing construction has reached record levels. During the last 4 years we have built an average of 1.2 million homes a year, an achievement far exceeding previous 4-year construction levels. Yet construction volume for the last 3 years has been 20 percent below the peak of 1.4 million units built in 1950. But we have proven that we clearly have a capacity to build from 1.5 to 2 million new homes each year.

Under present systems of financing and Federal aids we can build and market from one to one and two-tenths million new homes each year. In addition, about 600,000 units of private housing should be produced and financed annually to meet the needs of middle and lower income families who are not now able to afford new homes. At least 200,000 units a year of low-rent public housing are needed to meet the needs of low-income families over the next 5 years. In addition, more than 200,000 units per year are needed by farm families to replace substandard homes. Those, believe me, are minimum figures as to need and what must be accomplished if it is to be met over the next 20 or 30 years.

Oh, I know that this House today is not going to face up to these facts. It will pass a measure that will aid families with incomes of $5,000 or more, and almost totally ignore the needs of the 60 percent of the American families whose incomes fall below that figure.

To be sure, you are told here that under this bill houses costing $7,600 or $8,600 will spring up all over the Nation to care for families displaced by a great, dynamic new program of urban renewal. Let us assume that these houses can be built in great metropolitan areas of greatest need, which most experts on housing deny. William Levitt, of Levitt Town fame told our committee that the question was almost academic, because in most areas it cannot be done. Let us assume that 40-year mortgages with no downpayment and $200 closing costs will be marketable paper, which most financial interests deny. Even if they can be built at a standard suitable for family living, the total monthly housing costs to live in such houses will be from $63 to $70 a month. That means that at least half of the families displaced through slum clearance, redevelopment, or urban renewal will be unable to afford such housing.

By its own admission the administration is recommending a program that will provide no more, and probably fewer new homes, than has been the record in recent years. That means that we are going backward, that our slum blight will increase. It means that in this great, vital country with the know-how to develop a destructive force to blow mankind off the face of the globe, we lack the ingenuity to build a force to permit men and women to live in dignity and self-respect in decent, safe, and sanitary homes.

We must place human values above interest rates of 5½ or 6 percent. An authority on housing stated recently to me that if this present measure is adopted there will follow the fact that never before have so many owed so much to so few at 5½ or 6 percent.

To me it seems essential that in the field of housing we must recognize the fact that in today's market it is practically impossible to produce a home meeting minimum standards for family living that can sell at less than $10,000 in high-cost areas and $8,000 in low-cost areas. Therefore, our problem is how, through the channels of private enterprise, can we get homes meeting those standards into the hands of families earning less than $5,000 and down to the very low-income families for whom no substitute has been found for public housing. This bill is only a meager answer.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. McVEY].

(Mr. McVEY asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. McVEY. Mr. Chairman, in the beginning, I should like to compliment the chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee, Congressman Wolcott, on the very excellent manner in which he has conducted the hearings before our committee on H. R. 7839. These hearings have consumed about 3 weeks, and the committee was in session both morning and afternoon a part of the time. The executive session, when the consideration of the hearings was before our committee, continued for almost 1 week. The measure, together with the hearings, produced a volume totaling 889 pages. Scores of witnesses were heard, and the committee had a splendid opportunity to evaluate the opinions of many important organizations in this country with regard to this important problem.

It is a pleasure to say that I have not known a chairman of a committee that exercised any more patience, any more tolerance of anyone's opinion, and any greater effort to bring out a good Housing Act than our chairman, Congressman Wolcott. I want, too, to express my feelings toward the members of our committee on both sides. Naturally, we do not agree in every particular, but our discussions have been friendly, and, in the end, I hope that we have arrived at a proper decision.

Our chairman has presented to you many of the important features in connection with this act. Other members of the committee will doubtless discuss certain titles and amendments which appear to them to be of most importance. One of the main purposes of this act is to present certain amendments and other clarifying provisions which will make this legislation more workable and of greater service to the country. I am going to speak of two amendments which I feel are very helpful—however, no more important than any other which you will be privileged to hear about during this discussion.

There are, in certain cities and villages, defunct lands lying along railroad trackage which are suited for industrial development, but which do not offer the best advantages for housing accommodations. These properties can only be acquired by public agency, and the Housing Act of 1954 appeared to us to be an excellent vehicle for providing proper development of such defunct lands. Accordingly, an amendment was offered, and was approved unanimously by the committee, by adding the following phrase "or open land to be developed for commercial and industrial use" to section 110 (C) of title I, of the Housing Act of 1949. This title as originally written permitted the acquisition of "land which is predominantly open and which because of obsolete platting, diversity of ownership, deterioration of structures, or of site improvements, or otherwise substantially impairs or arrests the sound growth of the community, and which is to be developed for predominantly residential uses." By adding to the last sentence the following phrase "or open land to be developed for commercial and industrial use," a very simple amendment permits, under the right of eminent domain, the use of these defunct lands for useful purposes which will be of great advantage to cities and villages where such trackage does exist.

Another amendment which seems very simple but which offers great advantage to school districts where difficulty is found in meeting housing accommodations is one to permit builders to construct one-family residences adjacent to school lands and to lease such quarters to boards of education for school purposes. These family dwellings when constructed without partitions will accommodate two classrooms, and will relieve some of the congestion that exists in communities where the permanent construction of a school may need to be postponed because of local financial problems.

I do not need to repeat the figures that have been given with regard to our rapid growth in population in recent years. This rapid increase has created a shortage of 350,000 classrooms, and it is estimated that 3 out of 5 of these classrooms will be crowded. This situation creates tremendous responsibilities upon communities which find themselves hard pressed to construct school-building facilities sufficiently rapid to take care of the incoming enrollments properly.

Our committee has unanimously endorsed this amendment to H. R. 7839, which will be a long step in the right direction of relieving hardships in many cases. Prior to this amendment the law did not permit a builder to receive FHA financing for the construction of a building to be leased to public schools. Any such structures had to be financed entirely by the builder. Such a provision retarded materially the proposition which I have explained, and the law which is now before us will do much to assist in relieving the pressure that now exists in many communities.

There are many other features of this bill which I think will be excellent for the country as a whole. It does not contain a public housing feature. It was believed by the Committee on Banking that this matter was in the hands of the Appropriations Committee, and no action of this character was required in connection with the passage of H. R. 7839.

This bill does provide means by which slum-clearance projects may be carried forward under Government insurance, which should assist materially in improving slum conditions in many of our cities and villages. There are many on this floor who are in full accord with slum-clearance programs but who do hesitate to vote for public housing. This act separates those two problems and make it possible for Members of this body who favor slum clearance and not public housing to vote for this measure. I am not going into this problem, because it will doubtless be discussed by others, but in my own mind I am glad that the two issues are not confused, and that we may go forward with a good slum-clearing project without the weight that might be caused by attaching to this measure a public housing program.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GRANAHAN].

(Mr. GRANAHAN asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD at this point.)

ADDING LUXURY TAXES ON DECENT HOUSING

Mr. GRANAHAN. Mr. Chairman, the Congress on Tuesday enacted and the President on Wednesday signed a bill to reduce nearly all of the excise taxes—the so-called luxury taxes—and it has now become law.

The administration, as everyone knows, fought that bill strenuously. It put pressure to work all along the line. Now that it has passed, however, and it includes many provisions inserted by the Senate which we Democrats in the House were unable even to get considered on this side of the Capitol, the administration acknowledges that the bill will have a good effect on the economy by reviving business activity in many of the so-called luxury classifications—furs, jewelry, cosmetics, luggage, along with such things as admissions, telephone tolls, freezers, refrigerators, other appliances, and so on. Unfortunately, the bill does not reduce the present 10-percent tax on automobiles and parts.

But is it not strange, Mr. Chairman, that so soon after the Congress enacts a bill to reduce the so-called luxury taxes—and a lot of things covered are not luxuries at all, of course—it should now turn its attention to a bill which has the effect of establishing luxury taxes on decent homes for the American people?

Yet that is exactly what I am afraid we are doing in this housing bill, which is put forward by the Republican majority as a measure to stimulate housing construction.

What it does, however, as I see it, is to pave the way to making housing more expensive. Particularly is this true in regard to interest rates on FHA and GI mortgages. Instead of having clear-cut restrictions on interest rates on these mortgages—a matter on which the Congress should certainly maintain constant and continuing surveillance—we are told to just give the President blanket authority to up those rates as high as even 7 percent on FHA or whenever the situation in his opinion warrants that step.

Interest represents one of the major costs of purchasing a home. By the time you pay off the average mortgage, you have paid it twice—once in the amount of the principal and then perhaps the same amount or even more in interest. So a raise in interest rates on FHA or GI mortgages means a heavy additional burden on the home buyer. That is part of the story.

HAS THE PRESIDENT DEMONSTRATED GOOD JUDGMENT ON INTEREST RATES?

But let me ask, has the President demonstrated such good judgment, such clear insight and vision, on interest rates in the past that he should be given this blanket authority to raise at will or by whim the cost of a veteran's or anyone else's mortgage.

It was about a year ago, almost immediately after the Eisenhower administration took office, that the Government abruptly raised interest rates on Government obligations. This was one of the greatest handouts to the bankers we have seen in this country since the Mellon days. The Government's cost of financing the national debt shot up tremendously—costing us all more in higher taxes and in a higher national debt—while at the same time all we got out of it was a hard-money or tight-money policy which is at the root of our present economic difficulties. It caused a lot of small businesses to go to the wall, because they could not get credit except on prohibitively high interest rate terms. That is because the bankers were encouraged by the administration to raise interest rates.

The administration also proposed, and this Congress approved—over the vigorous objections of most of us on the Democratic side—a boost in veterans' housing interest rates. That was supposed to bring a flood of investment money into the mortgage market for GI-housing loans. But did it? All it did was raise the cost of the veteran's home then being built.

The housing industry is down—not up—as a result of those actions of this administration. The Housing and Home Finance Agency told the Appropriations Committee in connection with the independent offices appropriation bill, which we passed here on Wednesday, that its budget was based on estimates of only 900,000 new housing units in the coming fiscal year. Yet in the past 5 years we have never gone below 1 million units a year. So we have a recession in the housing-construction field, and I think it can be blamed on this high-interest-rate policy instituted by the administration last year which not only made housing more expensive but which led to an industrial downturn which boosted unemployment and thus eliminated a lot of people as prospects for new homes.

So let us not repeat that mistake—let us not make it even worse—by putting interest rates on FHA and GI homes on a rollercoaster so that we never know from one month to the next what the rate will be. We will have housing by whim of the bankers.

HOUSING FOR THE LOWER INCOME GROUPS

We are also being asked to write a luxury tax on housing into this bill by making no provision whatsoever for a continuation of the public-housing program. Republican votes in this Congress have already killed off public housing in the sense that no new projects can be started. We have about 35,000 units for which the Government has entered into binding contracts and for which provision will have to be made, but as it now stands not a single additional project can be undertaken.

The President has asked for very little in this respect—35,000 units a year for 4 years. That is a drop in the bucket compared to the need, and compared to the authorizations the previous Democratic Congresses provided for 135,000 a year. But the President's own party in the Congress has refused to go along with him even on that extremely modest request, and now we see the spectacle of an overall housing bill, presumably representing the President's housing program, which does not contain any provision at all for a single new public housing project.

Instead, we are told to support a plan to get the families which are eligible for public housing by reason of low income and slum housing conditions and by eviction for redevelopment to buy—I repeat—buy homes for themselves. What kind of a home could a family eligible for public housing afford to buy? If it had that kind of income, it would not be eligible for public housing to begin with.

Providing 40-year loans to these people on an $8,600 house would not solve the problem either, because, for one thing, you cannot build much of a house for $8,600 in Philadelphia with any reasonable expectancy that it would remain standing for 40 years and not be a slum itself at that point, and second, the carrying charges or shelter rent on such a mortgage, I am told, would run over $75 a month, when you count in taxes, utilities, and so on.

I would like to suggest to the Republican leaders who put this plan forward as a substitute for public housing that they give us the magic formula by which low-income families eligible for public housing could afford $75 a month to live in one of these $8,600 houses, assuming the house could even be built for that.

No, Mr. Chairman; what we are saying to the slum dweller is that if you do not like the slum you live in—and if it is torn down to make way for a redevelopment project—go find another slum, probably an even worse one. Because the Federal Government as it is now run does not have any plan for meeting your need for a decent place to live at a price you can afford.

And to the veteran, we are saying in this bill: Pay, boy, pay, because the mortgage bankers want higher interest rates and the Republican Party believes in giving the bankers whatever they ask for.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 8 minutes to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BROWN].

(Mr. BROWN of Georgia asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BROWN of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, I am not satisfied that H. R. 7839 fully answers this Nation's housing needs. Neither do I feel that it is adequate to insure that the construction industry will continue to make the major contribution to our national economy as has been the case since the end of World War II.

H. R. 7839 contains, I am sorry to say, several major deficiencies. These include: First, failure to maintain the traditional policy of Congress that veterans are entitled to a preference in housing legislation; second, failure to provide a realistic, workable secondary mortgage market; third, delegation to the President of authority to set maximum interest rates on FHA and VA mortgages; and, fourth, surrender by the Banking and Currency Committee of its jurisdiction in the field of low-rent housing. I shall elaborate more fully on each of these in a few minutes.

Mr. Chairman, I certainly hope that this committee will see fit to approve amendments which will be offered to correct these deficiencies.

There is, it is true, many excellent and necessary provisions in this bill. They should receive the support of us all. Section 121 authorizes a much needed increase in FHA insurance authorization of 1.5 billion dollars, the President being authorized to make available an additional $500 million if needed. The FHA was set up under authority of the National Housing Act, a bipartisan measure, enacted in 1934. The FHA has done a truly outstanding job. While I appreciate that no system, however carefully planned, can always operate with perfect efficiency because it cannot eliminate the factor of mistakes in human judgment, in the overall the FHA record has been truly an enviable one. The FHA has always enjoyed widespread approval in all sections of the country. It is a program which has been devoid of partisanship. Its record is such that it warrants the wholehearted and enthusiastic endorsement of every last Member of this body.

Section 101 would amend title I of the National Housing Act to assist in the improvement and conservation of existing houses by increasing the maximum insured loan for modernization and repair from $2,500 to $3,000 and the maximum maturity from 3 to 5 years. The latter provision would reduce the monthly charges required to carry such loans by about 35 percent. For example, the monthly charge required to carry a $1,000 loan having a 5-year maturity would be about $21, as compared with about $32 in the case of a 3-year maturity.

Certain changes would also be made with respect to title I loans to finance the improvement or conversions of existing structures used or to be used as dwellings for two or more families. The present maximum of $10,000 for this type of loan would be changed to $1,500 per family unit or $10,000, whichever is the greater, and the maximum maturity would be increased from 7 to 10 years.

Section 128 extends the military rental housing program under the Wherry Act for 1 year. This is most desirable. The Wherry Act has contributed more to the stability and welfare of the armed services personnel than any other measure pertaining to housing that has ever been adopted by the Congress. Rents in many locations are still beyond the financial capability of service personnel and impose a hardship on the servicemen who is transferred into an area of high costs. We must, therefore, do our best to provide the servicemen with housing where he will not be subject to rentals beyond his ability or substandard housing conditions. The extension of the Wherry Act is the best way to do this.

Section 904 was added to the bill by an amendment offered by the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. DEANE]. It would provide additional authorization for the farm-housing assistance under title V of the Housing Act of 1949. It is administered by the Farmers' Home Administration of the Department of Agriculture and authorizes the Secretary of that Department to extend financial assistance in the form of loans and grants to farm owners to enable them to construct, improve, or repair farm housing. Loans of up to 33 years' maturity which bear 4-percent interest may be made to farmers having adequate farms who are nevertheless unable to obtain private credit on terms which they can reasonably fulfill. Similar loans, supplemented by modest contributions during a 5-year period are also authorized where the farmer is unable to undertake to repay the loan in full. This form of aid is authorized only if the farm is potentially adequate—that is, capable of being improved to a point where it is self-sustaining—and if the necessary improvement program is actually undertaken. Finally, title V authorizes modest loans and grants to help farm families on very poor farms to undertake minor improvements or minimum repairs to farm dwellings where necessary to remove hazards to the health or safety of the occupants.

The authority granted by the present law to obtain loan funds from the Treasury was limited to $25 million on and after July 1, 1949, an additional $50 million on and after July 1, 1950, an additional $75 million on and after July 1, 1951, an additional $100 million on and after July 1, 1952, and an additional $100 million on or after July 1, 1953. H. R. 7839 would provide authorization for an additional $100 million on or after July 1, 1954.

Annual contribution commitments for housing on potentially adequate farms were authorized to be entered into on and after July 1, 1949, in sums aggregating not more than $500,000 per year—for 5 years—and additional commitments were authorized on and after July 1 of each of the years 1950, 1951, 1952, and 1953, respectively, which would require additional contributions of up to $1 million, $1.5 million, $2 million, and $2 million per annum, respectively. H. R. 7839 would provide a similar additional authorization of $2 million on and after July 1, 1954.

Appropriations were also authorized for the loans and grants for improvements and repairs. Appropriations of $2 million were authorized on and after

July 1, 1949, and further amounts of $5 million, $8 million, $10 million, and $10 million on July 1 of each of the years 1950, 1951, 1952, 1953, respectively. The bill would provide an additional authorization of $10 million on or after July 1, 1954. I could give my wholehearted support to these provisions of H. R. 7839.

Unfortunately, Mr. Chairman, as I have said before, there are a number of provisions of this measure which I feel are most unwise.

Under the authority vested in the President by title II of the bill to adjust interest rates, fees and service charges, maximum financing charges on federally aided home-mortgage loans may go as high as 7 percent on the lowest-priced housing—the new FHA section 221 program—6½ percent on the other FHA-insured and 5½ percent on VA-guaranteed home-mortgage loans. In this connection I wish to point out that under section 203 of the National Housing Act, the FHA Commissioner already has authority to raise interest rates on most mortgages as high as 6 percent. On the other hand, under present law the maximum rate on GI home loans cannot be higher than 4½ percent. Consequently, it appears that the net effect of the new authority proposed under section 201 of the bill is to enable increases in interest rates to be made on GI home loans. All veterans' organizations are opposed to this provision and so testified before our committee.

Provision for a 2½-percent spread over the yield on long-term marketable Government bonds under title II of the bill represents a rise of 1 percentage point in the spread that investors were willing to accept prior to the inauguration of the hard-money policy. In view of the considerable easing of the money and credit supply since mid-1953, I do not believe it is necessary to provide for an increase in the traditional spread of 1½ percent between the maximum rate on federally aided home mortgages and the yield on long-term Government bonds, unless it is intended to reimpose restrictive tight money conditions on the economy.

Amendments to title II of the National Housing Act contained in title I of the bill would have immeasurable effect on the GI home-loan program. The proposed increase in loan to value ratios and the reduction in cash downpayments, together with the increase in the permissible term of the loan which will make lower monthly carrying charges possible, will make considerably more liberal financing terms possible for home purchasers under the FHA program. This, of course, would tend to dilute the preference which has been available to veterans obtaining GI financing, since the amendments would place nonveterans in virtually an equal position with respect to housing credit terms.

On the other hand, it is noted that the only action which the President could take in respect to VA-guaranteed home loans would be to make GI loan terms more restrictive. All eligible veterans, including recent veterans of the Korean conflict will be deprived to a considerable degree of the preferred position they heretofore enjoyed in respect to housing credit.

Mr. Chairman, an adequate and readily available supply of mortgage financing is a prime requirement for a high and sustained volume of home building. Yet, according to the consensus of testimony before our committee, title III in its present form imposes unduly restrictive requirements upon FNMA and may actually have the effect of deterring mortgage lending instead of sustaining it. Specifically, it was pointed out that the 3-percent nonrefundable contribution to the Federal National Mortgage Association, to be borne by the lender upon mortgage sales to FNMA, will unduly restrict use of the facility. I should like to point out, in passing, that it is unlikely lenders will assume the burden of the 3-percent contribution; rather, the home builder or, more likely, the home buyer will ultimately pay it. Consequently, under the bill Federal credit—and equity capital provided by home purchasers—will be used to build up a multi-million-dollar secondary market reserve facility which will then be turned over to banks and insurance companies who sold mortgages to FNMA but otherwise contributed little to acquire ownership share.

Under title III—the FNMA requirement to purchase at market price—the 3-percent contribution and the service fee may result in a discount of home mortgages of 6½ to 7 percent under today's market condition.

Indeed, the president of the National Association of Home Builders testified:

On a $12,000 loan, for example, this formula would result in a cost for permanent mortgage financing of $750 to $850. This equals, and probably exceeds, the extremely high discounts which characterized the mortgage market during last summer's unusual credit stringency.

Preference heretofore accorded GI mortgage loans in the secondary market operations of the FNMA is not continued under the bill; neither are GI loans specifically included in the category of home-mortgage loans for which FNMA is authorized to provide special assistance.

Mr. Chairman, the Banking and Currency Committee has always had jurisdiction in the public-housing program. I think the integrity of the committee should be protected. It is not a question of whether you are for or against public housing. The point is that it is not the function of the Appropriations Committee to legislate in this field.

Mr. Chairman, I believe these deficiencies are serious and I shall certainly give my wholehearted support to amendments to correct them.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. GWINN].

Mr. GWINN. Mr. Chairman, I want to speak for a few minutes to the question of the removal of slums and the building of new houses and the putting in of new kitchen sinks and new electric stoves and other modern gadgets as a political device for improving the morals of people. We got into this particular additional socialistic experiment in 1933, because it was alleged over and over again that if you improve the housing conditions of the people, you will improve their morals. It sounds well like many other sounding phrases, but on examination the substance of it disappears with the sound. There has never been presented to this House, or to any other group that I can find, any scientific data to show that by moving people into a new house at public expense under political compulsion at half-rent, free from taxes, that you have improved the morals of the people. But when the Government says so, and high authorities say so generally, after a while the people begin to say, "Why, it is true, the Government says it is true that when you improve the physical surroundings of people, and when you give them the modern gadgets of life, they turn around and become good people." Since there is no evidence of it, why should we continue to follow the illusion? The fact of it is that public housing, TVA, subsidies generally, follow an unmoral rule. That is, the taking of private property without consent by political compulsion to make it public property for the benefit of special groups is antisocial and morally wrong. Moral qualities which reside in the individual alone certainly cannot be conveyed by force of government to another. So when government attempts to separate a man's house or property rights from him by force so as to convey it to another, nothing of moral value whatever can be conveyed. Violence against property rights of the one brings more degradation to the other who takes the proceeds. Besides, it corrupts the government that acts as a go between.

Mr. YATES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GWINN. I will yield a little later.

Politically we know Government tenants lose their freedom. They are told how to vote. They are political dependents. They lose their moral choices, too.

Let me quote statistics to prove it. A judge is quoted in the Providence Journal of March 20, 1954, as follows:

Slums do not make delinquency. Delinquent people make slums.

That is Judge Francis J. McCabe, of the Rhode Island Juvenile Court, speaking. He continues:

Public housing projects don't wipe out juvenile and adult delinquency by eliminating slums. Delinquents are more plentiful in the projects because they move into the projects from scattered areas and thereby become more concentrated.

In Los Angeles the chief of police has stated that calls for police cars are higher from public housing projects than from privately owned projects across the street. Police calls per thousand population in a privately owned project were 0.08 percent. In 4 big housing projects the calls per thousand were 13.75 percent.

The chief of police has stated on the basis of a study that on the average there was 96 percent more crime in permanent public-housing projects in Los Angeles than in the slums themselves, and more than 1,000 percent more crime in public-housing projects than in the privately owned, low-rent housing projects in the same city.

In Houston, Tex., it is the same story. Wherever you go it must be the same. The concept that a new kitchen stove improves the morals of the person who operates it is a pagan concept.

Certainly one excuse for taking 35,000 new houses from some people and giving them to others to improve their morals fails.

The people do not like such houses. They feel like they are living in rows of prison cells with political bosses and guards over them.

Listen to the vacancy rates:

By States: Little Rock, Ark., in 400 public-housing units, 101 are vacant.

Tuscaloosa, Ala.: In 340 housing units, 76 are vacant.

In Chicago, Ill.: In 1,027 units, 108 are vacant.

In Peoria, Ill.: Of 846 units, 151 are vacant.

In Gary, out of 317, 23 were vacant. That is a fairly good record.

In South Carolina, of 58, 17 are vacant.

In Tennessee, Pulaski, out of 80, 24 are vacant.

In San Antonio, out of 500, 172 are vacant.

Mr. BYRNE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GWINN. I yield.

Mr. BYRNE of Pennsylvania. What about the large cities? What about Philadelphia? How many are vacant in this city?

Mr. GWINN. I just read Chicago. I do not see Philadelphia for the moment. Chicago out of 1,027 had 108 vacant; that is more than 10 percent, in these times when the need is so great.

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GWINN. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. MULTER. First, with reference to what the gentleman is talking about now, the vacancy rate, I think the statistics before you have a note indicating that the vacancy rate includes people being moved out because they no longer come within the maximum earning rate; it includes vacancies while the premises are being prepared for new tenants. Very few are vacant because there are no tenants available. They are vacant while being prepared for new tenants, while new tenants are being investigated to see whether they fall within the terms of the law on such apartments, and while the apartments are being processed for new tenants.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 15 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. O'HARA].

Mr. O'HARA of Illinois. Mr. Chairman—

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman from Illinois yield?

Mr. O'HARA of Illinois. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. CELLER. May I take 1 minute?

Mr. O'HARA of Illinois. I am glad to yield the gentleman 1 minute of my time, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to speak out of order for 1 minute.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Chairman, Leo Rover, United States attorney for the District of Columbia, is guilty of a great indiscretion. He induced a call of the municipal court judges of the District and criticized the judges for the low rate of convictions for homosexual offenses. He expressed disappointment and dismay that convictions result in only 38 percent of the cases tried. No appointed official dare tell any judge how to conduct a trial, much less indirectly induce a judge or judges so to conduct trials as to increase the batting average of convictions for any United States attorney.

The answer is for the United States attorney to bring in better and more substantial evidence.

Mr. Rover had better not be guilty of any such improper conduct again.

I thank the gentleman.

[Mr. O'HARA of Illinois addressed the Committee. His remarks will appear hereafter in the Appendix.]

Mr. GAMBLE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. SCOTT].

(Mr. SCOTT asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I rise particularly to call attention to the considerable misapprehension which exists in my city of Philadelphia regarding the present state of the housing program. Yesterday's papers contained statements by the city council president, James A. Finnegan, to the effect that House action threatens total loss of Philadelphia housing projects—pending, completed, and not started.

Mr. Finnegan makes a thoroughly political presentation, I am sorry to say, and represents that certain projects now under completion cannot be completed.

Among other statements he makes are some to the effect that the North Allen development, bounded by Harper, Percy, Poplar, and 12th Streets, adjacent to the 1,000-unit Richard Allen homes, cannot be proceeded with and that, though firm contracts have been entered into, the time, money, and effort spent on this project will be a total loss.

So said Mr. Finnegan.

The same statements are made with reference to the Wilson Park and Raymond Rosen projects.

Mr. CHUDOFF. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SCOTT. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. CHUDOFF. I read the Philadelphia papers of yesterday and carefully read the statement by the president of the city council, Mr. Finnegan, to the effect that the North Allen project could not be completed. I think that is correct. I did not see anything at all about the Raymond Rosen Apartments or the Wilson Park project. The Raymond Rosen Apartments are in my district. The people are going to move into them in May. In what paper did the gentleman see this statement concerning the Raymond Rosen Apartments?

Mr. SCOTT. I would refer the gentleman to the Philadelphia Inquirer of Wednesday, March 31, and the Philadelphia Bulletin of Wednesday, March 31, and the statements by the city council president contained therein. Particular reference is made to this remark:

In an attack on the House Republican leadership, Finnegan said the Philadelphia Housing Authority already has spent considerable time and money in preparing plans for the 10-acre development bounded by Harper, Percy, Poplar, and 12th Streets.

Mr. CHUDOFF. That is the North Allen project.

Mr. SCOTT. Then Mr. Finnegan went on to say that the House or its committees not only sounded the death knell for all future public housing but also put the Federal Government in the position of unilaterally nullifying firm contracts already entered into with local housing authorities.

Therefore, he has made a blanket statement that all pending and future contracts are imperiled by the House action.

I would like to make the point that Mr. Finnegan is totally, completely, utterly, absolutely, and comprehensively in error.

Mr. CHUDOFF. What the gentleman is doing is making an interpretation of a statement that does not say anything like that. It is true we will not be able to complete the North Allen homes. We have spent thousands of dollars through the redevelopment authority clearing the ground, and under this bill we will not be able to complete this project. There is not a word in that statement about either the Raymond Rosen or the Wilson Park homes, and I do not think Mr. Finnegan intended to mean that.

Mr. SCOTT. If the gentleman will permit me to proceed, I will be glad to point out that the specific reference, and I want to be quite accurate about it, to Raymond Rosen and the Wilson Park projects occurs in a statement following the inclusive statement of Mr. Finnegan that all of these projects are imperiled. Then the specific statement is made by Mr. Alessandrini, the executive director of the Philadelphia Housing Authority, that among those projects which will be affected are the Wilson Park project and the Raymond Rosen apartments and he added that it is "conceivable that the housing authority may find itself with an open tract ready for development and no funds," referring to certain other tracts.

Mr. CHUDOFF. That is the statement of Mr. Alessandrini, not Mr. Finnegan.

Mr. SCOTT. But it follows Mr. Finnegan's inclusive statement that the action of the House refers to pending and future projects and that it nullifies both. As to the Allen project, we will be able to complete it under the action taken yesterday on the appropriation bill.

Mr. CHUDOFF. I think the gentleman is making a wrong interpretation of the statement, and is reading something into the record that is not there.

Mr. SCOTT. The gentleman and I are both in favor of the public-housing program for Philadelphia. If he does not mind, I would like to go on with that theme.

Mr. BYRNE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SCOTT. I yield.

Mr. BYRNE of Pennsylvania. The gentleman knows I represent the third district, in which the Allen project is located, also the one at 12th, Poplar, Percy, and Harper Streets. Does the gentleman also know that 2 years ago they demolished the properties from Spring Garden Street to Poplar Street, and all they did was put fences up? What is going to happen to them? The gentleman knows that in this section of the city we are badly in need of public housing from Vine Street north.

Mr. SCOTT. I agree with the gentleman that we are in need of public housing and that the gentleman's opinion and mine, I know, are the same. The point which I wish to make here is that the ruling of the Comptroller General, which is also referred to in the press account details that the Government can still proceed with 35,000 units already contracted for during the next fiscal year, and permitted by our action on the appropriation bill yesterday. Therefore, the present project in Philadelphia is not imperiled and, furthermore, should not be imperiled because I agree with the mayor of Philadelphia in his telegram to the various officials here of March 5, 1954, in which he says:

A survey of incomes of families living in blighted areas in Philadelphia clearly reveals that large scale low-rent housing is the only real solution.

But, I want to make this point, that it is my understanding that an amendment or amendments will be offered here in addition to the action of yesterday, which amendment will authorize at least 35,000 new units for fiscal 1955. Amendments will be offered here which will continue the program, as recommended by the President, on a year-to-year basis. One such amendment will at least assure, if adopted, the authorization for 35,000 additional housing units during the fiscal year 1955. The minority of the committee in its dissenting opinion states that it wishes to support the President's program "because it would make it possible for him to carry out the program he proposes, and to meet the needs of families of low income displaced by the slum clearance and urban renewal program he recommends."

The amendment which will be introduced from the administration side will accomplish that purpose. Therefore, I hope that such an amendment, when offered, will be adopted by the committee.

Mr. YATES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SCOTT. I yield.

Mr. YATES. What will the proposal be—to incorporate the President's recommendation of 140,000 units to be constructed over a 4-year period?

Mr. SCOTT. I imagine that the people who plan to offer the amendment would like to reserve the exact wording of it, until after the bill has been read for amendment. I would not want to undertake to say how some Member's amendment may read. It may be changed between now and the time that it is offered. But it will carry out the President's program for the fiscal year 1955 so I am informed.

Mr. YATES. Will not the gentleman agree that the President's proposal, as stated both by the President in January and by former Congressman Cole, the Present Housing and Home Finance Administrator, is for the construction of 140,000 units over a period of 4 years?

Mr. SCOTT. At the rate of, I understand, 35,000 units per year.

Mr. YATES. That is for 4 years.

Mr. SCOTT. It may be offered on a year-to-year basis or it may be offered on some other basis. But I do not want to anticipate what some other gentleman will do in detail.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to make, what seems to me, an important point, if I may. The Philadelphia housing authority has every reason to be proud of the fact that juvenile delinquency in its area is only one-half of that in surrounding areas, and that the projects are a financial asset to the city. For example, the three tracts on which the Allen, Johnson, and Tasker homes were built had been delinquent $140,000 in taxes. One site was a slum; one was a deteriorated cemetery; the third was a dump.

Today, although the housing authority pays the city only 10 percent of the rentals, the income from these sites to the city is one-third greater than in preproject times. Meanwhile, of course, the fire risk and police coverage and crime rate of the former slum areas dropped sharply.

Mr. BYRNE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SCOTT. I yield.

Mr. BYRNE of Pennsylvania. I am glad the gentleman brought that point out because about an hour ago the gentleman from New York [Mr. GWINN] started to read a list of vacancies in public-housing projects and ignored the juvenile delinquency problem. You have proved by your last statement that in Philadelphia at least, there are no public-housing vacancies, and, in fact, we have a long waiting list of applicants.

Mr. SCOTT. I want to say that the program is essential in my city of Philadelphia. It improves our economy. It sustains and supports the declared need for those projects, and it certainly lowers the cost of policing and fire protection. It greatly decreases crime. As a former assistant district attorney for 15 years, I know these areas and I know whereof I speak, and I do not have to rely on guesses.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. DEANE].

(Mr. DEANE asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DEANE. Mr. Chairman, I signed the minority report, not in any partisan sense, but because I sincerely felt that the bill failed to include certain provisions that are earnestly desired by certain groups in the country. I am thinking of the veterans groups and the provisions of the bill eliminating veterans' preferences, and the plan to increase interest rates.

Mr. Chairman, a minority report, I think, promotes good legislation. When individuals differ with their colleagues in order to point up the essential needs of housing, or any other type of legislation, it is progress.

RURAL HOUSING PROGRAM

I join with my colleagues on both sides in commending our chairman the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Wolcott] for his liberality and patience during our long hearings.

To him as well as other members of the committee, I want to express my personal appreciation for the acceptance of an amendment which I offered, which restored to the bill the rural housing program.

On page 30 of the report and page 225 of the bill you will see where that legislation is described and explained.

Mr. Chairman, under permission previously granted, I insert at this point a table which summarizes by States statistical data on this rural housing program administered by the Farmers Home Administration:

It is significant that over $94 million has been loaned under this rural housing program, and less than 5 percent are in arrears. This rural housing program is frankly the only live housing program open to our rural people. For example, the Veterans' Administration in 1953 made a total number of loans of 322,160, but only 1,455 were farm loans.

RURAL HOUSING NEEDS

Let me give you a few facts, the latest available on the need for rural housing and improvements. We fight to eliminate slums in the great cities. We must not do less for the rural citizenship of this country.

STATEMENT OF RAYMOND C. SMITH, ASSISTANT CHIEF, BUREAU OF AGRICULTURE ECONOMICS, DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, FEBRUARY 1949

The deficiency of farm housing compared with urban housing, though not so marked as in earlier years, still is much in evidence. In April 1947, for example, 67.3 percent of rural farm dwellings lacked running water, while only 4.5 percent of urban dwellings lacked this facility; only 20 percent of farm dwellings had private bath and flush toilet, while about 84 percent of urban dwellings were so equipped; about 60 percent of farm dwellings and 98 percent of urban dwellings had electric lights; about 10 percent of occupied rural farm dwellings and less than half of this percent of urban dwellings were overcrowded; whereas 83 percent of the urban housing units possessed all designated modern facilities, such as lights, running water, bath, and flush toilet, only 19 percent of farm dwellings were as well provided.

THE URBAN RENEWAL PROGRAM

I come now to a discussion of the new bold slum-clearance program, under a new designation, "The Urban Redevelopment Program." If you will refer to page 126 of the bill, you will see that the Commissioner can guarantee loans up to $50 million. It is a bold program and I challenge the owners, builders, and mortgage bankers of this country to come to grips with it realistically. I am not arguing against guaranteeing loans for 40 years on the basis of $7,600, but I wonder if our mortgage bankers are going to accept those loans.

I call to the attention of the committee the testimony given by Mr. John A. Searles, chairman, redevelopment section, District of Columbia Redevelopment Land Agency, on page 337 of the hearings. At this point in the hearings I developed from his testimony that the area in Southwest Washington lying from the railroad tracks out to Fort McNair and from South Capitol Street over to the waterfront and 14th Street, the area now contains 22,000 people, or almost 6,000 families. I asked Mr. Searles what is the approximate rental that is being paid? The testimony reveals that the rent is as low as $25 a month on an average by block. The average for the entire area runs around $40 a month. This area, Mr. Chairman, has been included an urban renewal area.

From the testimony of Mr. Searles it appears clear to me that the lower 40 percent of the occupants in this Southwest Washington area have a priority for low-rent public housing.

Now, Mr. Chairman, what is going to happen if this area is developed as an urban renewal area? Will the displaced families be able to pay the rent on the $7,600 home as recommended in the committee? For the information of the committee I submit the following exhibit appearing on page 94 of the Report of the President's Advisory Committee on Housing giving the estimated monthly mortgage payment and housing expenses on typical mortgages insured under the proposed new section of the housing bill. A study of this exhibit reveals the impossibility, in my opinion, for the great majority of the people living in this Southwest Washington area or any other similar blighted area to pay the estimated monthly mortgage payments and housing expenses which as shown by the table on a $7,000 house would run $62.92.

Estimated monthly mortgage payment and housing expense on typical mortgages insured under proposed sec. 221

Mr. Chairman, I refer you to the testimony of Mr. J. A. Reilly, a Washington banker, who appeared before our committee in behalf of the American Bankers Association. As a part of my remarks I insert here the series of questions that I directed to Mr. Reilly on how to take care of these displaced persons in an urban rural development:

Mr. DEANE. What would you recommend for, say, the people in the Southwest Washington area, where a witness yesterday said the average rental was around $40 to $44 a month? What type of housing do you recommend for those people when they are displaced?

Mr. REILLY. I think they have got to be taken care of, but I think—

Mr. DEANE. What would your organization recommend?

Mr. REILLY. I don't know, but certainly a person living in a slum area now paying a low rental is no kind of a risk to build a house for and sell it to him for $7,000, and take his note and give him 40 years to pay it back. There has got to be some Government subsidy in that, as I see it.

It is a social-welfare problem that has to be solved by the Government, and not by lending money to them.

Mr. DEANE. You understand I am not trying to put you on the spot.

Mr. REILLY. I understand.

Mr. DEANE. We must do something for these people.

Mr. REILLY. We surely do. I think it is a Government welfare program and should be considered by the Congress as such. And not toss it off into the loan field.

Mr. DEANE. Is that the viewpoint of the American Bankers Association?

Mr. REILLY. It certainly is.

Mr. CANFIELD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DEANE. I yield.

Mr. CANFIELD. The gentleman is exactly right. I want to compliment the gentleman from North Carolina for making that statement at this stage of the debate.

Mr. DEANE. I thank the gentleman from New Jersey. I know his long and faithful interest in providing decent housing for all groups. I appreciate the contribution of the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. CANFIELD].

TINY NO. 2, WASHINGTON'S WICKEDEST PRECINCT

Some days ago most of the Members read, as I did, the series of articles appearing in the Washington Post written by Mr. S. L. Fishbein on Tiny No. 2, the City's Wickedest Precinct. The Post did, in my opinion, make a significant contribution in bringing to the attention of the Capital City and the Congress what can and is taking place within a comparatively small area of what is supposed to be a beautiful city.

I had a personal talk with Mr. Fishbein and pointed out this fact: It is easy to state and describe a problem. It is quite difficult to provide an answer.

It is my personal conviction that the owners of property in the second precinct or any other similar precinct in any city of the country must be held personally responsible for what is wrong. The key leadership, not only in the area involved, but the city officials and church leaders, must begin at once to assume personal responsibility for what is wrong. Until that takes place, the second precinct and other similar slum areas throughout the country will continue to fester and become an ever-increasing problem to the entire country.

At this point, Mr. Chairman, I include, under request previously granted, the series of articles written by Mr. Fishbein and again commend him and the Washington Post for this enlightening series of articles. Yet it makes one hang his head in shame to think that such an area exists in the shadow of the Capitol of the greatest nation in the world.

[From the Washington Post of March 14, 1954]

"THE WICKEDEST PRECINCT"

Washingtonians living in neat residential streets and comfortable suburbs have a vague knowledge of what poverty, vice, filth, and wretchedness prevail in some other parts of the city. But to most of them this degradation seems remote. Seldom do they realize that the crime and tragedy, the vice and disease that center in the city's slums tend to fan out and taint the entire community. Yet that is an inescapable fact which influences nearly every municipal policy.

The Washington Post's series on "the wickedest precinct" is an attempt to acquaint the city, by means of candid pictures and hard facts, with the worst aspects of its community life. The people have a right to know about the consequences that flow from the dens of iniquity, the rat-infested slums, the garbage-strewn alleys and beer joints of the wickedest precinct. Only by knowing the extent of the crime and misery that are generated here can they hope to move toward remedies. What is the relation between overcrowded shelters unfit to be called houses and the excessive delinquency rate among children who live there? Can the city root out excessive crime from this area so long as poverty and frustration prevail? What does it cost the community to leave open cesspools of vice and violence overflowing in its midst? What is necessary to lift this segment of the community up to the standards of its average or even its best neighborhoods?

"The wickedest precinct" is a challenge to every local resident whether or not he realizes it. Putting it out of mind will afford him no protection against a possible knifing by a second precinct thug some dark night. Nor will it save his family from the spread of tuberculosis from the back alleys. Washington has too long turned its gaze away from the sordid truth about its worst depressed areas. So long as it does so the hope of cleaning up this shameful aspect of our community life will be nil. The Post is offering these stark and unlovely facts in the hope that increased awareness of our community failings will force officials and civic groups—and encourage the people of the precinct itself—to move more resolutely against the evils thus exposed.

[From the Washington Post of March 14, 1954]

THE WICKEDEST PRECINCT—No. 2 LEADS CITY IN VICE AND VIOLENCE

(EDITOR'S NOTE.—The second precinct is the wickedest of all Washington police precincts. The Washington Post is putting this poison spot of crime under the microscope to see why it is so filled with evil and to find out what can be done about it. The good people of the second precinct—and there are thousands of the most law-abiding residents of the city living here—need help in cleaning out the vice, destitution, and disease that threaten their well-being. The residents of other areas need to be awakened to conditions that threaten to spread this infection to other neighborhoods. It is a crisis too big for police alone. It will never be solved until all Washington knows and understands the menace of the veritable sink of iniquity that has developed in this precinct. This article is the first in a series of daily and Sunday pieces in which the facts of life in the wickedest precinct will be examined. The series will be followed by subsequent articles, appearing regularly each Sunday and occasionally during the week. Washington Post reporters will keep the light on the second precinct throughout the year. They are going to devote intensive coverage to it throughout 1954 and in subsequent months. It is hoped that when this task is completed, the second no longer will be the wickedest precinct. Citizens will be shocked, as the editors of the Washington Post have been shocked, by the picture of what life is like in the second precinct. We hope they will be shocked. We hope they will be shocked enough to do something about a situation that has cried aloud for remedy for half a century.)

(First of a series)

(By S. L. Fishbein)

Rats and wretches, prostitutes and panderers, slayers and slashers, hopheads and "winos" mingle and fight and die in the second precinct—Washington's wickedest.

The cauldron of violence known as the second precinct is the biggest single reason why the National Capital annually ranks at or near the top of all cities in the number of aggravated assaults.

Second precinct murders bulge out the citywide figures to the point where Washington frequently ranks higher than larger cities in the number of felonious homicides recorded.

Through the ebb and flow of crime waves and the varying intensity of the police drive one fact stands out perennially: The second precinct leads all the rest in vice and violence.

The second trails the other 13 in size, covering a mile-and-a-quarter area in the heart of Washington.

And crime is not its only industry. Its teeming streets hold the largest number of licensed businesses in the city.

Among these 4,900 enterprises, smart hotels on the southwestern fringes contrast with the broken down rooming houses in the middle reaches which are often nothing more than sweatshops for the streetwalkers.

Streetwalkers—some 200 of them—patrol the precinct, mostly along Seventh Street and Ninth Street and in the 600 block of O Street.

Curbside whisky peddlers offer their illegal services with prices to match in the 400 block of Neal Place, at the corners of Fifth Street and Neal Place, Fifth and O Streets, 14th and T Streets, and 14th and Corcoran Streets.

Harried dope addicts keep drifting back to their old haunts on Ninth Street and Seventh Street.

Knife wielders and muggers may be found almost anywhere in the precinct except in the southwest where the K Street complex of office buildings, hotels, and apartment houses form a wedge of respectability.

Crime and misery breed most abundantly in the 30 inhabited alleys where human villainess and degradation of the basest sort has reproduced itself for over half a century. It remains largely unnoticed by the middle-class commuters who zip through the precinct on express buses and streetcars.

These decayed alleys harbor children who know no fathers. Here garbage-fattened rats occasionally make bold forays against children in bed.

Here the passions stoked by poverty, frustration and cheap wine send the knife blades slashing against cheek and bone and back.

Here the lessons taught in school must be studied and absorbed by kerosene lamp amidst the atmosphere of the stinking chamber pot and the outside toilet and the sight of strange men living with mothers and sisters.

The second precinct is not the exclusive hunting ground of Washington's human scum.

Nor is it a particularly happy hunting ground. In the new and fresher atmosphere of Police Chief Robert V. Murray's administration, second precinct police under Capt. John E. Winters have settled into a war of attrition that continues day in and day out.

With the manpower available, it is the only type of war that seems feasible.

The second precinct is the entrenched crime capital of the Nation's Capital.

Crime figures for the fiscal year 1953 are interesting. In the second precinct, which covers about one-sixtieth of the city's area and contains one-fourteenth of the city's population, there were more murders, robberies, aggravated assaults, housebreakings, concealed-weapons cases, prostitution cases, liquor violations, and drug violations than in any of the other 13 precincts.

It tied for first place in rape cases and ranked second in gambling offenses reported.

By the numbers: In fiscal 1953 the city's smallest precinct was the scene of 19 out of a citywide total of 69 murders reported; 1,503 out of a total of 4,598 aggravated assaults; 269 out of a total of 1,325 robberies; 23 out of a total of 148 rape cases; 714 out of a total of 5,040 housebreakings; 134 out of a total of 466 concealed weapons cases; 344 out of a total of 655 prostitution cases; 562 out of a total of 1,040 narcotics cases; and 581 out of a total of 1,731 illegal whisky cases.

The same pattern of lawlessness holds true for 1952, 1951, 1950, and as many years back as veteran policemen can remember. The second is always the worst.

As of 1950 the precinct was home for 14,876 white and 43,974 Negro residents. In addition its streets have been swelled for years by Negroes drawn from outside the precinct by the jazzy taverns, blood and thunder movie houses, pawn shops, second hand stores, "take out" lunch rooms, and billiard parlors.

The second precinct, in other words, is "town" for Negro residents from all over the city, as well as a retail depot for dope, women, bootleg corn, and legal whisky sold illegally after hours.

It is not surprising, therefore, that in the 1953 fiscal year, 16 out of every 17 persons arrested in the precinct for major crimes were Negroes, or that 4 out of every 5 persons arrested for all crimes were Negro.

And among the crimes, which involved bloodshed, the slashings or murders growing out of the eruption of rotgut whisky, dice games and love triangles, the victims were also overwhelmingly Negro.

The appeal of the second precinct, however, is not strictly along racial lines.

The statistics don't show it but veteran prostitutes report that a huge proportion of their clientele is white, including servicemen on liberty in Washington.

Prostitutes lie easily but a beat policeman, hardened by more than a decade in the vortex of vice operations, is still perplexed when he recalls catching family men from "real good neighborhoods in bed with the filthiest women you ever saw."

The second is the precinct from which the slum women fan out into the city to become charwomen, day workers, and maids; and the precinct which supplies most of the venereal disease patients at the Polk Health Center at Seventh and P Streets NW.

The second precinct is the only one in the city in which all beats are patrolled by two policemen together when the men are available. When they are not, the footmen are concentrated in the middle and spread thin at the east and west borders.

It is the precinct in which a shocked Catholic priest reported to police that a drunk staggered into the church confessional and relieved himself.

It is the precinct whose captain, John E. Winters, responded to a report of a natural death and found two children sleeping beside the dead man. "They were tired and I didn't have a place to put them," the woman of the house reported.

The precinct covers about 130 squares from which Captain Winters' vice detail has culled a file of 250 addresses of known or suspected vice dens. Some are cold leads due to raids and the system of monthly visits by senior precinct officials instituted by Chief Murray.

But the known facility of vice operators to jackknife back into action keeps the file at about 250.

Brawling, butchery, bordellos, drinking joints and gaming have been and to some extent still are hallmarks of life on Six and One-half Place, which runs from M to N Street.

This is the story of one of the quieter families which, according to police memories, is not troublesome:

A penciled announcement on a window of the two-story row house invites one and all to a Saturday night dance.

The sponsor of the dance is a plump 13-year-old, who had to leave school to have a baby, which duly arrived 4 months ago at Gallinger Hospital.

She has 2 sisters, the eldest 18. They also have one baby each. Head of the household is their 40-year-old mother. Neither the mother nor any of the three daughters has ever had a husband.

Two of the young mothers don't exactly know who the fathers of their children are.

The house has five rooms. It is heated by a wood- and coal-burning stove, also used for cooking; its toilet facilities include a leanto outside in the back yard, and chamber pots for the children at night.

The family tried to combat the rats by wedging pop bottles in the corner rat holes but the rats kept chewing new holes around the bottles. Flat irons on the holes in the middle of the floor were more effective. One recent Saturday night, a rat bit one of the 19-month-old children on both feet while she was asleep upstairs. Since then the landlord has had the rat holes covered with sheet metal.

"The rats around here don't run from you, they walk from you," explains the head of the household.

Three blocks north of Six and One-half Place is Marion Court, inclosed by Marion and Seventh Streets, P and Q Streets.

John (Bull) Leach is in prison and his notorious Marion Court dope pad is empty, but next door life pulses on with renewed vigor.

One family has occupied the 4-room hovel for the past 13 years. The family consists of grandfather, mother, and stepfather, and six children. And a brand-new baby, born within the past 2 months to the oldest child, an 18-year-old girl.

Ill in childhood, the new mother just finished junior high school last year and fully intended to go to high school but, she says, "I was spreading with child and couldn't go on."

She knows the father of the child and had intended to make him help support the offspring but just before she brought the blessed event home from Gallinger, the father got into some kind of trouble and was locked up.

Another of the six children, a teen-age boy, is also being detained at the National Training School for Boys for getting into some kind of trouble.

The baby is bundled in a portable wicker basket on the front-room sofa. The upstairs front room is reserved for grandfather. The new mother and two sisters share the back room, a litter of wrinkled bedclothes and the inevitable bucket for night use.

The regular toilet is out back in the alley, behind four bulging lines of clothes. These are washed by the mother of the house before she leaves in the morning to pursue her career of daywork.

Mother and father, a garage worker, and two boys, sleep on a combination sofa-bed in the downstairs front room. Lighting is by kerosene lamp, heating by coal and wood stove.

In the alleys the dim glare of the infrequent street lights reflects from the fixed bloodshot stares of the cheap drunks in stocking caps and surplus Army khakis, one step or perhaps only a gust of wind removed from those stretched out on the ground, oblivious.

A drunk staggers along Logan Court NW., between L and Pierce, North Capitol and First Streets.

How did he get staggering?

"Had a little wine today."

Ever been locked up?

"Have I ever been locked up?"

Yes, ever been locked up?

"Yeah, I been locked up once."

Only once?

"Once, twice, three times, four times (with a deep throaty chuckle).

Each time the charge was intoxication except once. Once he was caught cooking chicken at a bonfire. It is against the law to build a bonfire in the District. Once he did 10 days for drunkenness. The other times he dried out at the second precinct station.

Ever been cut up? He turns his head and displays a 4-inch vertical scar, straight enough but probably a little too thick to be a surgeon's work.

Once he had some excess hair growth out of a bump on his chin. "I gave my wife my own knife and put my head down on her lap for her to pluck out the hair," he says. "She started crying about me running around with another woman and put that blade to my neck."

"I sure had no business putting my head in her lap," he concludes, letting out that deep whisky chuckle as he stumbles on. He is fortyish, dirty, a part-time construction worker, a long-time drunkard, a common sight in the second precinct.

Complacency about conditions of life in the second precinct is not limited to those in blissful ignorance of these conditions. There is evidence indicating some of those who live in the atmosphere of filth and violence are satisfied with it.

One of these is a 59-year-old coal, wood, and ice dealer who recently moved into the precinct from Shott's Alley SW., that photogenic residential neighborhood which forms a background for the frequent investigators who deplore the slums in the shadow of the Capitol.

The coal, wood, and ice dealer, together with his wife and 5 children born in the last 6 years, now lives in a 6-unit apartment building in Fenton Court NW., with 2 outside toilet for the 6 families.

The walls of the 3 rooms are a dark green, almost black. Gases from the coal stove and kerosene light lamps mingle thickly with cooking smells. Three youngsters sleep in a single bed, in a closet-like bedroom, with the foul night bucket at the head of the bed.

An 8-month-old baby sleeps in a carriage next to the big stove in the crowded kitchen. The other two children sleep with the parents in the big bedroom.

The coal, wood, and ice dealer looks on the march of progress with something less than ecstasy. "These refrigerators are killin' me," he says.

"Next year, they're gonna close all these alleys down and nobody'll want any more coal or wood," he says, referring to the Alley Dwelling Act which bans alley dwelling after July 1, 1955.

Although he sometimes thinks about looking for more liveable accommodations, he is well satisfied with the present state of affairs. The children are healthy, he says, and "I got no complaints."

There is another side to the coin. Precinct officials relate moving stories of tough moral fiber asserting itself against the perpetuation of the community pattern.

Lt. Joseph Shimon recalls the story of the tough young delinquent who was known to have secreted about $100 garnered in a series of purse snatchings. The boy adamantly refused to reveal the location of his cache.

The boy's father called at the precinct, heard the police evidence, and asked to take his son outside for a few minutes. Shimon noticed the father's belt being unbuckled as they walked down the station corridor.

When they returned, the subdued youngster spewed out his secrets, under the insistent frown of his father.

An old charwoman recently called on Precinct Captain Winters to ask for advice about her children who were getting into trouble. Tearfully she displayed her calloused hands and asked how she could provide a living for her children and keep them under supervision at the same time.

Captain Winters has much sympathy for the woman. There is not much else available.

In the years before the Civil War reaction brought thousands of Negroes streaming into the alleys, portions of what is now the second precinct were places of elegant living.

The three-story Victorian eclectic mansion at Sixth and M Streets NW., which stands out in sharp contrast to the squalor of the alleys behind it, was once the home of banker William Stickney, who served as president of Washington's city council in 1871-74.

Today, with a stell-fresh exterior, the mansion houses the church of Bishop C. M. "Daddy" Grace.

With the quick decay of the alley dwellings came the recurrent movement to improve or outlaw them. In 1892 their disease- and crime-producing potential brought forth a law banning new construction of alley dwellings without plumbing or lighting facilities.

As long ago as 1907, a report on alley dwellings to President Theodore Roosevelt quoted an old woman alley dweller as saying, "Why, my old Marsa wouldn't ha' kep' his horses stabled in such a place."

In 1909 Charles F. Weller, a social worker who lived in an alley for a time to gather material for his book, Neglected Neighbors, wrote, "Certainly the fundamental basis of home life, proper marital relations, is not characteristic of Washington's alleys. Perhaps 'immoral' is too strong a word, for many of these delinquents appear to know no better."

And in the first decade of this century, President Theodore Roosevelt's Homes Commission submitted a voluminous report. A caption for a diagram of an alley in what is now the second precinct stated: "The problem is how the policeman on the corner outside can know about and reach men who are fighting or committing any other iniquity inside. It is not yet solved." Monday—assaults and murders.

CRIME-RIDDEN SECOND PRECINCT CROWDS IN 58,000 PERSONS

Key facts about the second precinct—Washington's wickedest

Shape: It is a crude rectangle with a pan-handle at the east end.

Area: Washington's tenderloin covers about one-sixtieth of the city's area, 1.25 out of 68.25 square miles.

Boundaries: K Street NW. is on the south, 15th Street NW. on the west, S Street NW. and Florida Avenue on the north, and Second Street NE., and the Washington Terminal rail yards on the east.

Population: The 1950 census takers found 14,876 whites and 43,974 Negroes living in the precinct.

Schools: Precinct children attend some of the newest schools in the city as well as some of the oldest. Thirteen public schools for Negroes, 1 public school for whites, and 3 parochial schools.

Playgrounds: The children play on nine public recreation areas—six for Negroes, one for whites, and two for all youngsters.

Businesses: A total of 4,900 business licenses were issued in fiscal 1953 within the precinct, more than in any other precinct. Its legitimate businesses include old established furniture merchants, large modern auto agencies, blood and thunder movies, second-hand stores, variety stores, billiard rooms, taverns, and restaurants.

A night's lodging: Hotels within the precinct range from the handsome Hamilton Hotel on K Street, through the big rooming house which used to house dope peddlers and where the manager now keeps a taped billiard cue to maintain order in the dingy rooming houses where anything goes.

Churches: Its churches include the prominent National City Christian and Mount Vernon Place Methodist Churches, Bishop C. M. (Daddy) Grace's church, the huge Immaculate Conception Church and dozens of store-front churches of varying demoninations.

Landmarks: It houses the Central Public Library where New York and Massachusetts Avenues converge, and two of the city's largest markets, the Center City Market at Fifth and K Streets and the O Street Market at Seventh and O Streets.

Alleys: A recent police census recorded the presence of 30 inhabited alleys with approximately 3,700 persons living therein.

History: The precinct received its present boundaries in the late 1930's, after a 1931 consolidation of precincts was found to be unworkable. Under the consolidation, the Second and Eighth were combined and were known as the Second. When the precincts were split up again, the Second was divided into what are now the Second and Thirteenth Precincts.

[From the Washington Post of March 15, 1954]THE WICKEDEST PRECINCT—SECOND PRECINCT KILLINGS ROOTED IN SQUALOR

(Second of a series)

(By S. L. Fishbein)

When one human being kills another, the act ordinarily spreads ripples of interest into the farthest corner of the community.

There are more killings and fewer ripples in the second precinct than anywhere else in the city.

Most of the murders committed in the second precinct do not stir the community into an avid thirst for details and a continuing interest in the subsequent manhunt.

The usual second precinct killing is an eruption of passion rooted in squalor and nurtured by alcohol, gambling, or the possession of a woman.

In fiscal 1953, this type of killing constituted a heavy majority of the 19 murders committed within the precinct.

This was more than one-fourth of the citywide total of 68 murders.

Occasionally, a second precinct murder will have a shock effect on the community.

Such typical examples are the unsolved murders of former Marine William Joseph Lindstedt last December; of soda fountain girl Florence Soriano in November 1952, and of liquor dealer Samuel Cooperman in August 1951.

And the more usual second precinct-style killings are not confined to the precinct boundaries.

Such circumstances make it hazardous for a citizen to walk some of the streets and most of the 30 inhabited alleys of the second precinct on a weekend night.

Such circumstances were present not only in a majority of precinct murders, but in most of the 1,503 aggravated assaults that occurred in the precinct in fiscal 1953. The precinct chalked up one-fourth of the city's total of 4,598 aggravated assaults.

From the throbbing streets and the dim, garbage-strewn, rat-infested alleys comes the orgy of violence, powered by the knife, the fist, and the gun.

The act performed, the victim is duly removed to the hospital or the morgue and the police move in. The case, as a rule, is quickly solved, and nobody pays much attention until the annual statistical report is compiled. Then Washington is shocked to discover so much murder and aggravated assault committed within its boundaries.

There were 10 homicides in the precinct from July 1 to September 17, last year, a bulky contribution to the statistical report that will set the city buzzing at the conclusion of the current fiscal year.

One of these, ironically, was committed unintentionally and with reluctance by a man who says he has been striving to cleanse some of the vice and cool the passions that loom so large behind the annual statistics.

He is the Reverend Genora Augustus Taylor, 44, a Baptist minister who until recently preached to a small congregation in a one-time pawnshop in the 1200 block of Sixth Street.

Ever since building inspectors closed his church because it had only one restroom, Mr. Taylor says, he has been preaching wherever he can. He says he has also tried to spread his message informally at an all-night restaurant at 1213 Seventh Street NW., which he partly owns.

FIGHT WITH GIRL FRIEND

In the late night hours, the 1200 block of Seventh Street, is a gathering place of streetwalkers, dope addicts, sidewalk drunks, and brawlers. On the Second Precinct wall map the block has a thick cluster of green tacks, which stand for aggravated assaults.

"I hoped to be able to convert a lot of these people," Mr. Taylor said recently, "but I haven't been able to do much—seems like the people around here are too far gone."

He has got some "rough drinkers, 2 or 3 hustlers, and 1 dope addict to go to church," but, he added, "I never have got any of them turned completely around."

Last September, Mr. Taylor killed one of his best prospects. The victim was one Romeo McKinney, a brawler of some repute and a known police character.

"I made him promise to go to church and it was said that I could do more with him than anybody else," Mr. Taylor said.

On the night of the incident, McKinney got into a fracas with his girl at Mr. Taylor's restaurant. McKinney stabbed her, threw a seat at her and continued to beat her when the minister intervened.

"I tried to quiet him, but that was one time he wouldn't listen to me," said Mr. Taylor.

Finally, the minister drew a .32-caliber pistol from under the counter and fired.

"I intended to hit him in the fleshy part of the leg," said Mr. Taylor. The bullet hit much higher than that—in the left side of the chest, killing McKinney.

DICE GAME MURDER

The following morning, a coroner's jury declared it a case of justifiable homicide and Mr. Taylor was back at his restaurant the same night.

Other attempts at conversion have him thoroughly disillusioned, he said.

Street women, wine drinkers, and dope addicts have told him they would like to live decently if they could find regular work.

A few of them have actually taken jobs at the restaurant. In each case, he says, "the first few dollars they'd take in, they'd put in their pockets and go out looking for wine or dope."

Here is another Second Precinct-style killing, this time a dice-game blowup over a bottle of liquor:

Last July 7, bootlegger, numbers man, Jesse Battles, 41, got into an argument over a bottle during a dice game operated by Wilbert L. Jackson, 46, in an alley near Battles' home at 441 Neal Place NW.

Battles drew a gun and started shooting.

Jackson took a fatal wound in the abdomen and a 7-year-old girl was wounded in the head. Jackson was trying to stop the fight, police said. Battles' opponent ran off unscathed. Battles was sentenced to 5 to 15 years for manslaughter.

On July 18, another bottle of whisky made another statistic.

Viola Dobson, 40, tried to separate her boyfriend and Rayfield Carter, 51, who were feuding over a bottle at their residence at 468 N Street NW. Carter wielded a butcher knife. The knife slashed through the woman's neck and lung. Carter was sentenced to 5 to 15 years for manslaughter.

And on January 5 of this year, a man was fatally wounded in the Second Precinct in an argument over four eggs.

James Mondine, 48, listed on police records as living at 6 Wiley Court NW., said he and his nextdoor neighbor, Lonzo Dancy, 45, were fellow pushcart peddlers and good friends. They shared meals together.

On January 5, Mondine said, he took six eggs, and a fifth of wine over to his friend's place. They had some wine. Mondine left and returned shortly to find four eggs missing.

Mondine told police he called his friend to answer for the eggs. They scrapped.

Dancy was stabbed by a pair of scissors. He died February 8. Mondine was held for the action of the grand jury.

Who remembers Jackson, Dobson, or Dancy?

The annual police statistics will.

CITY DRIVES TO CONDEMN 150 SLUM DWELLINGS—OFFICIALS FOCUS CLEANUP CAMPAIGN ON 1-BLOCK AREA IN SECOND PRECINCT

(By Don Olesen)

The District, through its Board for Condemnation of Insanitary Buildings, has launched a crackdown on slum housing in a one-block area in northeast Washington.

The board put its spotlight on an area bounded by North Capitol, L, K, and First Streets NE., which is bisected by Fenton Place, according to Assistant Engineer Commissioner Giles L. Evans, Jr.

This is in the second police precinct, the city's so-called wickedest precinct.

Colonel Evans, acting director of licenses and inspections, said notices already have been sent to about 100 property owners to show cause why their buildings should not be condemned.

Fifty more notices remain to be sent out before the concentrated campaign ends in several weeks, Evans declared.

The move marks the first time the District has used this block approach to poor housing since officials sparked a new slum rehabilitation drive here last fall.

For the past several months, 2 additional inspectors have been assigned to work on board condemnation cases, making a total of 5 inspectors, Evans pointed out.

This, plus the fact that inspectors gave first priority to the block instead of making as many scattered inspections throughout the city, brought about the crackdown.

Houses within the block were "so insanitary as to constitute a menace" to health, Evans said. "The problem couldn't be handled by cleaning them up—floors and joists were rotted, walls were cracked."

After getting notices, dwelling owners must either agree to rehabilitate the buildings to satisfy inspectors or have them vacated. Owners are entitled to a board hearing if they ask it.

Evans said officials already have picked out another "key block," this one in Northwest Washington, in which to enforce all ordinances relating to housing. He declined to name it until details are completed.

The block-by-block enforcement technique has been advocated by G. Yates Cook, National Home Builders Association rehabilitation director. He's in town this month to urge citizens to do something about slums.

Evans' office now is hard at work on a uniform city housing code as another approach to the problem. Cook also has advocated this step.

THE WICKEDEST PRECINCT—No. 2 IS CITY'S WORST FOR OPEN PROSTITUTION

(Third of a series)

(By S. L. Fishbein)

The world's oldest profession has its Washington headquarters in the second precinct.

No rows of gaudy bawdy houses fitted out for elaborate revelries adorn the city's red-light district.

The traffic consists of a flock of women eddying through the streets, working in their homes or in rooming houses throughout the neighborhood.

One second-precinct vice detective recalls being offered a prostitute's favors in an alley.

Lt. Joseph Shimon, the precinct's chief of detectives, says recent police crackdowns have cut down by half the practicing prostitutes in the precinct. This still leaves about 200 Shimon says. Almost all of them are Negro women, precinct officials report.

The precinct prostitutes during the last fiscal year accounted for more than half the 655 prostitution violations reported throughout the city.

This was only one of the distinctions achieved by the precinct—Washington's wickedest—in the annual police report. The second precinct also led in murders, aggravated assaults, robberies, housebreakings, and liquor and drug cases.

Their pitch keyed to the phrase, "Sportin', honey?", women for hire mill about in the night glare of the store fronts of the 1200 block of 7th Street, and in the 600 block of O Street NW.

The 600 block of O Street borders the square which contains the venereal disease clinic at the Polk Health Center and the site for the new Shaw Junior High School.

In the 1500 block of Seventh Street, they hawk their wares in the taverns and restaurants and consummate the contracts in big rooming houses nearby.

The streetwalkers, when the deal is made, adjourn to their own rooms or, when the heat is on, retreat to previously prepared hideouts rented by the prostitutes.

In the 1100 block of Seventh Street, a veteran of 7 years "in the life" lives and operates in a 2-room coldwater flat above a store. The littered entrance stairway provided ample hints about the activities upstairs one recent afternoon.

She is 24 years old and has 5 daughters, the middle 3 being the fruits of her profession. The oldest, a 10-year-old, and the youngest, a year-old infant, were the results of "running around."

Two of the older girls are farmed out with friends. Of the three remaining, the infant has a crib in the kitchen, the other 2 sleep on a hallway cot within a few feet of the bedroom.

She receives the going rate—"5 and 2"—$5 for the prostitute and $2 for the room. Since she operates in her own home, she gets to keep the $2 also. She will "turn 5 or 6 tricks" on an average working night.

She ran away from home in her early teens, was sent to the National Training School, and started in the life immediately upon leaving the school.

Her path was well-trodden, she insists. "For a lot of girls, their first stop out of the training school is the street"—the 1200 block of Seventh Street.

She has worked on 7th Street, 8th Street, 9th Street, 10th Street, and 11th Street. She has been "busted" (arrested) six times for soliciting and has served sentences ranging from 3 to 6 months. She is currently awaiting trial again.

Why does she continue in the life? She answers with two questions: Who would look after the kids? Where could she make enough money to support five children?

The economic trend of the past year may make an honest woman out of another denizen of "the street."

Now 22, she has been at it for a year. During her brief career she has paid a $25 fine for soliciting and been charged with dope peddling. Trial is pending on the dope charge.

Since the dope case came up, she had to find a legitimate job because her bondsman wouldn't supply bond if she continued "hustling." So she's currently a sandwich-and-salad girl at a restaurant in the daytime.

Another condition of her bond was to quit living with her boy friend and return to her parents' home in northeast Washington.

Her boy friend used to act as her protector—"sometimes a man gets nasty and wants his money back."

Her parents do not definitely know of her nightly activities. "But when I stay out all night and come home in the morning just to change my clothes and go to work, mother knows something's going on," she says.

She has earned as much as $190 in one night and her biggest single fee was $75, for an all-night "trick," she told a reporter recently.

She visits her doctor weekly and is particular about her customers. "I don't go with just any man," she says.

She estimates that about half her customers are white men, including a good sprinkling of servicemen.

The current economic situation, however, is giving her serious second thoughts about her profession. "Everybody's complaining about the prices nowadays," she reports. "They say they just can't afford to pay. I think I'm going to get out of this life."

There is nothing to prevent the prices from dropping and one prostitute's economic misgivings provide small solace for a community beset by a vice which breeds disease and moral degradation, unwanted children and the progressive decay of its practitioners.

Continuous baiting by both precinct and headquarters undercover men, combined with stiffer jail sentences at court, have put a fear into the prostitutes which was unknown until recently.

Major police efforts against dope and illegal whisky rings have inevitably depleted the ranks of the streetwalkers who, like many a shrewd business entrepreneur, often diversify their interests.

But it is still true in the second precinct that women are available in greater profusion than anywhere else in the city.

SECOND PRECINCT SERIES CITED BY SENATOR—PAYNE SAYS SLUM SITUATION HERE IS A DISGRACE

Senator FREDRICK G. PAYNE, Republican, Maine, said yesterday that second precinct slum conditions depicted in the opening article of the Washington Post's series on the Wickedest Precinct, were about as bad as could possibly exist anywhere.

PAYNE's remarks were made during a Banking and Currency Committee hearing on the administration housing bill.

He asked that the article which appeared in Sunday's Post, be made a part of the hearing record.

The Senator said the article "has to do with an area of this very community, the Capital of the Nation—with regard to the type of housing situation that is confronting a great many people who, apparently from an economic standpoint, live in what I would call about as bad a slum situation as could possibly exist anywhere."

"Now my question is," he said, "what are we going to do about that sort of situation?"

"They are human * * * they have to be taken care of and it is a disgrace, I think, for that sort of thing to be right in the shadow of the Nation's Capitol."

When the committee witness, Norman B. Mason, of the United States Chamber of Commerce, said it was up to local authorities here to clear slums, PAYNE said:

"Well, the Congress of the United States happens to have the only authority because the people in this community have no vote in their own right."

"They have no right or method by which they can even set forth their own thoughts except through their Board of Commissioners who are responsible to the Congress."

DONOHUE CITES HOUSING EVIL IN SECOND PRECINCT

F. Joseph Donohue, former District Commissioner, last night cited slum housing conditions as a major factor in making the second precinct the wickedest in Washington.

In his weekly District affairs commentary over station WWDC, Donohue praised Reporter S. L. Fishbein's current stories on the wickedest precinct in the Washington Post.

"The Post story on the wickedest precinct in the city will be a revelation to a lot of people," Donohue declared. "How much worse will it get before an aroused community does something about it?"

Weeks of fact-gathering went into preparation of the series, disclosing the extent of vice, destitution, and disease in the area comprising 1½ miles near the heart of Washington.

Donohue blamed bad housing as the chief factor responsible for crime in the Second Precinct. "The tenants obviously can't or won't do anything about the conditions of the houses in which they live," he said. "Maybe they can be condemned by the District. But I often wonder why the owners don't do something about them."

SIX ARRESTED IN SECOND PRECINCT LIQUOR RAIDS

Corn whisky, quality bourbon, in the Second Precinct Sunday and cheap wine were on sale detectives reported yesterday.

Working with 2 undercover men, Detectives L. V. Denny and C. L. Eilert arrested 6 persons on charges of keeping and selling liquor without a license.

Denny said the largest haul was made in Logan Court where police confiscated half a gallon of corn whisky, 24 half pints of whisky, and a quantity of wine.

Denny said, an undercover man made a purchase from Mrs. Rose M. Simms, 33, at 42 Logan Court NW.

A man identified as William A. Simms, 42 of 1 Logan Court, then went to the home of his mother, Mrs. Florence Brooks, 58, at 78 Logan Court, and returned with a half gallon of corn whisky, according to Denny.

The detective said 15 other persons were arrested at the Logan Court addresses but were cleared of any connection with the liquor sales.

Denny said keeping and selling charges were placed against James E. Johnson, 37, and Mrs. Frances Fryer, 33, after an undercover man bought a fifth of wine for 75 cents from Johnson at 469 M Street NW. Marked money was recovered from Mrs. Fryer, Denny reported.

Another undercover man, police said, bought a half pint of quality bourbon from Miss Josephine Bryant, 36, at 1109 N Street NW.

She was charged with keeping and selling and with possession of numbers slips which, police said, were found in her purse.

Also in the second precinct a 39-year-old woman was knocked to the ground and robbed of $140 by 3 teenage youths last night.

Police said Mrs. Ida Ehrlich, of 760 Princeton Place NW., owner of the L Street Supermarket, 95 L Street NW., told them she was grabbed from behind while walking on L Street near the store. She described them as young Negroes and said they fled in an alley beside 201 L Street.

THE WICKEDEST PRECINCT—ILLEGAL LIQUOR SALES AN INDUSTRY IN NO. 2

(Fourth of a series)

(By S. L. Fishbein)

What'll you have?

Wine, beer, whisky?

You can get one or all of your favorite beverages at one of the 206 licensed establishments spotted around the second precinct.

Or you can get the "taste," as the precinct characters call it, from a furtive curbside bootlegger after legal selling hours in the 400 block of Neal place, at 5th and O Streets, at 14th and T Streets, or 14th and Corcoran Streets.

Corn whisky, "smoke"?

You can buy denatured alcohol and cut it with water and you'll have "smoke" and end up in an alley with glazed eyeballs. In the second precinct you'll have lots of company.

Or you can visit one of the number of "gill joints" in the precinct and buy bootleg corn whisky by the drink and see it poured from bottles with labels of distinction.

In the second precinct you can quench your thirst just as you can get a woman or get your throat cut, easier than in any other precinct in the city. More than a third of the 1,729 liquor-law violations reported in Washington in fiscal 1953 were listed as second precinct cases.

These are cases that often provide the active ingredient in a witches' brew from which are distilled some of the other statistics that give the precinct its notorious reputation.

It's not unusual to find a gill joint equipped with prostitutes in the drinking room downstairs and rooms for assignation upstairs. The second precinct is the leading habitat for prostitutes in the city.

There were 7,031 drunks rounded up in the precinct in fiscal 1953, placing it second only to the first precinct.

It's impossible to state exactly what part corn, "smoke," or "sneaky pete" will play in the bloody melees that occur more frequently in the second precinct than in any other. Police officials unanimously agree that they play very important roles.

In Glicks Alley, the drunks gather day and night. Their bonfire glows so often, beat policemen jokingly refer to it as the "eternal flame."

School children see the sights as they go through the alley to Shaw Junior High School at Seventh Street and Rhode Island Avenue NW., despite continued efforts by school officials to steer the youngsters to other routes.

In Glicks Alley a floating gill joint operates 16 hours a day in 2 houses that look like any other from the street.

At 2 p. m. the joint begins jumping in one of the dingy hovels near the south end of the alley located between Sixth and Seventh Streets, Rhode Island Avenue, and S Street.

On a recent weekday evening, just about dinnertime, 15 Negroes and 1 white man were packed into the 2 downstairs rooms, "socializing" and swilling corn whisky.

They paid 15 cents for a small glass, 25 cents for a large glass. Both sizes had thick bottoms. The spares were neatly arrayed on a kitchen table, next to a pot of water used to wash the glasses.

Kerosene lamps provided light, a coal-and-wood stove provided warmth, and the rest-rooms were in the backyard. The patrons drank, smoked, chatted quietly, or lay crumpled in the dark extremities of the room.

FLOATING OPERATION

The barmaid in charge, age 23, said she didn't know the details of the operation, because she stayed drunk most of the time.

Others close to the "house" volunteered bits of information. Every other day a man drives up in a car and delivers a case of 12 half-gallon mason jars of bootleg corn whisky. The price to the house is $5 a jar.

At 10 p. m., the operation folds at this place and floats to another house up the alley. There it continues until about 6 a. m. The floating feature is to protect the operation from police raids.

If the police move in, they don't catch the woman backer of the joint. Customarily, she remains in a house away from the action.

The barmaid's sister sat dreamy-eyed during the interview. Did she take dope, a reporter asked. She replied with an emphatic no. "Drinking's bad enough," she said.

The house is quite meticulous about that. There is a strict ban against anyone "on the stuff."

"FOOD FOR SALE"

In another house in the 600 block of S Street NW., a big commercial jukebox added color and rhythm to the bare walls and shabby parlor furnishings.

Eleven women milled about in an animated cluster. A visiting second precinct vice detective said that all 11 were available for a trip upstairs at a price.

The place is a known gill joint and hive for prostitutes. In the back room, the maitre d' relaxed, exuding an air of prosperity with his good-looking gabardine trenchcoat and jeweled wristwatch. A sign on the wall offered fried chicken and potato salad for $1, chitterlings for 80 cents, and chili con carne for 50 cents.

Curbside peddlers find things a little more risky, but it doesn't stop them.

It is a cold Friday night in February. In the 400 block of Neal Place NW., a cab slows down and a man sticks his head into the cab.

The man takes one look and says, "I don't have a thing, mister," and walks off.

"I arrested him once—he recognized me," the undercover detective in the cab says dejectedly.

The cab grinds slowly toward the corner of Fifth Street and Neal Place, the hub of curbside whisky peddling in Washington.

A young man in a bebop cap approaches. "How many you want?" he asks.

"Give me a half pint," replies the undercover man. The policeman clutches two dollar bills whose numbers were carefully recorded at the station to mark them as evidence.

The bills will barely pay for a half pint of whisky in a market where cheap wine goes for 50 cents a pint, beer for as high as 40 cents a can and 100-proof whisky for as high as $2.50 a half-pint. The half pint would cost about a dollar less in a licensed store during legal selling hours.

The peddler hurries off to fill the order and the officers sits tensely waiting.

From down the street the once-bitten peddler lets out a warning whistle, making the youth in the bebop cap shy.

No sale. No arrest. The cab drives off. It's business as usual on Neal place again.

SERIES ON PRECINCT 2 APPLAUDED BY CITIZENS

The Central Northwest Citizens Association last night commended the Washington Post for the current series on the crime-ridden Second Precinct, "The Wickedest Precinct."

Members, many of whom live in the precinct, welcomed this newspaper's efforts to spotlight and eradicate crime conditions and deplorable housing. They offered their co-operation to city officials in future clean-up efforts.

The group recommended that United States Attorney Leo A. Rover be permitted to appeal to the chief judge of appeal the Municipal Court of Appeals in any dispute with Juvenile Court Judge Edith H. Cockrill over turning over a juvenile to an adult court. Addition of a second juvenile court judge also was urged.

The East Central Civic Association last night praised the Second Precinct series and declared the publicity should help stamp out crime in the area.

"We've been fighting this for a long time," Frank D. McKinney, association president declared, "but it has been like fighting a four-alarm fire with a hand-extinguisher. We hope, with an aroused citizenry and an enlightened Congress, we may get the relief which we have sought."

FIVE SAVED IN GLICK'S ALLEY FIRE

Firemen rescued five persons from a blaze that wrecked the rear of 1719½ Marion Court NW., commonly known as Glick's Alley in the second precinct last night.

The occupants escaped from a second-floor window down a fire department ladder.

O. J. C. Barnes, 33, occupant of the building and one of those rescued, told police the building is owned by Bishop "Daddy" Grace.

Treated for burns at Freedmens Hospital and released were Lucile Brown, 38, of 1801 Wiltberger Street NW.; Rose Marie Merkeron, 33, of 16 Adams Street NW.; Marie Brown, 44 of 1723 5th Street NW.; and Rachael Berry, 50, address unknown.

A sixth person, Ernest Harris, 47, of no fixed address, was found by police wandering nearby with burns on his hands and arms. He was also treated and released at Freedmens.

Firemen were unable to determine the cause of the fire.

TWO HOUSEBREAKINGS REPORTED IN NO. 2

Two housebreakings—one yielding 15 dozen eggs from a church cafeteria—were reported in the second precinct last night by police.

Police said the study of the Hope Baptist Church, at 1217 5th Street NW., was apparently entered with a duplicate key. Thieves got nothing after ransacking the study and forcing open 12 lockers, but they went next door to the church cafeteria and carted off the eggs.

Lucille L. Johnson, of 1438 S Street NW., told police she surprised 2 men on the first floor of her home about 4:30 p. m. yesterday. They ran out the back door after taking $35 from a table in the front hall.

THE WICKEDEST PRECINCT—IN SECOND PRECINCT, IT'S NEVER QUIET ON SATURDAY NIGHTS

(Fifth of a series)

(By S. L. Fishbein)

There was a late burst of theater traffic like the last toss of a restless baby and the city slowly settled down to sleep off Saturday night.

Washington was very cold and in the second precinct it was unusually quiet—for the second precinct.

The temperature was 32 and it drove the hipsters off the streets into the all-night restaurants where their shadows were fuzzy against the steamy windows.

On this Saturday night it was almost too cold for the hesitant stroll and the cautious stare that marks the women of the evening.

A few of the hardest—or the hungriest—were out. A few drunks fell in love with lamp poles. But on the whole it was a dull night for the precinct that is the city's bellwether of crime.

Dull only in the precinct where Saturday night cuttings and yoke jobs are routine, and where homicides, assaults, and robberies bulge the city's crime incidence out of all proportion to its population.

Scout 21, one of the two precinct radio patrol cars, heard its call some 25 times between 4 p. m. and midnight, but it was all small stuff.

Small but unmistakably second precinct stuff.

"Scout 21, they're fighting."

"Transport a drunk."

"Investigate the need of an ambulance."

"Take a pocketbook snatching."

At 10:17 p. m., just after a reporter joined the scout car, it was disorderly men in the 1100 block of 4th Street.

The old wooden house was quiet when Pvts. Henry J. Perkoski and William B. Corcoran pulled up. Eight men and women in one room, two men on a tattered mattress covering most of the floor space; everyone obviously simmered down in anticipation of the official visit.

Five stumbled out into the dark, smelly hall as the police emptied the room of everyone but the people who lived there.

At 10:25 someone wanted an ambulance in the 700 block of Rhode Island Avenue NW. There was none available. Perkoski and Corcoran had to find out how badly one was needed. Not badly. An old woman with stomach cramps.

At 10:38 there was a gas leak in a basement in the 1400 block of 10th Street. At 10:56 a patrol through Fenton Court and Logan Court at the east end of the precinct found the inhabitants going down the alleys with firm steps. It was early.

At 11:08 a fast-moving gang of hoodlums heaved a rock through a ground-floor window in the 1400 block of Columbia Street. By the time scout 21 arrived, a few minutes later, the culprits were swallowed up in the alleys. The complainants were a party of 16 shoehorned into 1 room, sprawled over 2 beds and entertained by a stack of records about 8 inches wide.

At 11:20 p. m., the beat men at 7th and L NW., turned over a drunk and his penknife for conveyance to the precinct cell block. The drunk flopped in and the cheap wine smell made the freezing outside air welcome.

The drunk had 27 cellmates propped vertically, horizontally, and cater-corner in the 10 small cells. They wanted cigarettes. They wanted water. They wanted out.

At midnight, two clean-cut young men piled into scout 22, assigned to patrol the west side of the precinct from 7th Street to 15th Street, and be ready to answer any call from the dispatcher.

They were Pvts. William Trussell, 5 years on the force, and Daniel Klein, 2 years on the force. Veterans of the Navy, they talked Navy talk and compared the growing pains of their wisdom teeth as the dilapidated machine began its first go-round.

Four minutes after their tour started, they were in business. A haggard cab driver flagged them down at Ninth and P Streets NW. He couldn't shake his cab free of an abusive woman passenger.

The transfer from cab to scout car was accomplished in due time and the air in scout 22 took on an alcoholic tinge. The drunk babbled about the gift of God and mother's milk. She was deposited at the Women's Bureau.

At 12:40 a. m. there was a fight in the 800 block of L Street. The complainant had been dragged over a banister by a neighbor. "That's simple assault," Trussell said. "Go down to Municipal Court Monday and swear out a warrant."

At 1:25 there was another fight in the 1500 block of 12th Street. A 1-punch affair. The lady of the house was wearing a gigantic mouse over her left eye.

Her estranged husband had dropped around earlier in the evening and took a slow burn when he found his wife and baby out. He stayed around until they returned. The baby relaxed with a bottle as mother and father fought for the sympathy of the law. Mother won. Father was ordered out and told to sober up.

Family argument, was the report back to the radio dispatcher.

At about 2 a. m., the scout car was marking time at Massachusetts Avenue when a big black sedan broke from a cluster of autos on 13th Street, ran a red light at Massachusetts, another at M Street, turned east on N and south on 12th Street, which is a one-way street heading north. The scout caught up in an alley near 13th Street.

At the precinct station the driver was identified as Albert V. Black, 42, of Luray, Va. He had read in the Washington papers Saturday that a friend of his, William W. Hill, was charged with stabbing a woman 33 times. He thought he might be of some service to his friend. And here he was.

There were now some 35 drunks sleeping, moaning, smoking it off in the cell block. At the front counter a powerfully built construction worker wanted to make a complaint against his wife and stripped down to his waist to show why.

Shiny red ribbons in parallel lines crisscrossed his back and chest. His wife had taken a fork to him during a family quarrel, he complained.

This was a quiet Saturday night in the second precinct.

THE WICKEDEST PRECINCT—DOPE SOLD ON STREET IN SECOND PRECINCT

(Sixth of a series)

(By S. L. Fishbein)

The one-time wide open dope and gambling franchises in the second precinct are underground again.

Police and dope racketeers both report that the old style dope pad or "take off point" or "shooting gallery" is for the most part passe.

And ranking precinct officials boldly challenge anyone to find a big-time numbers headquarters in what is still admittedly a remunerative lottery territory.

More than half the 1,049 drug law violations reported in Washington in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1953, were second precinct cases.

Since then, according to the police narcotics squad, the peddlers have been drifting to other areas under the insistent hounding by narcotics men.

The narcotics squad has fought its way back into public confidence after a sensational scandal in 1952 brought about the indictment of its two top officials on charges of protecting the dope racket here.

The hopeless wretches, whose addiction to heroin makes them vitally interested in every deviation of the market, agree that the old traffic is using new avenues.

One of those who agree is the 38-year-old grandmother whose flabby limbs are pockmarked, wrist to shoulder and calf to thigh, with the gruesome lesions acquired in 18 years of "shooting up."

She uses 25 to 30 capsules of heroin mixture a day. It no longer gives her a thrill. "I shoot to keep from being sick," she said.

In the past 3 years she has worked legitimately for a year: 3 months as a hospital cleaner, 9 months in general housework.

The rest of her working time has been occupied as department store shoplifter, dope peddler, and prostitute on 7th Street, O Street, and 11th Street in the 2d precinct. She lives just north of the precinct and it was there early this month that she was arrested on dope-peddling charges.

THE CURE DIDN'T TAKE

She took the cure at the Federal hospital at Lexington in 1945 but she explains, "When you once been on the stuff and come off it, it leaves you nervous—you try whiskey and you get sick of it and you go back to drugs." She went back to drugs a month after leaving the hospital.

She has two grandchildren. Her daughter is a dope addict currently in jail for dope peddling and her son-in-law also is an addict.

Although it was unseasonably warm the day she spoke to a reporter she wore a heavy coat. The hot and cold spells, cramps, and leg pains were starting, she explained.

The old dope pads where the addicts gathered and took the needle and lazed about in their drowsy reveries together are gone, she says.

Now "it's pick up and run" on the street, she says. The street changes and she keeps in touch with the sources of supply by telephone and the addict grapevine. "The law's tightened down," she says.

Although tests have revealed that the heroin mixtures seized recently by police are stronger, prices have been steady for the past 5 years: $1.25 to $1.75 a capsule retail. A sucker or square may pay as high as $2.50.

THE TRAFFIC SHIFTS

Early in 1953, after the dismemberment of the gigantic Catfish Turner syndicate, which concentrated in the vicinity of Seventh and T Streets NW., the focal point of the dope traffic moved to Ninth Street, for years a favorite parade ground for the addict hordes.

A concentrated police effort last year, according to Narcotics Squad Sgt. Joseph Gabrys, closed down a half-dozen pads in the vicinity of Ninth and M Streets, as well as other nests in two famous Second Precinct trouble zones, 6½ Place and Freedmans Court.

Then the street-hopping started, southwest to the fourth precinct, north to the thirteenth and tenth precincts.

Recently there have been rumbles again about activity in the second precinct, at Ninth and M Streets, and Seventh and N Streets, according to Narcotics Squad Capt. Howard F. Mowry.

The activity largely involves street sales to "go-fers," addicts who will "go for" some dope for a buyer for the privilege of keeping some of what they go for.

Captain Mowry says the second precinct will remain active as a dope market as long as prostitutes work its streets, since many prostitutes are addicts.

But in the current fiscal year, Mowry predicts that the drug violations statistics will be more evenly distributed among the second, thirteenth, tenth, and fourth precincts.

The gambling picture in the second precinct has also changed in the last few years.

The precinct was spotlighted as a major gaming territory by two sensational exposes in 1948-49 and 1952, both accompanied by violent police department shakeups.

The first was United States Attorney George Morris Fay's 18-month grand jury investigation of gambling.

It revealed Thomas Circle as a nerve center of gambling and whisky peddling, the domain of one Attilio Acalotti.

Newsvender, numbers-writing associate of William (Snags) Lewis, and tough guy, Acalotti called himself the mayor of Thomas Circle.

He was cooled off by jail sentences for running a lottery and for threatening to bash in the face of his former girl, Bernice Franklin, a red-haired waitress who told all to the Government.

The grand jury probe was followed on New Years Day, 1950, by one of the largest shakeups in the history of the Metropolitan Police, the most violent occurring in the second precinct which saw its captain and 30 men transferred.

In 1952 the Senate District Crime Subcommittee delved into the mysterious 1948 shooting at the old Brass Rail Grill, Seventh and S Streets NW. The subcommittee heard a witness testify that the shooting was the culmination of a gang war involving numbers territories.

A retired detective also told the subcommittee that he heard "Big Shot Numbers Man" Roger (Whitetop) Simkins bragging at the Brass Rail about his free-wheeling numbers operations.

The 8-month Senate probe was accompanied by a change in the top command of the Police Department.

Acalotti and Snags Lewis have been in and out of jail.

And, according to Lt. Joseph Shimon, the second precinct no longer harbors gaming headquarters, establishments with telephones, adding machines, tote boards, coin wrappers, and other paraphernalia.

THE WICKEDEST PRECINCT—POLICE WORK TOUGH IN SECOND PRECINCT

(Seventh of a series)

(By S. L. Fishbein)

There are no green pastures for policemen in the second precinct, the most crime-ridden in Washington.

"When you come here to police, you police 8 hours a day," says Capt. John E. Winters, who has spent the last 2½ of his 23 years on the force fighting the grueling battle against crime in the second precinct.

"We're not 100 percent perfect," says Winters of himself and his 141 policemen assigned to cover the 1¼-mile area in which more murders, robberies, assaults, liquor and prostitution violations occur annually than anywhere else in Washington.

"But I know one thing," adds the captain, "we try."

"The men don't complain about extra duty," he said recently. "Often they'll volunteer to work extra time to stay with a case. They know there's a job to do and they go out and do it."

Winters was referring to his uniformed men. The 16 plainclothesmen assigned to the precinct are expected to work on a case as long as they're needed.

Winters strongly believes in the law enforcement axiom which holds that the foot patrolman is the greatest deterrent to crime there is.

In line with this axiom the second precinct is authorized to post 2 patrolmen on each of its 10 beats during all 3 8-hour shifts in an effort to cope with the vast amount of crime which may be expected there each year.

Some beats in the precinct are considered unsafe for a uniformed policeman walking alone.

Posting a double patrol requires 20 men for each 8-hour shift. Captain Winters is able to muster an average of 12 men, so the more peaceful borderline beats get only one man each.

This is still a great improvement. "When I first came here 2½ years ago, there were some days when we couldn't find more than 4 or 5 men to put on the streets," says Winters. To achieve the optimum number of 20 would require an additional 40 patrolmen.

The city's crime jungle multiplies police problems in various ways.

How much time shall the patrolman spend following known prostitutes or rounding up alley drunks or stopping alley knife fights?

And how much time shall he spend making his presence felt on the streets protecting the lives of honest merchants and citizens? Captain Winters feels his prime target is the thug who preys primarily on the innocent victim.

"Sure, those 1,500 aggravated assaults we had in the last fiscal year look bad in the statistics—and they are bad," he says. "But so many of those assaults are committed during an argument in the heat of passion with maybe a little Sneaky Pete thrown in—there's nothing in the world a policeman can do to prevent those."

Captain Winters said he'd like it made clear that the second precinct situation is what it is not simply because of the fact that the precinct population is largely Negro.

"Anytime you have a concentration of people you're bound to have trouble—no matter who they are," he says.

He has found decent, hard-working, respectable people in the very worst of the alley slums as well as in the more habitable sections of the precinct.

He has found them shackled to their misery by lack of education and skill and family situations over which they have no control.

And he has found others who frankly don't care to improve their lives even when the means are available.

Like the street loafers who coagulate in pestiferous knots on street corners day and night throughout the precinct.

Before the employment situation tightened here, Winters says, there were long lists of jobs for unskilled workers available at the United States Employment Service at Fifth and K Streets NW.

"When we asked these guys standing around outside why they didn't go in and apply," he adds, "we found they didn't want steady work."

"They waited around for trucks that would drive by looking for men for a few hours' work and they made sure no social security or withholding tax would be deducted."

Winters sees no hope for these people and, indeed, sees no hope for their offspring "unless we can get the kids out of these alleys and slums and that atmosphere."

A police captain can't control the atmosphere in his precinct, but where he can act, Winters says, he will act.

"There's not a dope pad in this precinct and I defy anyone to find a numbers headquarters here," he said recently, adding: "Show me one and I'll break the door down myself and let the district attorney worry about the law later."

Winters is cautiously optimistic about other areas of crime in which his precinct is the annual leader. The increased police availability made possible last July by the law providing extra appropriations to pay policemen for a sixth day's work each week has made crime somewhat more hazardous in the second precinct as it has throughout the city generally.

Captain Winters said he's sure the improved statistical picture already noticeable in citywide statistics for the current fiscal year will hold true in his precinct as well when the full year's figures are in.

"It's a tough one," says the captain of his precinct, "but we try to train a man to stay cool, use tact, and get used to the pace."

"Once in awhile we get a hothead but that stuff doesn't go around here and when we find out about it, we act fast," he adds.

For the most part, Winters is satisfied that the training sinks in.

PAYNE URGES SECOND PRECINCT REDEVELOPMENT

Senator FREDERICK G. PAYNE, Republican, of Maine, Friday pressed for housing redevelopment in the second precinct to improve conditions in "the wickedest precinct."

The Senator, referring to the series currently appearing in the Washington Post and Times-Herald, quizzed John R. Searles, Jr., executive director of the District of Columbia Redevelopment Land Agency, for about 10 minutes on improving the precinct.

The questioning occurred during Searles' testimony before the Senate Banking and Currency Committee on the administration's housing bill of 1954.

PAYNE asked Searles if the precinct did include the worst area in the District and if so what action was underway by the RLA to reclaim it from the slums.

Searles responded that it was the worst in the city, but said RLA rehabilitation is being concentrated in the southwest sector of the city.

Another witness was Oliver C. Winston, of Baltimore, president of the Housing Officials Association. Winston said the bill "is not broad enough to encompass all the major facets of the housing problem."

SECOND PRECINCT CLEANUP ASKED BY CAMALIER

District Commissioner Renah F. Camalier Saturday night called for a ruthless crack-down on crime and slums in the second precinct.

"The police, Health Department and Department of Inspections must take hold of their responsibility and clean these things out," he said on the weekly radio "Report to the People" over station WWDC.

"And you've got to be ruthless about it because you're dealing with ruthless people who flaunt the law and flaunt society," he added.

The Commissioner commended the series of articles appearing in the Washington Post and Times-Herald on conditions in the second precinct—the wickedest in the city.

Pointing out that he once lived in the precinct, Camalier said conditions there now "are the outgrowth of many years of inaction and downgrading of living and housing standards."

"People who live by devious means are not relieved of the obligation of trying to bring themselves up to a higher level," he declared.

However, he went on, officials have the responsibility of ridding the city of dope addicts and other "such crime breeders."

Elimination of slums would be an important step forward, he said.

Camalier urged Washington residents to "yell and yell and keep on yelling" for the proposed $305 million public works program "so that our good friends on Capitol Hill will realize they are doing something which will be appreciated by all of us."

"Every day we delay the starting of this program the more dramatic becomes the truth of such stories" as those on the second precinct, he said.

In reply to another question, Camalier said the Commissioners also are impressed with the $500 million Zeckendorf plan for redevelopment of southwest Washington.

THE WICKEDEST PRECINCT—EIGHTEEN SCHOOLS BATTLE POVERTY, CRIME IN SECOND PRECINCT (Eighth and last of a series)

(By S. L. Fishbein)

Second precinct schools are ramparts of decency on a battlefield of crime.

New and beautiful, old and shabby, the schools daily exert a powerful tug against the mire of poverty and lawlessness that sucks at youth in Washington's bloodiest 1½ square miles.

The schools draw to them the offspring of the precinct which also spawns more murders, brawls, robberies, housebreakings, prostitution, and liquor violators than any other in the city.

Within the precinct boundaries lie 8 Negro elementary schools, 1 white elementary school, 2 Negro junior high schools, 3 Negro high schools, and 4 parochial schools.

The total public-school enrollment in recent weeks stood at 9,670 Negro pupils and 286 white pupils. Many of the youngsters, especially in the high schools, live outside the precinct.

Considering the surroundings, school principals in the precinct are uniformly amazed at the cleanliness and general behavior of the children who pour out of the slums and alley houses.

"We're really astounded to see them come out of those places looking as clean as they look," says Mrs. Angela B. Bishop, principal for the past 23 years of the Simmons School at First and Pierce Streets NW.

There are several ways, however, in which the second precinct imprints its sordid stamp upon its schools.

At M. M. Washington Vocational, First and O Streets NW., which draws most of its students from outside the precinct, parents are immediately notified when a girl leaves classes during school hours.

Because of the neighborhood, says the principal, Mrs. D. I. Miller, "we want to make sure the girl has reached home safely."

Police were planted in the school early this semester to drive out gangs of teen-age boys who prowled the building during the lunch hour.

Mrs. Miller has had occasion to visit the alley on the school's east side to remonstrate with the drunks who guzzle there and leave a litter of empty bottles.

"I told them, 'Drinking near a school like that is like drinking on the steps of a church,'" she says.

"I haven't got my head knocked off—yet," she adds.

In that same alley 2 years ago a powerful stench arose from one of the sheds. Students thought there were dead rats inside.

When police looked into the matter they found the remains of a drunk dead 4 months.

Through its citizenship classes the school last semester put on a campaign to enlist students in the junior civic associations of their home communities.

Only one girl who lives in the second precinct volunteered for the nearby civic association whose territory covers a part of the precinct. She later turned out to be a shoplifter.

There were no recruits from the nearby area this semester, officials report.

Another school principal reports that an average of a dozen girls in the 13-to-15-age category become pregnant each year. Most of these are second precinct residents.

L. Roscoe Evans, principal of Shaw Junior High School, Seventh Street and Rhode Island Avenue NW., says his school has tried to counteract one problem by setting up special classes "to teach the children what social dancing is."

"Some children seem to think dancing is a sex activity instead of an art," he says.

The problem became clear when pupils were discovered frequenting nearby "juke-box dives" during the recess periods.

About a year ago, Evans says one such place was found to have rooms upstairs.

Evans says more than half his discipline cases involve children with backgrounds of illegitimacy or broken homes.

Evans calls it a great problem: the problem of educating unwanted, "knocked around" children who live with no privacy and see everything going on."

Bundy School at 429 O Street NW., sits in uncomfortable proximity to the prostitutes in the 600 block of O Street and the curbstone whisky peddlers at Fifth Street and Neal Place.

In addition to its regular classes, Bundy draws Negro pupils from all over the city who have reached the age of 13 and are still in elementary school.

The majority of the 192 over-age pupils, says Benjamin Henley, the principal, are from the immediate neighborhood.

Since the current school year started, Bundy has lost 17 pupils to the Industrial Home School because of truancy or delinquency.

Henley sees the two charges as part of the same problem. "A child in the streets gets into trouble," he says.

Behind these problem cases and behind many of the well-scrubbed, well-behaved youngsters in the second precinct schools, poverty is a potent factor.

Several principals interviewed saw surprisingly few overt reflections in their youngsters of the atmosphere of violence in the precinct.

None denied the signs of poverty, however.

At Bundy, for instance, Henley estimated that more than half of his 192 over-age pupils needed some help from school in the form of clothing or shoes.

About one-third of the Bundy children are what is known in school circles as "door-key children." Their parents work and they carry their house keys, often on a string around the neck, to get into their homes after school.

One principal recently received the following note from the parent of a truant pupil: "This is from ———'s mother * * *. I asking if you seed if I can get any help frome the well fair as you say if I ever kneed help it is now * * *. I haven even got food for my children to eat to day so please see if you can get for me a little help for my people don't have a job and I got to go to the hospitle and got to have $200 so you see what I up against."

"So that explains the attendance problem," says the principal. "She wants that boy to come to school but what's her mind occupied with?"

At the Walker-Jones School, First and L Streets NW., Mrs. Wilhelmina Thomas, the principal, has noticed a definite upsurge in recent months in requests for shoes.

There was a debate at Walker-Jones over whether some school PTA funds should be spent on Christmas and Easter decorating or whether the money should be used for the relief of hardship cases.

The decorations won. "I say these children need beauty and this is the only place they can get it," says Mrs. Thomas, explaining her position.

She believes the comparatively low truancy rate at Walker-Jones is due in part to the contrast between the attractive school atmosphere and the homes of the children.

During her 23 years as principal of Simmons, Mrs. Bishop has seen a tremendous change, all to the good.

Logan Court, which sends its youngsters to her school, is not nearly as rough as it used to be, Mrs. Bishop contends.

Teaching elite areas is easy, says Mrs. Bishop. There, children come to school with some background. Here, we have to build it—things like correct language and, in some cases, morals, and cleanliness."

Most principals interviewed are satisfied with the degree of cooperation shown by second precinct parents.

Two principals used almost identical language on this point. "Even when a father comes in here half loaded, he'll cooperate with us in trying to straighten his child out."

Walker-Jones, Terrell Junior High School at First and Pierce Streets NW., and Montgomery School at Fifth and P Streets NW., are among the newest schools in the city.

Shaw is outdated, shabby and on the list for abandonment. Dunbar High School at First and N Streets NW., is considered one of the finest high schools in any city of more than 500,000 population.

It has a higher percentage of graduates in college than any other high school in the city. Its capacity is well above its enrollment.

Armstrong Technical High School at First and O Streets NW., on the other hand, is in a bad way. Its buildings are old, its facilities obsolete to the point where students trained in some Armstrong shops are not equipped to work with modern industrial tools. For some time, Negro parents have been urging the transfer of McKinley Tech to Negro use.

Overcrowding is not a serious problem although Washington Vocational, Montgomery, Terrell Junior High, Walker-Jones, Cook School at North Capitol and P Streets, Garrison School at 12th and R Streets NW., and Langston School at First and P Streets NE., are operating above capacity.

The one white school, Thomson, at 12th and L Streets NW., has an enrollment of 286 and a capacity of 648.

RAT-INFESTED SLUMS FOUND IN SECOND PRECINCT

The residents in Washington's second precinct live side-by-side with rats.

"Sometimes they wake me up at night," one person living in this area said.

"The cat takes care of most of them but she's afraid of the big ones," said another.

Fully one-third of the houses in the precinct are substandard, the 1950 census report showed. Crime and slums coexist in the precinct.

Reporter S. L. Fishbein of the Washington Post and Times-Herald turns the spotlight on slum housing in the "wickedest precinct," the second precinct which annually reports more crimes than any other police precinct in the city.

[From the Washington Post and Times-Herald of March 28, 1954]

SLUM HOUSING PACES CRIME IN WASHINGTON'S WICKEDEST PRECINCT—1 OUT OF 8 DWELLINGS LISTED AS BELOW STANDARD

(By S. L. Fishbein)

The Pied Piper of Hamelin would make a pile in the second precinct.

The pitter-patter of rats is heard almost everywhere around the rusted tin fences and the rotted slats and the broken plaster which decorate so many homes in the city's wickedest precinct.

They are homes in which huge families crowd in between the flaking walls and learn how to do it yourself or do without.

This is the second precinct, which reports more major crimes each year than any other.

The question, "Are there any rats here?" was asked in several slum houses picked at random in the precinct last week. Here are some answers:

"Plenty."

"Sure."

"Haw—you kidding?"

"We get rat poison and they go. Then they come back."

"Sometimes they wake me in the middle of the night and I have to get up and clap my hands around the room to scare them off."

"The cat takes care of most of them, but she's afraid of the big ones."

During the 1950 census, a house-to-house survey of housing facilities in Washington was made.

Out of 14,189 houses reporting in the second precinct, there were 4,917 listed in the census report as either dilapidated, without a private bath, or without running water.

This is a ratio of more than 1 in 3. The citywide ratio is 1 in 8.

Since the census, the Board for the Condemnation of Insanitary Dwellings has condemned 179 houses within the precinct and is in the process of taking action on another 150 so far this year.

Condemning a filthy, leaky, rat-infested hovel solves only part of the problem and often complicates it.

Under current laws, the owner who doesn't care to renovate such an eyesore can leave it vacant, a tempting castle for the wind-nipped drunk, the dice-shooting drifter, and the teenage vandal.

There are 84 such buildings in the Second Precinct, condemned and vacant and without any indication by the owners of intentions to fix up.

Public health inspectors must take time badly needed for new inspections to back-track regularly and make sure these buildings remain vacant and boarded up.

But many don't stay boarded up long, according to James Bramhall, supervisor of Public Health Engineering at the Polk Health Center.

"We'll get these boarded up on a Friday," said Bramhall last week, pointing to a long-vacant row in Brooks Court, "and they'll be broken in by Monday."

Public health officials are pressing hard for a pending bill which would put a time limit on a landlord's decision: Either fix it up within 6 months after condemnation or tear it down.

"We need that law badly," says William H. Cary, director of Public Health Engineering.

Condemnation is the fate of only the most drastic cases and of selected blocks of houses taken as project areas.

Cary's inspectors routinely check individual complaints and conduct house-to-house surveys of trouble areas to check compliance with the health laws.

One of the blocks surveyed last year includes the houses on the north side of the unit block of L Street NW.

Less than a year later, Cary was shocked at the condition of one of those houses, a two-story row dwelling at 25 L Street NW.

"It's one of the worst I've seen in a long time," he said.

When asked if the house could have decayed to such an extent within a year, Cary replied: "There must have been some things there we didn't catch in the survey."

"Also," he added, "there are a lot of defects in that building which the health inspector couldn't do much about under present regulations, but which he might be able to tackle if we had a housing code."

"I don't see how the people in that house got through the winter," said Supervisor Bramhall.

The people in the house include Henry and Juanita House and their niece, 4.

They pay $40 a month for a six-room house. They use one small coal stove in the house for heat. The wall around the stovepipe was black, indicating a leak. This was the root of Bramhall's concern.

There were black wedges around the baseboards upstairs, evidence that the smoke was wandering around between lower ceiling and upper floor.

Mrs. House said the toilet, in a shed next to the kitchen, had been stopped up for the past 3 months.

"We tell the man every time he comes for rent," she said a week ago. "He says he'll come back to fix it, but we don't see him again until the rent's due."

When the rickety back door is shut firmly, plaster crumbles off another part of the back wall.

The water pipe in the kitchen leaks. "Many times on cold mornings I have to get up and scrape ice off the floor," said Mrs. House.

The house is listed in the District Assessor's office as the property of Marshall and Lucinda Glover. Marshall Glover used to live in the house himself and now lives in Philadelphia.

The rent is collected by his brother, Asbie Glover, a trucker of 1674 Montello Avenue NE., who says he merely picks up the rent and applies it to a note on the building.

Asbie Glover denies the family repeatedly complained to him about the stopped toilet.

He admits the house isn't fit to live in and says he's warned Marshall Glover that it stood in danger of being condemned, but, Asbie adds, "my brother has never been one to tend to business." Condemnation action is under way.

Bramhall considers Glicks Court between Sixth, Seventh, Rhode Island Avenue, and S Streets one of the worst in his territory.

"If you can't get something illegal in Glicks Court it doesn't exist," he says.

The house at 1719 Glicks Court is the home of a 37-year-old woman and her seven children. She says she's never been married.

She says the family lives on $160 a month in public assistance funds. Fifteen dollars of that goes for rent for a four-room house with cracked, dirty walls, a littered back yard, no inside toilet or running water, and no electricity.

She says she pays her rent to a Mr. Rice of the United House of Prayer, one of Bishop C. M. (Daddy) Grace's establishments. The Assessor's Office lists the owners of the house as C. M. Grace and Johnny Hero, trustees of the Church on the Rock of the Apostolic Faith.

The United House of Prayer is in the rear of the Glicks Court house and faces Seventh Street.

Last week Edward Rice told interviewers he was superintendent of Sunday schools at the United House of Prayer, a Government Printing Office employee, and the man who collects the rent on the Glicks Court house.

After taxes and water bills are paid, he said, the church makes no profit on the house and doesn't intend to repair it because the church plans to expand on the property.

Asked what he thought about the church renting property in such condition, he said he hadn't examined the house recently. At one point he said, "I didn't ask them to move in there."

He said he would consult the business board of the church and give the family a notice to move.

When he learned the two interviewers were reporters, Rice became indignant and accused them of posing as Health Department men.

Mrs. Mesia T. Robinson, 56, of 14 Paterson Street NE., is the mother of 17 children, 5 of whom died in infancy.

She lives in the 4-room house with 2 of her sons, a daughter and a granddaughter. Bottles are stuffed in holes in the house to assist the cat in combating the rat problem. Rent is $33.

At 4 Paterson Street NE., McAdo Shuler, a Navy Yard employee, his wife and 6 children enjoy an inside bath, a porcelain stove, refrigerator and hot water heater. The rent is $40 a month.

Mrs. Shuler says the stove, refrigerator and hot water heater were supplied by the family.

The Shulers are in much better shape than some of their neighbors, but they're house-hunting.

"This street is terrible," says Mrs. Shuler. "Every Friday, Saturday and Sunday night there's drinking and fighting—a week ago they carried out a woman knocked in the head."

In summer the roughhousing moves outdoors and Mrs. Shuler is afraid to let her children out to play.

At 454 O Street NW., Johnnie B. Carr, a cabbie and part-time preacher lives with his wife and 7 children.

They pay $41 a month for a 5-room house with an inside bath. Carr says rain leaks through the ceiling in the bathroom and one of the bedrooms leaks.

He says some of the light fixtures are unused because the wiring is bad.

Downstairs in the kitchen there is a cavernous hole in the ceiling which also lets the rain in. Carr says it has been there for some months.

Next door, at 456 O Street NW., Mrs. Daisy Norvell, 65, has lived in the same house for more than 40 years.

When she moved in rent was $14.50 a month. Now it's $37.50. Twenty years ago a kitchen and inside bath were installed.

Mrs. Norvell said if she didn't like the accommodations she wouldn't have lived there so long. But she too complains of a leaky ceiling.

Raymond R. Ruppert, whose real estate office is at 1017 7th Street NW., collects the rent on the houses at 4 and 14 Paterson Street NE. He is listed in the assessor's office as the owner of the dwellings at 454 and 456 O Street NW.

Asked how many other such houses he owns or manages, Ruppert said he preferred not to give an exact number. He said "many" would be a fair description. He describes the properties as "low-rent housing."

The hole in the kitchen at 454 O Street was brought to his attention a week ago and is in process of being repaired, Ruppert said. He was not aware of the other complaints.

Ruppert pointed out that the tenants may lodge complaints at any time with health inspectors.

Ruppert has several thoughts on improvement of slum conditions.

The activities of the Board for the Condemnation of Insanitary Buildings, he says, "amount to confiscation of property" and are "leading toward radical socialism."

As an example of what he calls hardships worked on owners, Ruppert points to a Board project on Fenton Place NE., in which condemnation action has been started on some 100 houses.

"We have 27 of those Fenton Place properties," Ruppert says.

Some years ago, Ruppert said, he noted the drive toward the elimination of outside water closets and began voluntarily to install inside baths, making additional repairs where necessary.

He said he was working toward the June 1955 legal deadline for removal of outside water closets, but is discouraged by the operations of the Condemnation Board.

Twenty of the 27 Fenton Place houses have been fitted with bathrooms and repaired at a cost of about $1,500 each, he said.

Under the Board's standards, Ruppert said, all the houses will require additional thousands in repairs and only about $600 of the $1,500 spent on each house will be salvageable.

"The board's standards are so high that when they get finished, each house will be fit for the President to live in," Ruppert said.

"We're trying to cooperate with the elimination of slum conditions, but find it's impractical as long as the board requires excessively high standards," he added.

Ruppert said he can't rent a house brought up to board standards at a rate high enough to pay for the cost of repairs.

Speaking generally, board officials say their aim in condemning houses is first of all to remove all health hazards, and secondly, to make a livable home out of a blighted house in such a way that the building will remain livable for some time.

In the same way, the aim in a block project is to make a decent community out of a slum.

The board prefers to work on blocks rather than on individual houses, to encourage owners who might be reluctant to invest in repairing a house in what would remain essentially a slum neighborhood.

In the preliminary stages of a block project, the board works in secrecy. Col. Giles Evans, chairman of the board, says one reason for the secrecy is a habit owners have of quickly obtaining a building permit when they hear the board is planning action on their properties.

"When we see that," says Evans, we may think this is a step in the right direction, and with all the work we have to do, we may skip that building.

"Then the owner'll do a slap-dash job—not nearly up to the standards we'd demand if we condemned the house."

Another approach in the second precinct, enjoying mixed success so far, is the voluntary rehabilitation project jointly undertaken by the Central Northwest Citizens Association and the Washington Housing Association.

The target is the renovation of 11 blighted buildings in a triangle bounded by Vermont Avenue, 11th and R Streets NW.

One owner of four houses is cooperating and is prepared to pay several thousand dollars for repairs.

A steering committee with members from both sponsoring groups still has to decide whether the current tenants will have to move during repairs.

The committee feels it has a moral obligation to find suitable housing for any displaced tenants.

This problem has not yet arisen with respect to the other houses. None of the other six owners is cooperating.

A spokesman for members of a family which owns four of the houses has told the committee, "It's nobody's business but our own what we do with our property."

The other two owners have sent word through their agents that they're willing to join any voluntary rehabilitation plan.

"We're still hoping we won't have to call in the Bureau of Public Health Engineering," said Mrs. Hilda Cloud, executive director of the housing association. The other owners may come around when they see what's being done to the four houses.

In other houses (not the ones mentioned in this article) crime and slum conditions have been shown to coexist. Health Inspection Supervisor Bramhall reports that 29 out of 30 second precinct addresses which figured in recent narcotics raids were cited by his office for some sanitary violation.

Mr. Chairman, I would join with my distinguished friend from Pennsylvania [Mr. Scott], who just preceded me, to say that within my congressional district there is no particular interest in public housing. Yet I have come to the conclusion that, in the great metropolitan areas of this country, it is an absolute necessity. Also, it is the conclusion of the President's Advisory Committee on Housing. The President himself cannot reach any other conclusion than to recommend it to the Congress and I commend the majority leadership for the proposed amendment which I understand will be offered on tomorrow to include 35,000 public-housing units in the present bill.

Mr. Chairman, I make this prediction, that, if the urban renewal program is carried out as intended by this bill, there is no other answer it seems to me than to provide the necessary public-housing units to take care of the low-income group, the displaced persons who will be forced from these blighted areas.

THE WHERRY HOUSING PROGRAM

The bill before the Committee extends the Wherry housing program for another year. This program is strongly supported by the Defense Establishment. The program however, is limited to permanent defense installations. The bill drops the so-called defense housing program. It is my feeling, Mr. Chairman, that the Congress must enlarge the housing program for those camps and areas that are not looked upon as permanent. In many cases our military will continue to use these nonpermanent camps for many years. The houses in these places are very, very poor and the morale of the serviceman is at a low ebb.

For several months I have been studying the military needs for housing and it does seem to me, that when this Congress will during this session appropriate over $1 billion for family allowance for the military, that some kind of a program could be developed that would not be a strain upon the Government and at the same time provide urgently needed housing for those military installations that are not now considered of a permanent nature.

INTEREST RATES

At the start I pointed out that, one reason why I signed the minority report, I was concerned about the proposed plan to control interest rates. I think the housing industry, the mortgage lenders, and all those concerned in rental housing, including the Federal Government and especially the defense agency and the homeowner will be best served to stabilize the interest rate.

I call your attention to the testimony of Colonel McCord of the Air Force who, when I questioned him on the interest rate made this statement.

I asked Colonel McCord this question, appearing on page 260 of the hearing:

Have you studied the bill to the point of analyzing the interest factor, so far as the rental costs for Wherry housing units?

Colonel McCord replied:

Yes, sir; for every quarter percent increase in the interest rate the rents would be adjusted upward, if the interest rates were increased, $2 per unit per month.

For the information of the Committee, I place in the RECORD at this point a table showing the effect of increased interest rates on average Wherry housing mortgage of $8,100.

Percent rate	Rate per $1,000 amortization and interest	Per $8,100 mortgage	Cumulative increase	Vacancy (rent increase)		Installment

Mr. Chairman, I call the attention of the Committee to the testimony of Mr.

Shanks, president of the Prudential Life Insurance Co., appearing on page 473 of the hearing. I feel he is giving us a solemn warning when he makes this statement:

We are apprehensive about some of the broad philosophy which runs through the bill. This takes the form of a general liberalization of insured and guaranteed mortgage terms to a point which we think raises a serious question of conflict with the tenets of sound financing. Likewise, we believe that the bill leans too far in the direction of accepting the objective that the volume of housing starts must be kept going at a peak level at all costs, and that the Government should use its proposed control over insured and guaranteed mortgage terms to accomplish this objective. We would like to see in the bill a recognition that regardless of a desire to stabilize the housing industry at a high level the number of housing starts each year must bear a relationship to such basic forces as the rate of family formation, the need for replacement of clearly substandard housing, and the willingness to buy.

On the other side, however, we have various groups, the A. F. of L., Fortune magazine, and others, indicating that for the period 1955-60 the annual housing construction needed totals from 1,400,000 to 2 million housing starts.

I hope that as we proceed with the amendments to the bill we can objectively reach decisions that will be in the best interest of all America and of the groups in America who urgently need housing.

Mr. KARSTEN of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will count. [After counting.] One hundred and three Members are present, a quorum.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. McCORMACK].

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, expressing my own view in relation to debate, this is a very important bill and there should be ample opportunity to discuss it, and I mean by that unlimited opportunity for all Members to have an opportunity of expressing themselves. I hope there will be no effort to shorten debate, because this is a bill of far-reaching importance. Many Members are interested. We cannot get time in general debate and it is only under the 5-minute rule that that can be obtained. In expressing my own views for whatever value they might be to the leadership on the other side, I shall fight any effort to shorten debate unnecessarily.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCORMACK. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I may say to the gentleman—I know he will understand that I am doing this in kindness to him—that I have been importuned all day long from the gentleman's side to rush this thing through as fast as we can. If the gentleman can control the votes on the other side in that respect, I assure the gentleman there will be plenty of time. I can stay here all evening and all day tomorrow; however, the membership here has been pressuring all of us to get out of here as early as possible. I am glad that the gentleman raises the point.

Mr. McCORMACK. The gentleman's information is very interesting but it does not change the views I have expressed one iota.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. HAYS].

Mr. HAYS of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, someone said here that they did not believe that with the exception of Mr. Cole anyone who testified on this bill was wholeheartedly in favor of it. As I recall it, Mr. Cole himself was not completely satisfied with this bill. So I think the committee has a unique record that not one witness who appeared before it is for the bill as it is written.

I certainly was not for the bill in committee and I am not for the bill as it comes before us today because it has a lot of defects. For instance, the veterans' preference is wiped out. You probably have received telegrams from your American Legions in your various States to that effect. Also the President is permitted to up the interest rate. I suppose that is in the interest of flexibility which this administration seems to be sold on, but I cannot understand why they want flexibility to put the interest rates up and a flexibility to put farm prices down. It is a one-way flexibility in each case.

Mr. Chairman, I am coming of the opinion more and more that I shall be more satisfied with this bill as we go along than I was formerly because I understand that from the Republican side is going to come an amendment providing for 35,000 units of public housing. I think that will be a fine thing. It shows how you can progress and how your thinking can change. I do not know who is going to offer the amendment. I suppose my good friend the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HALLECK], the majority leader, will see that it is offered at the correct time and will endeavor to push it through. That has now become the policy of the party. But I am wondering how he is going to coincide that with what he has said here several other times. Going back to June 29 of 1949, he said:

Mr. HALLECK. It has been said here, and I think with complete truth and veracity, that this is but the beginning.

That is, talking about public housing.

Once the policy is adopted, what are you going to say when the pressures go on to provide this same sort of housing at the taxpayers' expense, in part, at least, to other millions of people who stand in exactly the same position as do the people who will occupy these first units that are built?

Well, I thought we ought to go on and build some more. He further said:

Where will be the resistance to say no?

I hope the gentleman from Indiana, [Mr. HALLECK], will let enough of the people on his side know even that he has changed his position, and he has changed it rather recently, because last year he said this, 83d Congress, 1st session:

Mr. Chairman, reference has been made to certain campaign statements that the President made in the last campaign. Why, certainly he has said, as we all have said, on numerous occasions, that we seek better housing. But, I do not think you can find—I know you cannot find—by any logical interpretation of any of those statements, a declaration in favor of Federal public housing.

Now, that is what the majority leader said. I do not know where he is. I told him I wanted to quote him a little bit, and I hoped he would be around; but that is what he said as little ago as the first session of this Congress.

Now, it will be interesting to see if this bill is perfected any. It will be interesting to see if we do put in some public housing, say 35,000 units. It will be interesting to see whether or not we can keep the interest rate at a reasonable figure. It will be interesting to see whether or not we can retain the veterans' preference. Later I want to speak for a few minutes about an amendment that I want to offer to double the amount of money that is contained in this bill for public housing, because if we are going to have any sort of an adequate set of plans in the event that we have to put them into effect, certainly the amount of money that is contained in the bill at the present time is inadequate.

Mr. GAMBLE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 7 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. KEATING].

(Mr. KEATING asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks and include the text of an amendment.)

Mr. KEATING. Mr. Chairman, I have asked for this time in general debate for the purpose of calling the attention of the membership to an amendment which I propose to offer on page 184 just before section 405 when we reach the amendment stage. It is quite possible that our distinguished chairman, who will rule on the law and the law only, after consultation with the Parliamentarian, may be forced to rule this out of order as dealing with a subject which is properly within the province of another committee, the Committee on Ways and Means. I do feel, however, that it is deserving of serious consideration by the House. Since my time later may be limited in discussion, I have asked for this time now in order that I may alert the membership to the subsequent offer of the amendment and have a full opportunity to present it. It will come as no surprise to the Members of this body who are acquainted with the municipality in question to say that the city of Rochester, N. Y., has been a leader in the field of providing housing for low-income and middle-income families. They have done it to date without any Federal public housing project. They do have a couple of State projects in that city. They have done it largely because of unique plans which have been entered into by the public-spirited citizens and businessmen of that city to provide housing for modest-income families outside the framework of public housing as we know it.

Mr. HAND. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KEATING. I should be glad to yield, briefly.

Mr. HAND. As one who has been very much interested in housing for low-income groups, I might say to the gentleman that I know something about the Rochester experiment. I have watched it with considerable interest and I might add with considerable enthusiasm. I think it is a grand project.

Mr. KEATING. I thank the gentleman. At the appropriate point in this debate I seek to offer an amendment which will provide that the obligations of these nonprofit redevelopment corporations, dealing in slum or blighted areas, shall be exempt from Federal taxation, provided they comply with certain requirements. First, that the nonprofit corporation shall have as its purpose the housing of families of low income who otherwise would have difficulty in finding decent housing.

Second, eligibility for admission to the housing facility shall be in accordance with standards adopted by the governing body of the municipality.

Third, such nonprofit corporations shall be subject to and restricted by State laws or other State regulations as to rents, charges and capital structure.

And finally, that where the nonprofit corporation has stock, the same shall be stock upon which no dividends will be declared and which shall have no liquidation value for any private stockholder in excess of the face value of his investment; and that any increment shall escheat to the State or be distributed to the municipalities.

Mr. McDONOUGH. Mr. Chairman, with the gentleman yield?

Mr. KEATING. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. McDONOUGH. This would not provide a means for a very wealthy person to build such a project as this in order to avoid paying income taxes?

Mr. KEATING. No; it definitely would not under those restrictions.

Mr. McDONOUGH. Would it give the person who occupies one of these houses the impression that he was being charitably contributing to?

Mr. KEATING. I do not think the people do have that feeling. They pay a rent, but they pay a lower rent than they would normally have to pay if this were a profit-making enterprise.

Mr. McDONOUGH. These are operating institutions now?

Mr. KEATING. Yes; that is right.

Mr. McDONOUGH. Does the gentleman have an idea that if we must have socialism it is well to confine it to the State line or the county line rather than to have it Federal?

Mr. KEATING. I do not like to bandy about loosely the word socialism. I am opposed to true socialism at any level. I do not hold, however, with those who contend that the intervention of government at any stage to improve conditions is socialism. This Rochester plan could under no stretch of the imagination be called a socialistic experiment.

We are all aware of the ever-present and ever-increasing need for the rehabilitation and redevelopment of substandard areas in our cities so as to eliminate such blighted areas and provide clean, decent, and economical housing. This situation of necessity becomes worse as time goes on in the absence of corrective measures being taken by the Federal Government, the State governments, the municipalities themselves, and the commendable and selfless efforts on the part of private enterprise. There can be no doubt that the problem, which in many, many cases is a chronic problem, can best be met through the united efforts of both Government and private enterprise.

Indeed, this was recognized by our President in his message to the Congress and further has been amplified by the Administrator of the Housing and Home Finance Agency, whose chief concern is the elimination of unhealthy living conditions and the provision of decent housing for those to whom this has, up to now, been denied. Proof of this can be found in the fact that it is the apparent intention of the Government to decrease the amount of money to be expended for public housing financed by the Federal Government and to encourage the entry into this field of private investment.

May I quote from the report to the President of his Advisory Committee on Government housing policies and programs:

Slum clearance and slum prevention are local problems which require local solutions.

Encouragement of the entry on the part of private enterprise into this field is bound to result in an incalculable saving to the Federal Government in that it would not be required to expend the great amounts of money for the construction and maintenance of housing projects as it has in the past under our present laws.

In order to offer an incentive to private enterprise to participate in this whole program, it seems to be only appropriate that some sort of tax exemption be extended to prospective private investors.

I am, therefore, offering this amendment which is designed to afford low-rent nonprofit redevelopment corporations Federal tax exemption on their obligations, including interest. Under the present law, the bonds and notes of municipalities and public-housing authorities have this exemption throughout the country.

The amendment which I am proposing, it would appear, is little enough to extend to the tremendous forces of private capital which might come into the very worthwhile program of slum clearance and redevelopment. With the enactment of such a provision as this private capital would in part be permitted to stand on equal footing with the municipalities which it is serving without profit to the investors. The provisions of this measure are such that such corporations or organizations would be under the surveillance of Federal, State, and municipal governments so as to assure that the housing facilities constructed meet the public need. Provision is also made that no profit will ever be realized by stockholders or other members of the redevelopment company or organization either during its life or at the time of its liquidation or dissolution.

This provision is worded so that it could not be subject to abuse by anyone whereby any profit could be realized or the intended public service would not have been met.

Accompanying the submission of this amendment is no implication that private enterprise alone can meet the tremendous problem involved, nor that Government has failed in its efforts in this regard. However, as I have stated, in adopting this approach, we would be doing illimitable service to the people who are in need of relief from present housing conditions and to the Federal Government itself by assisting it in its expressed desire to decrease the amount of money which it must expend to provide new housing as well as by interesting private enterprise in helping to solve the problem and return a great amount of the responsibility for it to local communities.

This legislative suggestion, I believe, represents a very significant step forward in meeting the nationwide problem: proper housing would be provided for, eligibility for admission and rents to be charged still would be controlled and, at the same time, great savings would be realized by the Federal Government. I urge adoption of the amendment.

Under leave granted, there follows the text of my proposed amendment:

SEC. 804. Section 102 of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended, is hereby amended by inserting the following new subsection (h) at the end thereof:

"(h) Obligations, including interest thereon, issued by nonprofit redevelopment corporations or other nonprofit corporations or organizations, authorized by law to provide low-rent housing and to assist in the redevelopment of real property in areas designated by the governing bodies of the municipalities or other political subdivisions in which the housing is to be located, as being slum or blighted areas and income derived by such nonprofit corporations or organizations from such housing in such areas, shall be exempt from all taxation now or hereafter imposed by the United States, provided that "(a) such nonprofit corporation or organization shall have as its purpose the housing of families of low income who otherwise would have difficulty in finding decent housing;

"(b) eligibility for admission to the housing facilities involved shall be in accordance with standards adopted by the governing body of the municipality or other political subdivision in which the housing is located;

"(c) such nonprofit corporation or organization is subject to and restricted by State laws or those of political subdivisions or regulations of State bank or insurance departments as to rents, charges, and capital structure or methods of operation; and

"(d) where such nonprofit corporation or organization has stock, the same shall be stock upon which no dividends will be declared, and which shall have no liquidation value for any private stockholder in excess of the face value of his investment, any increment of such corporation or organization instead to escheat to a State, or be distributed to municipalities, or a combination of both. Regardless of the capital structure of such corporations or organizations, no profit shall be realized from the operations contemplated by this section by the owners or members thereof, either during the life of such corporations or organizations, or at or after their liquidation or dissolution."

(Mr. KEATING asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BARRETT].

Mr. BARRETT. Mr. Chairman, the Eisenhower administration, the Housing and Home Finance Agency, and the House Committee on Banking and Currency had before them a great opportunity in connection with the housing legislation now here on the House floor, H. R. 7839. They had the opportunity to come forward with a housing program which would outdo the work of the Roosevelt and Truman administrations in assuring decent homes for the American people, while at the same time giving us a huge assist in expanding the prosperity of the American economy.

The housing industry is a basic part of our economy. Money spent in building new homes for our millions of families living in less-than-adequate dwellings stimulates not only the building trades, the materials dealers, the raw materials producers, the investment business, and so on, but has a tremendous impact on practically every business and industry in the country.

So a good housing bill accomplishes two great things: Better housing for more people, and more prosperity for everyone in the United States.

With the opportunity before it to come forward with a real and effective housing program, the Eisenhower administration and the Housing and Home Finance Agency took a rather timid look at the problem and came up with timid solutions—halfway measures. In other words, it swung and missed. Then, when the administration's half-measures housing bill came before us on the Banking and Currency Committee, the decision on the part of the majority members of that committee was to provide even less. For instance, there is no provision whatsoever in this bill for any public housing. None at all.

Redevelopment? Yes. Redevelopment is not only good for our cities in attacking blight and in improving the community, but it also does a lot for property values in the surrounding areas.

But what this bill proposes to do is to continue the highly successful redevelopment program but make no provision whatsoever—no really effective or really practical provision—for those who are dispossessed and evicted from their substandard dwellings in those developed areas. In south Philadelphia a number of temporary housing projects, such as the shipyard homes, are being demolished and there are no low-income housing projects in the area to absorb them.

The Republican members of the committee would probably disagree with me on that. They insist that the idea inserted in the bill to encourage private builders to build homes for these evicted families will do the trick.

WHAT FAMILIES COULD BENEFIT FROM THE $8,600 HOME PROPOSAL?

Just stop for a moment and consider that idea from a practical standpoint. People living in slum areas, in substandard, inadequate accommodations, who have to move to make room for a redevelopment program or a new street or highway plan, or some other public improvement of that kind, could then buy—I repeat, buy—a home of their own under this plan, and buy it on what are said to be attractive terms.

What are those terms? A $200 closing-cost charge—which many, if not most of these families would not have and would not be able to raise. Then the house itself could not cost more than $7,600, except in so-called high-cost areas like Philadelphia where the top would be $8,600.

Can you tell me what kind of housing can be built in Philadelphia for $8,600? How big? Big enough for the average lower-income family presently eligible for public housing?

But assuming, Mr. Chairman, that such housing could be built, and that the prospective purchasers could scrape together the necessary $200 down payment—which is what that fee amounts to. Could families now living in slums and eligible for public-housing afford to purchase a house with an $8,600 mortgage, even one spread over 40 years?

On an $8,600 house, it would cost the purchaser $76.36 a month for shelter rent. Imagine that. Imagine rehousing lower-income families from the slums in units costing $76 a month to own and operate.

This is the most ridiculous slum-clearance suggestion I have ever heard, when you apply it to actual conditions in a city like Philadelphia.

Let me point out another aspect of this: Assume some families in rundown, blighted areas where a redevelopment program was to be undertaken could afford $200 downpayments and could also squeeze together the $76 a month to own and live in such a house. Do you know how much that house would cost to purchase and operate over the life of the mortgage? The figure I have is $36,172.88. That is the cost to a family to buy one of these $8,600 houses on a 40-year mortgage as provided under this proposal.

WHAT ABOUT THOSE WHO DON'T QUALIFY FOR THE MORTGAGE PROGRAM?

Now I have pointed out only a few of the hopes in this proposal. But what about those families which live in substandard units which are not actually in the direct path of a redevelopment program? Under this bill, they could not qualify at all for the program. We would sentence them to continue living in slums.

For this bill provides nothing for public housing. It opposes public housing. It is built on the theory that public housing is bad. This theory is contrary to the President's recommendations on public housing. The President has favored a 35,000-unit program for this fiscal year. However, I firmly believe that we should have a minimum program of 50,000 units for this fiscal year in order to fill the vacuum created by the small number of units provided last year and to provide for the families that will be unhoused by redevelopment. I also believe that the over-all program should provide for 200,000 units over the next 4-year period, and that this figure is an essential minimum.

It was interesting to note from the testimony given to the House Banking and Currency Committee that prominent persons in Government today who were previously opposed to public housing now realize the absolute necessity of an adequate public-housing program.

Mr. Chairman, this housing bill has some good features—I do not want to imply that there is nothing in it that is any good. By the lights of some of our Republican colleagues, it is an excellent bill, because it provides so many new advantages for the investment bankers in getting into the housing field.

But it is not the kind of housing bill which is needed today to help rehouse families living in un-American squalor, in real slums. It is not the kind of housing bill which is needed to stimulate our economy in a way which it must be stimulated if we are to bring back the full employment prosperity which we had when the Republican administration took office.

H. R. 8739 is, in short, a less-than-adequate bill for a less-than-full employment economy. We have the opportunity here to improve the bill and fulfill our obligation to our low-income families by authorizing a 200,000 housing unit program at the rate of 50,000 per year.

(Mr. BARRETT asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. MULTER].

(Mr. MULTER asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Chairman, I have sat here all through the debate on the rule, practically all of which was devoted to the merits or lack of merits of this housing deal, and I have sat through all of the debate on the bill itself. I have patiently waited for someone to come forward and tell us why this is a good housing bill.

I have in mind the very beautiful language that appears in the statement of the President of the United States in the message on the housing program which he sent to this House and the other body on January 25, 1954, in which he pointed out how necessary it is that we have a good, sound housing program; how he pointed out that housing for some 19 million families now living in nonfarm houses is more than 30 years old and fast deteriorating; how he pointed out that we need new housing for all groups of our economy; how he pointed out that millions of our people still live in slums, that millions more live in rundown, declining neighborhoods, and so on with more beautiful words, and then he gave his program as to what should be in a housing bill.

I have in mind the very lengthy document sent to the Congress by the President's Advisory Committee on Government Housing Policies and Programs and the very fine recommendations contained within that 377-page document.

I have in mind the hearings before our committee, running well over 800 pages, almost 900 pages.

I have not heard or read anything on the subject either in those documents or anywhere else where anyone can come forward and say, "This is a good housing bill." It is not a good housing bill because it is a sham and a fraud upon the American people. I repeat, it is a sham and a fraud upon the American people.

The bankers who came before our committee, and the representatives of the insurance companies who lend billions of dollars for housing every year came before our committee, and they all told us this program, as set forth in this bill, will not produce any more housing.

I have in mind, too, some of the witnesses who came forth and said that the modernization and rehabilitation program that they advocate, and which is supposed to be provided for in this bill, is going to produce some 600,000 habitable units. Well, what are you going to do with the people in those units now while you are trying to modernize those homes? Where are you going to house them while you rebuild those houses for them? You are not going to do it, and you are not going to produce any 600,000 new houses under this program. You have already heard about how this bill is going to permit the President to raise the interest rate on mortgages in his discretion. What interest rate can he raise under this bill? You have a limitation in the bill. As the law exists today, and there is no change sought to be made in this bill, the interest rate is limited to 6 percent on nonveterans' mortgages. Is the President going to raise that 6-percent interest rate under the authority you seek to give him in this bill? He can, but I doubt whether he will do it.

Under existing law, the veterans' mortgages are limited as to interest rate at the present time to 4½ percent. I stood on this floor last week and offered an amendment to cut that, and was told by the very distinguished gentlewoman from Massachusetts who chairs the Committee on Veterans' Affairs that her committee was convinced that the veterans' interest rate must be reduced, and that her committee was about to consider a bill and bring it in very shortly. The very next day the gentleman of the committee who chairs the subcommittee in charge of this subject reported that the committee will not consider reducing interest rates below the 4½ percent on veterans' mortgages. This bill is going to permit the President to increase those rates. Now, what rates is he going to increase? If he is not going to raise it over 6 percent on the nonveterans' mortgages, the only sphere of activity where he can raise the interest is the already too high interest rate of 4½ percent on veterans' mortgages.

Mr. AYRES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MULTER. I yield to the gentleman, since I referred to him.

Mr. AYRES. I think the gentleman from New York is familiar with the fact that when the interest rate was 4 percent there were very few GI loans available of that kind.

Mr. MULTER. I do not agree with the gentleman. There was ample money available.

Mr. AYRES. Evidently the gentleman from New York has not bothered to check with the records of the Veterans' Administration.

Mr. MULTER. Let us see. Let us not quibble. You say the money was not available. I say the money was available. What you mean, I think, is that the lenders would not lend the money. I agree with you. They went on strike. They would not let the veteran have the mortgage money at 4 percent. You are right. They had the money in the banks.

Mr. AYRES. It was not that they were discriminating against the veterans.

Mr. MULTER. Oh, yes, they were. Yes, they were. They were striking against the veterans. They said if you give us 5 percent or 4½ percent we will give you the money. When you raised it to 4½ percent and guaranteed them against any loss, and you gave them a guaranty which is just as good as a United States bond, they let the veteran have some money—not very much, but some.

Mr. AYRES. Today with the 4½ percent interest rate, the month of March will be the biggest month in the past 2 years on GI guaranteed loans. As long as the program is working as satisfactorily as it is, we certainly should let them alone.

Mr. MULTER. And I tell you they will lend the money at 4 percent on a guaranteed mortgage. There is no reason why they should not lend the money. The point I am making now is that the only reason for putting in a discretionary authority with the President to raise the interest rate is to give them the right to raise the rates on veterans' mortgages unless he wants to raise the other mortgages beyond 6 percent.

Here is another gimmick in this bill. Never yet have we had anything in a housing program which permitted a service charge to be made. This will let them charge a premium of one-half of 1 percent on top of the interest rate. Now here is another gimmick here. You let them charge a service charge on top of it, and there is no limitation, of, 1 percent, if they can get it. He will probably charge a half percent. It will only cost $429 million a year to the homeowners of the country who will sign these mortgages and who cannot buy houses without mortgages.

Then we have some other things in this bill, and many fine things that are not in the bill.

I have before me a letter from one of the largest security dealers in the country. Most of its business is devoted to buying and selling mortgages throughout the country. I want to quote just this short sentence from this letter on the subject of interest rates:

The provision for flexibility in interest rates as provided here is extremely dangerous. Increasing the maximum to 6 percent is an invitation to raise rates. The 5 percent maximum was satisfactory and FHA has always exercised flexibility. To attach the rate to bonds would be a serious mistake. The recent swings in the bond market prove the point and a cyclic change in mortgage rates would demoralize the industry. FHA and VA rates should be on parity and should move with long term swings in the mortgage rate and in consonance with Government policy and by action through the Housing Administrator.

Then you have another item. The Federal National Mortgage Association, they are going to convert it into a private industry now. You have built up a surplus in that organization of over $1 million.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the Delegate from Alaska [Mr. BARTLETT].

Mr. BARTLETT. Mr. Chairman, I requested this time in furtherance of a search for information as to why the Housing and Home Finance Agency desires to repeal a part of the Alaska Housing Act, Public Law 52 of the 81st Congress.

On page 178, section 305, subsection (b) of section (2) of the Alaska Housing Act is proposed to be repealed. I have made reasonably diligent inquiry and I cannot find why this is desired. The hearings before the committee are silent on the subject. This is a very special provision incorporated in the Alaska Housing Act which has been of considerable benefit there. I will say to the Committee that as a consequence of the enactment of the Alaska Housing Act the housing needs, in the main, have been met in the Territory of Alaska. Six thousand units were originally required when this bill became law, and slightly over that number have been built.

I want to suggest that the use of the powers conferred upon the Federal National Mortgage Association in subsection (b) of section (2) of the Alaska Housing Act, which is sought to be repealed, are permissive and would not need to be employed. I think it would be very well if that provision were retained in the law, so it could be used if later needed.

I would like to ask some member of the committee if other provisions in the bill now under consideration are available to replace the section to which I have referred. Could any member of the committee enlighten me as to that?

Mr. McDONOUGH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BARTLETT. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. McDONOUGH. Is the gentleman referring to the lack of any provision in the bill to provide for the selling of secondary mortgages?

Mr. BARTLETT. Specifically, I would like to ask the gentleman from California if the special assistance operations detailed on page 20 of the report would take care of the situation to which I have just referred?

Mr. McDONOUGH. Yes, at the pleasure of the President of the United States.

Mr. BARTLETT. And could be used in the Alaska field.

Mr. McDONOUGH. That is right.

Mr. BARTLETT. Could the gentleman inform me if he knows why the repealer is sought at this time?

Mr. McDONOUGH. No; I cannot answer that question. As a matter of fact, I may say to the gentleman from Alaska that I am sympathetic with his problem in Alaska, and I believe every provision should be made for ample financing of homes in Alaska and Guam.

Mr. BARTLETT. As I see it, this language is permissive and no harm would be done if it were allowed to remain in the law. If it does not need to be used, it will not be used. I hope the Committee will be agreeable to retaining that language which section 305 on page 178 seeks to repeal, so that if any great housing need should arise as it may in the booming and expanding territory, the law would be there to take care of it without further legislation being enacted.

Mr. GAMBLE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 8 minutes to the gentlewoman from Ohio [Mrs. FRANCES P. BOLTON].

Mrs. FRANCES P. BOLTON. Mr. Chairman, it had not been my intention to speak again on the housing matter, but it seems to me we need to go into some of the heart of the matter about which we are legislating, as well as into the various problems of mortgages and things of that kind.

We in the United States are very short of housing. Our babies are coming in very fast, and they grow amazingly rapidly, and in many of our large cities we have the unfortunate situation of exceedingly bad living conditions.

In my own city of Cleveland we have long had an area which we call the "central area" in which there are thousands of families living in truly shocking conditions. This is an area which has been used by one group, then by another, and then by another, so that, bit by bit, it has deteriorated to the extent that there is little plaster on the walls, little water in the pipes, and the resulting condition is exceedingly dangerous to health and morals.

We in Cleveland are very grateful to the Committee on Banking and Currency which under the able guidance of its distinguished chairman, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Wolcott], has brought this bill to the floor. We feel that he should have the strongest commendation from this committee for the thoroughness and the farsightedness with which H. R. 7839, which we are now considering, has been drafted.

It is exactly the program that will make it possible for the private citizens of Cleveland to go forward with a slum-clearance program which without some modest public housing, low-cost housing, could not be carried forward.

Eager to see a constructive program undertaken, a group of men and women have come forward, who are giving their services; with whom the city is cooperating. We now have opportunity to do away with a slum area which would be a disgrace to any city.

The project which is getting underway, which will take advantage of a $7-million bond issue recently overwhelmingly voted, is a $25 million project planned by the leaders of the community involved. This is a Negro community. Members of the community are pledging $500,000, of which one man alone is giving $100,000. When I talked with the group here he told me with a very radiant face: "Mrs. BOLTON, it is very different in our community now. A Negro can earn good money, he is respected in the community, and we want to fulfill our responsibility to the city of Cleveland, to our own group, and urge upon all of our community this project."

We are very proud that this development has taken place, for not a single dwelling has been built in that area in 34 years. You can perhaps imagine what the need is.

Among the outstanding leaders of the Negro and white communities are Mr. Alonzo G. Wright, a real estate investor and a hotel man; Wendell A. Falsgraf, attorney; H. J. Raymond, partner in Ernst & Ernst, accountants, and Guy C. Larcom, Jr., architect.

They are planning to utilize the 104 slum acres for apartment houses, for dwellings, for a proper center for the whole community, including a shopping center and a theater. They hope to make it the best center, the best locality in Cleveland.

By taking advantage of the FHA section 220 of this bill they expect they will need $2 million for equity capital, so they are raising that $2 million.

Mr. Chairman, this is one example of the advances that can be derived under President Eisenhower's housing program. His is a plan which will take us forward towards that dream of America which we all have: That children shall be born with healthy bodies and sound minds, that they shall be born into homes that are decent, into localities where there is room to breathe, to play and to laugh, where they will receive an education that fits them for the lives they will lead, that they may have work which will suit their capacities. Then at some time during their lives a little time to sit in the sun, a little time to meditate, and praise their God.

I am earnestly hoping, Mr. Chairman, that this bill will be passed pretty much as it is written, although I should welcome an amendment providing for 35,000 public housing units.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentlewoman from Ohio has expired.

(Mrs. FRANCES P. BOLTON asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. KELLY of New York. Mr. Chairman, today in the House of Representatives we are considering the Housing Act of 1954, a bill to aid in the provision and improvement of housing, the elimination and prevention of slums, and the conservation and development of urban communities. This bill, as reported, provides no public housing program, although an amendment will be offered to include a new public housing program.

It is evident from the confusion of the last few days that an attempt was made to scuttle the public housing program. If we are successful in adding a public housing program for 35,000 units of construction this year, it is to be remembered that this is a carryover authorization of the Democratic administration's program.

I want to pay tribute to my colleagues on both sides of the aisle who have endeavored to save and to continue a Federal housing program.

I feel compelled to raise my voice to deplore the action of the majority on the Independent Offices Appropriations Committee and those members of the Rules Committee who seek to destroy and to put an end to the very worthy Federal housing program. Both of these committees are controlled by a Republican majority.

I do not comprehend their lack of understanding of the need for decent housing for the low-income group, let alone their moral obligation to comply with previous authorizations to continue that which has already been planned.

The most important problems facing every metropolitan community in the country are those of housing and slum clearance. Large cities, especially New York City, have particular housing problems.

A recent study of all slums and blighted areas in the country showed they comprise one-fifth of our metropolitan areas. And into this one-fifth of our cities are packed one-third of the urban population, a good third or 35 percent of the fires, approximately 45 percent of the major crimes, about 55 percent of the juvenile delinquency, and 60 percent of the tuberculosis rate. In other words, slums account for 45 percent of city service costs, but they pay only 6 percent of its real-estate taxes.

I would support wholeheartedly any effort on the part of private industry to provide housing and slum clearance for the people of our Nation if private industry were willing and able to supply these needs. But since this cannot be achieved, the Federal Government must be permitted to continue its past authorization and provide for at least the new units in line with the recommendations of our President and the President's Advisory Committee on Government Housing Policies and Programs.

In a speech on the floor of the House, the ranking member of the Banking and Currency Committee, the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. SPENCE], stated:

How are you going to get rid of the slums except by Federal contribution? There is no way in the world to do it. It is said that we should put the slum-clearance matter back on the cities. But the cities cannot do it. I have represented 3 or 4 cities in my time. I know the limitations of the cities. They are creatures of the State. They are organized by the State, their charters are granted by the State, and they are limited in their activities under the State constitution.

The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. SPENCE] said that on June 24, 1949. His words are as true today as they were on that date. His statement certainly applies to New York City and to every city in the United States.

In the report of the President's Advisory Committee on Housing there is included a digest of the replies to a questionnaire sent out by one of its subcommittees. Credited with answering this questionnaire are Mr. Robert Moses, chairman, office of committee on slum clearance, New York City, and Mr. Charles S. Archer, of New York City.

In answering question 1 on the size of the slum elimination and slum-prevention problem, here is the reply given:

New York City: 1950 census rated more than 285,000 apartments, over 12 percent of the total, as badly substandard. Included in this figure were more than 100,000 apartments with no modern conveniences. The city-planning commission has designated 9,000 acres throughout the city as slum-clearance areas which would be proper for clearance and rehabilitation.

In answer to question 2 on slum elimination of urban development, the answer from New York City points out that urban redevelopment is a sound application of city-planning principles to slum elimination. In my own opinion, this plan, an experimental approach to low-income houses, would not help the people of Manhattan, the Bronx, or Brooklyn. Home ownership is too costly. Where, in the city, could one build a house for $7,600? I do hope that this section of the bill will be so successful to encourage private home ownership as the next step for proper environment for future and present Americans.

I feel these illustrations are sound evidence of the need for a continued Federal housing program. We spend more than 10 times as much in subsidy for highways, nearly 6 times as much for rivers and harbor work, more than twice as much to help out on the school-lunch program, and more than 1½ times as much for our few Indians.

I commend my colleagues, the gentlemen from New York [Mr. MULTER and Mr. DOLLINGER], members of the Banking and Currency Committee, for their efforts to save the Federal housing program. In a minority report is listed the disagreements with the majority on major aspects of the Housing Act of 1954. These include failure to authorize any units of low-rent public housing; failure to maintain traditional veterans' housing preferences; failure to provide a realistic workable secondary-mortgage market; delegation to the President of authority to set maximum interest rates on FHA and VA mortgages; delegation to the President of authority to control real-estate credit; failure to establish safeguards against "mortgaging-out" under the various FHA rental-housing programs; and failure to require builders of FHA and VA houses to give the home buyers a warranty against defective construction.

How has the past program affected the city of New York? It has been helpful but actually has only scratched the surface. On March 30, 1954, I received the following facts from the New York City Housing Authority:

Sixty-nine thousand nine hundred and seventy-one is number of units now occupied, of which 23,261 were contributed to by the Federal Government.

One hundred and three thousand seven hundred and fifty-three is total approved program—built, or in construction, or approved.

Completed construction, prewar, 12,971.

Federal Government contribution, postwar, 6,709.

Eight thousand six hundred and thirteen under construction and partially occupied.

Five thousand nine hundred and sixty-seven under construction but not yet occupied.

Four thousand eight hundred and twenty-six awaiting construction.

For all the above, the property has been acquired by the city of New York.

Nine hundred forty-four million two hundred ninety-six thousand three hundred and seventy-four dollars is cost of projects built or under construction.

Three hundred fifty-five million eight hundred sixty-two thousand four hundred and twenty dollars represents the total development costs of projects in which the Federal Government is interested. New York City sells bonds on which the Federal Government guarantees to pay subsidies not exceeding 4½ percent annually.

One million nine hundred fifty-nine thousand five hundred dollars and sixty-two cents is the amount paid by the Federal Government—during the last accounting year—in subsidies on projects in New York.

At this point, I think it of interest to note—and I do so at the risk of being classed overbearing—New York City alone contributed over $10 billion in internal revenue. This is twice the amount contributed in internal revenue by any State in the Union.

How much will slum clearance cost? There is no idea of the complete problem. Two hundred twenty-seven million nine hundred fifty-seven thousand dollars is the estimated cost of projects in the planning stage on which $61,382,000 worth of bonds will be guaranteed by the Federal Government. Nine hundred forty-four million two hundred ninety-six thousand three hundred and seventy-four dollars represents the cost of projects built or under construction since the inception of the Federal housing program.

The city of New York contributes directly without any Federal contribution, all of the parks, street improvements, tax waivers, and so forth, that are necessary to complete these projects.

What has actually been accomplished in New York City is small in comparison to the overall need. It must be a long-range plan. For the Federal Government to falter or to bring an end to the Federal housing program will certainly not strengthen our democracy.

I urge all Members to reconsider this vast city problem and to assume their responsibility to help not only this great metropolis but all other areas where public housing is needed.

Mrs. SULLIVAN. Mr. Chairman, when the appropriations bill section, which had as its effect the killing of public housing after those projects in the contract stage are constructed, came up on Tuesday, I think I made it clear to the House how I felt about the needs of our people for decent homes at prices they can afford. The complacency of the Republican majority in the House in connection with that provision has also made it clear that we cannot expect any sympathy here for the people eligible for public housing, regardless of what a Republican President may propose as a half-hearted attempt at a solution of their problem.

There is probably little to be gained in extensive discussion here on the House floor with so many minds completely closed to the issue—with so many powerful leaders of the majority party clearly presenting themselves as foes of public housing. We can only hope that the Senate may again come to the rescue and provide at least some semblance of a continued public housing program.

I shall, of course, support the Democratic members of the Banking and Currency Committee in their amendments to restore a public housing program in this bill and to improve, in other ways, the unduly restrictive features of other parts of this measure. But it is indeed disappointing and, as I said Tuesday, heartbreaking, to see such little concern as the House has been demonstrating in the plight of the average and lower-income families in getting into housing where they can raise children who can have a fair chance at life, whose lives are not scarred by the deplorable conditions of slum environments, whose outlook is not made cynical by the family's hard and difficult struggle in finding and affording a real home.

WE ARE DEALING WITH PEOPLE, NOT STATISTICS

The President said some time ago that when it came to economics he was on the conservative side, but when it came to people he liked to be on the liberal side. That sounds well and good and no doubt represents his opinion of his own views.

This housing bill, however, represents to me an excessive attention to the economics of mortgage banking, whereas in truth and in fact a successful housing program should be and must be one which is geared to human values—to people. Interest rate statistics may make fascinating reading to bankers, but we have to look behind the figures to see their effect on the people who are precluded by high carrying charges from buying a home. We have to look at the effect on families which cannot afford decent rental housing because of the high rents which in turn may reflect high interest rates on mortgages.

I am amazed, Mr. Chairman, at the idea which has been proposed here as a solution to the lower income housing problem of $7,600 or $8,600 homes to be sold to families now living in slums. Whether the houses could be built in a place like St. Louis is very doubtful to begin with. But what families presently eligible for public housing could afford even that housing, even on a 40-year mortgage with no downpayment? And where would they ever get the $200 in cash required for settlement costs?

This idea is a will-o'-the-wisp solution to slums. It may work in some communities where building costs are very low. It would be a good investment perhaps for the mortgageholders who could cash in their mortgage after 20 years and thus be sure of not losing on the deal. But for the average city where slums are widespread and the need for decent housing for low-income groups is acute, this is a paper idea which can build only paper houses.

IS THIS THE BEST OUR BEST BRAINS CAN CONCEIVE?

What is needed in solving the housing problems of our citizens, Mr. Chairman, is not some piecemeal patches on the present housing laws—which have generally worked well up to now—but some bold and imaginative thinking designed to speed up the slow but steady progress we have made in the past 20 years to eradicate slums and improve housing conditions.

The Housing and Home Finance Agency has closed out completely its housing research program, so we can look for nothing there as a step toward reducing housing costs and getting the public more housing per dollar. The administration, which promised in the 1952 campaign to enlist the best brains in America into government, appointed a part-time study commission which recommended very little of value to anyone except the lenders. The home building industry is not at all pleased with this bill. Who is?

I think the bill is a confession of complacency and futility. I say once more, we need some boldness and imagination in solving our housing problems.

The CHAIRMAN. All time has expired. Under the rule, the Clerk will report the committee substitute amendment as an original bill for the purpose of amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That this act may be cited as the "Housing Act of 1954."

TITLE I—FEDERAL HOUSING ADMINISTRATION
Amendments of title I of National Housing Act

SEC. 101. Section (b) of the National Housing Act as amended, is hereby amended—

Mr. BROWNSON. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. BROWNSON:

On page 109, line 20, after "per centum of", strike out "$8,000" and insert "$10,000."

On page 125, line 15, after "per centum of", strike out "$8,000" and insert "$10,000."

On page 125, line 17, after "in excess of", strike out "$8,000" and insert "$10,000."

(Mr. BROWNSON asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BROWNSON. Mr. Chairman, the effect of this amendment is to place in the bill a more realistic schedule of required downpayments on houses sold with the aid of an FHA-insured loan.

Throughout the country it is increasingly evident that prospective home buyers, well able to afford new homes on their monthly income, simply do not have the downpayments now required or even that which would be required under this bill. I can think of one particular case in my district that typifies this situation. A man with four children who has been an outstanding newscaster and radio announcer, was in a position where he had to move from a rented home that he had lived in for years and found himself unable to raise the downpayment necessary in order to house his family adequately. This is despite his employment at a fairly high level in a well-paid profession. I have been informed, for example, that 90 percent of all new housing in the Washington area is sold under VA financing rather than FHA because it affords a lower downpayment. I think it is amazingly common throughout our country that people do not have the downpayment required, although experience under the GI loans has shown that they do have the income required to keep up their payments.

My purpose in offering this amendment is to bring the downpayment schedule under section 203 of the National Housing Act in line with the value of today's dollar. The present statutory limits have not been substantially amended in 10 years. Although values and consumer incomes have doubled, the downpayment now required on a $12,000 house is 4 to 5 times the dollar amount required on the same or equivalent house of 10 years ago. Then a $6,000 house could be purchased with a downpayment of $600; today the same house would sell for somewhere between $12,000 and $15,000, and would require a downpayment of from $2,400 to $3,000.

With the inflation of home prices, the average man with 2 or 3 children must pay at least $10,000, and often as much as $12,000 to $15,000, for suitable housing for his family. The experience of the building industry has been that the average family man cannot raise more than $1,000 to meet his downpayment and settlement charges combined.

The bill before the Committee adjusts the schedule down somewhat but not enough to solve the problems caused by the inflated home prices. The Housing and Home Finance Administrator, Albert M. Cole, is quoted, on page 41 of the hearings, as follows:

I want to emphasize that these, as well as the similar adjustments in the maximum amounts for other FHA programs, would represent the statutory maxima which would not automatically go into effect upon the enactment of the bill. The authority to establish the actual terms under which the FHA would operate would be vested in the President. It is contemplated that, if the Congress enacts these proposals, the President would, when he approves the legislation, put into effect a new scale of maximum mortgage-loan amounts employing the new simplified formula, but establishing the amounts below the various maxima permitted by the bill.

It then follows that, if any real liberalization of downpayments is to be realized, the amounts must be lifted in the bill to allow a sufficient increase in the President's area of discretion to provide for some substantial decrease in the downpayments required by the new schedules. Certainly the discretionary powers in the bill should be broad enough to meet the needs of the people. This amendment will do that.

It is also interesting to note that this new bill in some specific cases actually raises the downpayments required by eliminating section 203 (b) (2) (D) of the present law. Under the present law, in certain circumstances, the downpayment provisions under that section provides a downpayment of $500 for a $10,000 home of 4-bedroom size. The bill would raise the downpayment of all $10,000 homes to $900, thereby increasing by 80 percent the downpayment of these special category homes. My amendment seeks to establish a $500 downpayment for all $10,000 homes without restriction.

The maximum effect of my amendment would come on houses in the $10,000 class where it results in a reduction of $400 in the downpayment below the figure required in the bill now before us. I will ask permission of the House to insert at this point a table showing the downpayment schedules in the law, the bill, and my amendment.

I can appreciate the many hours of hard work the Banking and Currency Committee has spent perfecting the many improvements this bill seeks to write into law, but I submit that we must be realistic about the price of real estate today in considering this legislation.

I cannot help but feel that the goal of this is to put the greatest number of people possible into the best housing possible.

The adoption of this amendment, concerning which most of you have received telegrams from your local home builders, will mean the difference between the factory worker and the lower-paid white-collar worker owning his own home or paying rent for the rest of his life.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I had the same amendment to propose to the committee and I am very glad that my colleague has proposed it and has already made an explanation of it. I think, if my colleague will agree, there are a few things which should be added in order to buttress the case for this amendment, which I think is a very strong one.

We are relying upon the home building industry to build very much more than it did before. I call the attention of the committee to the statement of the witness, R. G. Hughes, president of the National Association of Home Builders, at page 597 of the record where he says:

Given the assistance which this bill provides with the amendments outlined in principle on the following pages, etc., we believe the home building industry can provide an average of 2 million new or new conditioned homes each year through a combination of increased production of new homes and the rehabilitation of structurally sound existing homes.

Mr. Chairman, I submit that it is our desire to hold the home builders to this assurance and we should give them what they have asked of the legislative committee so that they can do the job which we and the country want them to do.

It seems to me that we would be arguing about very little—a $400 reduction in downpayments for houses worth over $8,000—if we offered them a reason why they could claim they could not meet the goal of new housing starts which we are very anxious that they should meet.

One other point upon this particular amendment. Mr. Chairman, it is a fact that home buying today is very heavily in the hands of veterans who, in the main, need to make no downpayments at all under the Federal mortgage guaranty system. Yet, it is very much outside the hands of those who are not veterans. For example, in the Levitt organization, to which Mr. BROWNSON referred and from which I have ascertained these figures, 99 percent of all their sales—and theirs is considered a very representative buy in housing—99 percent of their sales are to veterans. There are 20 million veterans in the country, but there are over 60 million citizens who are gainfully employed. We are shutting out the market, very substantially then to two-thirds of our people, unless we bring these downpayments down. Certainly we want to do whatever we can to encourage home ownership.

Finally, Mr. Chairman, the optimum house in our country now is the $12,000 house. Ten years ago the optimum house was the $6,000 house. But the downpayments do not bear the same relationship to the new price of the same house as—in view of the rate of increase in the consumers' income—they did 10 years ago. Consumer incomes have doubled over 10 years ago and what they are now. Yet the downpayment on an FHA-mortgaged house under the law today and as it will be when we pass this bill, unless the discretion to set mortgage amount limits now in the bill is eliminated, is 4 or 5 times what it was 10 years ago.

Under the amendment offered by my colleague from Indiana we will bring the downpayment in focus, because we will make it double what it was 10 years ago, which is just exactly the right relationship to the incomes of the people who are buying the homes.

I think this is an extremely desirable amendment. It will help us accomplish our purpose, to put this enormous assistance into the economy and hold the home builders to their assurance that they can build the homes if we give them the tools. This is certainly a very modest kind of amendment to make upon their representation that this will give them a tool which they urgently need.

Mr. Chairman, I hope the committee will vote the amendment into the bill.

Mr. HAYS of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, because of the rush to get this bill passed and because the amendment I propose comes at the end of the bill I want to explain my amendment at this time.

Mr. Chairman, the provision in this bill for public-works planning is so puny and undernourished it is pitiful.

I apologize for even entertaining the thought and I am sure it is unfair to voice it out loud because it cannot possibly be true, but I keep thinking in the face of a proposal like the present one in this bill for advance planning—and in the face of a lot of other things going on in this administration—that the President's advisers are acting as if they expected a couple of hydrogen bombs to wipe out the world any day now. If we are all going to be atomized or hydrogenated and the planet is going to disappear, why it does not make any sense to be worrying about unemployment or the people's housing needs, or businesses going broke or people going jobless and hungry. In that case we should all be in church and stay there. But of course we are not planning on having the world end this week or next, or even in the 1955 fiscal year, and so we should pay some attention to what is going on in this country in our economy. For instance, we have this mounting unemployment which gets worse by the day—and nothing is done about it. Nothing.

WHICH MARCH DID THE PRESIDENT MEAN—THIS YEAR OR SOME OTHER?

March was to be the key month in the administration's planning—the month to tell whether we get serious about fighting recession or keep on playing tiddly-winks. But virtually every one of the 149 major labor-market areas in the country—virtually every one—had adversely affected employment conditions between mid-January and mid-March, according to the Government's own Bureau of Employment Security. We now have 34 major labor-market areas in the distress category, with substantial labor surpluses—that is fancy language for big unemployment—with 14 of them added in recent weeks. Let me repeat some of the areas newly added to this distress list: Charleston, W. Va.; Portland, Oreg.; Chattanooga, Tenn.; the Duluth, Minn.-Superior, Wis., area; the Huntington, W. Va.-Ashland, Ky., area; Paterson, N. J.; Racine, Wis.; San Antonio, Tex.; the Wheeling, W. Va.-Steubenville, Ohio, area, part of it in my congressional district; Detroit, Mich.; Battle Creek, Mich.; Toledo, Ohio; South Bend, Ind.; and the farm-equipment center of Davenport-Rock Island-Moline in Iowa and Illinois. In addition, 12 smaller labor-market areas were added to the list. Hartford, Conn., which had been the only area of tight labor supply in the country, is no longer that tight—it has a balanced labor supply. And moving from balanced to a moderate surplus classification were such places as Akron, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Columbus, Youngstown, and the Lorain-Elyria area of Ohio; San Diego; Bridgeport, Stamford, Norwalk, and Waterbury, Conn.; Miami; Macon, Ga.; Aurora and Rockford, Ill.; Lansing and Saginaw, Mich.; Omaha; Buffalo and Syracuse, N. Y.; Charlotte, N. C.; Allentown and Bethlehem, Pa.; Aiken, S. C., and Augusta, Ga.; and Houston, Tex.

In the face of that situation, the administration comes in here with a pitiful proposal for $10 million in advances to local and State agencies for public works advance planning—and then, to boot, makes Federal agencies also eligible to draw on this measly fund. The committee majority says this could finance the planning of construction to a total value of $660 million which is a drop in the bucket to what would be needed in the way of ready projects if we really went in for public works.

My amendment doubles this figure. It also provides $10 million instead of the $5 million proposed for technical aid to the smaller communities under 25,000 population in drafting their plans.

I say this, Mr. Chairman: If we are serious about having the weapons to fight recession, then let us provide them. Let us be ready rather than sorry. We are offering to spend pennies, that is all, to do a monumentally big job. Let us stop kidding ourselves.

BUSINESS FAILURES SOARING

In this connection, I have some more gloomy but not necessarily doomy statistics to give the House, Mr. Chairman. I have over a period of time taken it upon myself to keep the House advised of the mounting mortality rate for small businesses as reflected in the weekly reports on business failures.

The last figure, for the week ended last Thursday, was a hefty 277—the highest weekly figure in years, up about 14 percent from the previous week's 243. A year ago it was 188. So it is running 47 percent ahead of last year.

Now let us not call this a depression, because it is not. It is just a bad kick-in-the-teeth economically to a lot of people in this country who had the good American get-up-and-go to go into business for themselves, and now they are losing their shirts and are right in the wringer with their shirts. But it is not a depression.

When we talk about depressions, we mean not 277 business failures a week but more like 650 or 700, which was the average back in 1932. So we still have some heavy going-broke statistics to compile before we can call it a depression. We all hope to high heaven, and I say this sincerely, that we do not see another national calamity like that in the United States, but believe me, unless we take some prompt and decisive action, we are headed right down that catastrophic path.

WORST MONTH IN 12 YEARS

The figures on business failures for the entire month of March are not in yet—they will probably be out in a day or so—but I think I can safely predict on the basis of reports made so far that the March total will go over 1,000 for the first time since March 1942, and for only the second time since May 1941. Never in the worst months of the 1949-50 downturn did any month show as many as 900 business failures. But we exceeded 900 in February of this year and March, as I said, will probably go over 1,000.

So far during March, the Dun and Bradstreet reports week by week have shown a total of 972, taking it only to March 25. So at the rate we have been going, it is almost certain to exceed 1,000. Let me point out that if we experience a business mortality rate like that for 12 months, we will be matching, or coming close to matching, the top yearly figures all the way back to 1934.

But that is still not a depression—in the Hoover regime businesses were going broke and bankrupt at a rate of 28,000 and 30,000 or more a year, and then they were not even counting in all of the types of business failures that have been included in the statistics since 1939—that is, voluntary discontinuances with loss to creditors.

The March 1942 figure I mentioned—which was the last time before this month that we had as many as 1,000 in 1 month—a lot of businesses had to quit overnight either because of materials shortages, limitation orders, or the drafting or enlistment of their owners. None of these factors enter into the record for March 1954.

One last word, Mr. Chairman. The President said, at his news conference last week, that we are not in serious enough economic trouble to warrant the use of slambang measures to combat it. I do not know exactly what he means by "slambang," but I take it he means any real action.

Well, Mr. Chairman, if we are not deep enough yet in the hot water to have slambang, how about at least some "pitty-patty" to fight recession? How about something?

Let us start with doubling this pitiful little figure of $10 million for public-works planning, as I propose in this amendment. Let us provide funds to plan not just for $600 million worth of public works but for a more realistic figure of $1,500,000,000. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. KELLEY] has introduced a popular bill on which a number of other Members are cosponsors for a $6½ billion Federal-local public-works program. Pending action on that, let us at least start the wheels moving on some up-to-date engineering designs on needed projects, so that they can be thrown into construction immediately whenever any funds for that purpose should become available.

This is not slambang. But it is not, either, snooze and snore. We have had too much snooze and snore in the administration and Congress over the unemployment problem. And the payoff came Wednesday when the House voted to cut the President's Council of Economic Advisers—the agency which is supposed to keep its pulse on the economy and suggest measures to assure full employment.

What we are getting is full unemployment. And every day it gets fuller.

Mr. MERRILL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HAYS of Ohio. I yield.

Mr. MERRILL. Does not the gentleman realize that the school program similar to the defense impacted area program is a matter for local planning, and right now so far as the school program is concerned, the local governments have plans ready for that program. Does not the gentleman realize that this is not the exclusive planning agency for the public-works program, and that engineers would be planning many of the major public-works programs and that the highways would not be planned under this section. This is not an exclusive program.

Mr. HAYS of Ohio. I realize that, but I would like to point out to the gentleman that in many instances and in many States under State law, let us take the schools first specifically, you cannot draw up your blueprints and hire your architects and get your design ready until you have the money. In many cases, you cannot have the money until your bond issue is voted. But, under this very program, and it has happened many times in the past, a school district is unable to get its plans ready so that if there is a public-works program inaugurated in which the Federal government would participate, they can go to the polls and pass their bond issue and be ready to go the minute the bond issue is passed. That is exactly what I am endeavoring to do by increasing this amount in the amendment I will offer.

Mr. JONES of Alabama. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

(Mr. JONES of Alabama asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. JONES of Alabama. Mr. Chairman, I want to direct the attention of the committee to section 904 which provides for the continuation of the rural housing provision as contained in the act of 1949. The general provisions of that section, I think, are well known. Certainly, they have been well received by the farm people throughout the country. In my own State every year the funds allocated for the rural housing program have been pledged or exhausted within 60 days. It has been a remarkable program, Mr. Chairman, and I am sure that every Member who participated in the support of the rural housing provisions applauds the accomplishments made under the terms of that act. There have been 19,082 farm families to obtain loans for the improvement of their rural homes and appurtenances belong to the farm. When the Congress established a rural housing program we took into account that we already had an existing agency, the Farmers Home Administration. We did not create a new agency to administer the program. The Farmers' Home Administration operates in every county in the United States and each county FHA has a group of local farmers on their committee who determine whether the individual applicant for a farm housing loan could qualify. They took into account the farmers ability to repay and his ability to carry out sound farming practices.

The administration of this program on the local level has insured its success. In view of the fact that the housing act expires this year, I was apprehensive for a while since the budget failed to make a request for funds for rural housing. There has been no statement forthcoming from the administration as to whether it intended to pursue the rural housing program, but I was somewhat consoled by the statement of the Secretary of Agriculture in an address at Tuskegee, Ala., where he stated that this program would be continued. I am delighted to see that there will not be any neglect.

I understand there has been some slowdown in making these loans available. As I recall, we have on hand now approximately $3 million. I hope that those funds that are now being held will be put to use to carry out the rural housing program. It has been a wise policy for the Government to continue to give farm people the same opportunities as urban families to have better homes, to create a better way of life, and to increase their economic standards.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Alabama has expired.

Mr. JONES of Alabama. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 3 additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, we have been importuned to finish this bill today. Although I do not feel constrained to object to a continuance, after all the gentleman is talking out of order, and I think I shall have to object to it later on.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

Mr. JONES of Alabama. Mr. Chairman, the original act authorized appropriations of $275 million for farm housing purposes. Only about a third of this amount was actually made available. The general curtailment of nondefense Government expenditures associated with the Korean campaign, as well as certain building-material shortages that existed in past years, are the principal reasons why the farm housing program did not reach its anticipated volume. The amount available for the 1954 fiscal year was $19 million. The demand for these loans was so great that almost all of the funds were committed within 6 months. The Farmers' Home Administration has received thousands of applications that now are unsatisfied because the farm housing funds were exhausted at such an early date.

Nearly 19,082 farm families as I pointed out earlier, have benefited from the $94,356,000 of farm housing funds that have been made available. With these funds they built or repaired over 16,000 farm homes, almost 14,000 farm service buildings, and 7,200 water systems. In my home State of Alabama, 724 families have received farm housing loans to build new and modern homes and 208 additional families repaired and modernized their homes. In addition, 368 farm service buildings and 623 water systems have been financed with farm housing funds. Through December 31, 1953, $5,509,475 had been loaned to Alabama farmers for these purposes.

This is a mere beginning in solving the problems of substandard housing on our Alabama farms but it does demonstrate the effectiveness of the farm housing loan authorities in meeting a critical need of farm families for construction credit.

That Alabama farmers want better housing is shown by the fact that the demand for these loans was so great during the past year that 80 percent of the funds allotted to Alabama were obligated within 2 months.

The cost of these new homes has been exceptionally low. To a person accustomed to the price of city homes, it seems almost unbelievable that farm families should be able to build good, substantial homes at an average cash outlay of less than $6,500. While these homes are modest in design, they do meet all the generally accepted requirements of decent, safe, and sanitary living.

Low cash cost, when compared with similar urban homes, results from a number of reasons. One is the fact that there is no land cost involved. Another is that the borrower and his family ordinarily are able to contribute a substantial amount of labor, and a third is that in many cases borrowers have been able to utilize such materials as timber, sand, gravel, or stone from their own farms or else obtain such materials from local sources at a low cost.

Low cost, however, does not mean low quality. Each of these homes is required to meet the construction standards of the Farmers' Home Administration. These standards protect the borrower against faulty construction and the Government against an unsound investment. The standards are flexible enough to permit a farmer to use his skills and ingenuity to build at minimum cost the kind of a home of which he and his family are justifiably proud.

In addition to providing financing for farm homes the farm housing program offers farm families an opportunity to build or improve service buildings needed to put their farms on a paying basis and to operate them more efficiently.

A fourth of the farm housing funds have been used for purposes such as building dairy barns and milking parlors, general purpose barns, poultry houses, and for installing water systems. While this has not been the largest field of activity of the housing program, it has been a highly significant one. Through it some farmers have been able to put their units on a paying basis; others have been able to make necessary changes in their farm buildings to meet the changing requirements of our present-day agriculture; and others have needed to change their building facilities to use more efficiently their family labor and their land.

The nature of the farming business—one in which the family home and income-producing activities are inseparably joined makes this authority an important phase of our farm-housing program.

The level of living of farm families depends upon the productivity of their farm. When through the addition or modernization of farm-service buildings farm families of moderate means, such as the ones to whom farm-housing loans are made, are able to increase their income, they are better able to pay the cost of a decent home.

These housing loans to farm families who are unable to obtain their credit from the usual sources are sound investments. During the 4 years that the farm-housing program has been in operation, borrowers have established a commendable repayment record. As of January 31 of this year, less than 5 percent of the borrowers had not paid in full the amounts that had become due on their loans. Approximately one-third had paid more than was due.

I am particularly proud of the repayment record established by the borrowers in Alabama. Of the almost 1,000 farm-housing borrowers who had payments due at the end of 1953, less than 1 percent had not paid the full amount due on their loan by January 31, 1953. These few are the families who did not have sufficient resources to meet the credit requirements of conventional lenders for a construction loan. However, as soon as they make sufficient financial progress to qualify for a loan from another source they will be required to refinance their Government loans with private or cooperative lending institutions. They only need adequate credit on reasonable terms and an opportunity to prove that they are good credit risks. When the construction work is finished and the loans become seasoned, private credit agencies can and will carry the remaining debt.

The farm housing program is not in competition with private and cooperative credit, but rather it is an integral part of our total credit system that will enable farm families to have homes comparable to those enjoyed by city residents. I think we will all agree that a high percentage of our city families are well housed today because they have been aided in their home purchase or improvement through Government financed, insured, or guaranteed programs.

I take considerable pride in the fact that it was an Alabama World War II veteran who received the first farm housing loan made under the Housing Act of 1949. I wish all of you could have seen the transformation that took place on his farm when the ramshackle and dilapidated house that was too worn out to repair was replaced by a modern six-room home complete with running water, bath, and up-to-date kitchen.

Both the appearance of the farmstead and the efficiency of the farming operations were further improved by the addition of a new barn and the installation of a pressure water system.

All this was done with a $4,300 farm housing loan coupled with careful planning to use most advantageously the materials that could be salvaged from the worn-out buildings that were replaced.

I mention this first farm housing loan because it is both a typical example of the shocking condition of many of our farm homes and a dramatic demonstration of how such a condition can be remedied by a soundly conceived and efficiently administered farm housing program.

Although the inadequacy of farm homes has been less conspicuous and perhaps less publicized than the slums in the cities, a far greater percentage of our farm families are living in substandard houses than is true of urban families. Nationwide 1 out of every 5 farm families is living in a house that is so dilapidated that it either needs to be replaced or else needs major repairs. In Alabama only 1 farm family out of 12 has the commonly accepted convenience of a private toilet, bath and hot running water. One out of 4 families live in homes having less than 4 rooms. A high percentage of Alabama farm homes are not only inadequate, but 1 out of every 3 needs major repairs or needs to be replaced.

The economic and social problems associated with inadequate housing on a fifth of our Nation's farms are too great to be brushed aside. The idea that privation and hardship necessarily are a part of farm life was commonly accepted during the years when our country was being settled, but today farm families want, and I believe they are entitled to it, the same conveniences that city people enjoy.

Farm families for one reason or another frequently have deferred home improvements until they had paid for their farms. The idea has prevailed among both farmers and lenders that the house was something to be improved out of savings and that it wasn't prudent for the farmer to borrow to give his family a decent home. This postponement of home improvements frequently extended beyond the years of greatest family need—the years when the children were at home. Particularly during these years, the household duties of farm wives meant hard labor and drudgery without such commonly accepted conveniences as electricity, running water, and efficiently designed and equipped kitchens.

This postponement of home improvements was largely because of economic necessity and not by choice. All too frequently farm families never did accumulate enough money to build a decent home. The possibilities of obtaining a long-time amortized loan to build a new home were exceedingly scarce; consequently, many of these families were forced to patch and continue to live in rundown and inadequate homes.

Today, farm families no longer accept the notion that because they chose farming as a way of life they need to live in homes that are inconvenient and inadequate. To the extent that private and cooperative credit sources can meet the building credit needs of farm families they should be encouraged to do so. Government loan guaranties and insurance have encouraged private capital to finance improved housing for our city families on a substantial scale. When private credit was not available direct Government loans have been provided. What farm families want and need is a like opportunity to finance farm building improvements.

The farm housing section of the Housing Act of 1949 gives this opportunity to the farm families who cannot obtain their financing from private or cooperative sources. The limited funds that have been made available under this act have proved its effectiveness in helping farm families in modest means improve their homes. We need to extend these authorities. They are an essential part of our national housing program which has as its objective the progressive improvements of our housing standards with the eventual realization of a decent home and suitable living environment for every American family.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Alabama has again expired.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment and all amendments thereto close in 5 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, a reference to the schedules on page 4 of the report will indicate what would happen should we increase this 95 percent insurance formula from an $8,000 maximum to a $10,000 maximum. It will mean that we will have to be governed accordingly in the scale all the way from $8,000 up to $24,000. We do not know where that would bring us because we have not had a chance to figure it out.

Let me comment upon the fact that the President's Advisory Committee on Government Housing Policies and Programs, set up last year, worked days on this problem of creating a well-adjusted program safe for the Government and, of course, there is a contingent liability in all of this insurance which they tried to reconcile with the desire to do the very best that could be done for the home purchaser.

At the present time it would make this difference: Under existing law—and I might say that under existing law and it has been traditional for a good many years—10 percent downpayment was considered the fair and equitable safe equity which the person who purchased a home should have in the home. With this equity he had an interest in it, he had an investment in that home. So, under existing law, on one of these $10,000 units the homeowner would have to put up a downpayment of $1,250. We have reduced that in this bill by over $300 to $900. So if this amendment is adopted as written, the purchaser of a $10,000 home would have to put up only $500.

I think we should be very reasonable in these respects but we should not provide that the Government take virtually all the risk. The Government cannot afford to create unnecessarily a burdensome and inequitable contingent liability.

The language of the bill as opposed to the amendment is in compliance with the recommendation made to the President by this Advisory Committee. It is the program which is submitted to us by the President himself. It is the program which the Banking and Currency Committee after 3 weeks of debate agreed upon as being the correct one.

The amendment should be defeated.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BROWNSON].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. JAVITS) there were—ayes 62, noes 64.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. Chairman, I demand tellers.

Tellers were ordered, and the Chairman appointed as tellers Mr. WOLCOTT and Mr. BROWNSON.

The Committee again divided; and the tellers reported that there were—ayes 102, noes 93.

So the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, this was the first amendment to this housing bill. When I say "housing," I quote it, and have some reservation as to whether or not it is a housing bill, containing some 226 pages of which 119 pages are new matter, about which we are about to offer some amendments.

Mr. Chairman, this housing bill can very easily be made a housing bill that will produce housing. We know that the building industry in this country can be the backbone of our economy, as it has been. When the building industry of the country is flourishing, all of the trades of the country flourish; skilled and unskilled labor is working; the material and supply men are preparing materials and selling them, appliances are manufactured and sold. So, I say that this housing bill can very easily do a very good job for the economy of the country and continue its prosperity, provided the bill is improved so as to accelerate the housing program, to provide more money for the homeowner so he can buy the house and to produce the home that he can afford to buy or rent as the case may be. As the bill is presented to us now, it will do none of those things, and I do trust that as the amendments are offered from time to time they will have the consideration of the House and we will eventually get a good housing bill from this House that will produce some housing.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MULTER: On page 110, strike out lines 1 to 9, inclusive, the words beginning with "And provided further" to and including "maximum amount."

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Chairman, the language I seek to strike out on page 110 is part of section 104 of the act and appears in somewhat identical language in six other places in the bill.

May I ask unanimous consent that we consider the amendments at all of those places either now or at a later time when those pages are read, whichever would be the proper procedure? If the language is the same, the arguments necessarily would be the same and they should be considered together.

The CHAIRMAN. If the gentleman submits a unanimous-consent request to that effect the Chair, of course, will put it.

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that we may now consider this amendment, together with similar amendments, which I shall send to the desk, addressed to pages 117, 120, 125, 127, and 150. I ask that they all be considered together.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York [Mr. MULTER]?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I should be constrained to object, because we have not learned yet what this is about and we do not want to complicate the situation any further.

The CHAIRMAN. Objection is heard. The gentleman from New York [Mr. MULTER] is recognized.

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Chairman, the language that is sought to be stricken from the bill by this amendment reads as follows. It is at page 110, section 104. It is an amendment to title II of the National Housing Act. It appears at lines 1 to 9 and reads as follows:

And provided further, That such mortgage shall not involve a principal obligation exceeding the maximum amount prescribed by the provisions of this section 203 in effect prior to the effective date of the Housing Act of 1954, unless the President, pursuant to section 201 of the Housing Act of 1954 has authorized a greater maximum amount, in which event such principal obligation shall not exceed such greater maximum amount.

If any of you ladies or gentleman who are not members of the Committee on Banking and Currency are wondering what that language means, let me assure you that we, on the committee, also had much difficulty trying to unravel it. I think it took some of us 3 weeks to find out what that complicated language meant.

You have been told that this bill is going to increase the maximum amount of mortgages; it is going to increase interest rates; it is going to increase maturity dates; and it is going to do a lot of other things. But nobody has taken the time or the trouble to tell you that this complicated language that I just read, which appears in seven different places in this bill, means just this: That from here on, if you pass this bill, the President is to have full control of all the credit involving real estate. I doubt whether that is a good thing to do. I do not impugn the motives or the good faith of our President. I think he intends to do as good a job as he is capable of performing and that he is going to do it in the best interest of the country as he sees it.

Let us see what this does. But do not take it from me. Take it from a gentleman whom I highly respect and I am sure you highly respect as a man who knows finances, who knows banking and currency and banking and currency committee work. And he knows about credits.

I read from page 11761 of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of August 3, 1950:

During the Second World War no one was given authority to control real estate credit. It was not considered necessary, because through allocations and priorities, through the fact that it was impossible to set ceilings on presently existing real estate, no one could suggest language which would do the job which it was wanted to have done.

This complicated language apparently is being used or sought to be used to do it now. I continue to read from the same page:

What it does—referring to real estate credit—is to confine the control of credit to new construction, and the substantial remodeling of existing property or the repair of existing properties.

Then again in the debate on the same bill, a little later, on August 9, 1950, at page 12131 I quote the same gentleman:

Mr. Chairman, this is the 3rd attempt which has been made in 15 years to control the life blood of the American economy, to control all credit. It is traditional that when anyone seeks to control the life blood of the American economy—credit—we repudiate it, that we not give it to those who seek it. During World War II we confined ourselves to the control of consumer credit. The authority to control consumer credit should remain in this bill—

Meaning the bill they were then talking about.

Then he says:

Now, for the preservation of the American system, for the preservation of the free American enterprise system, for the preservation of the American way of life, this amendment should be adopted.

That was the amendment to eliminate control of credits.

Every word the very distinguished gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WOLCOTT], the chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency, said in 1950 applies with equal force to any attempt today to give anyone in Government control over credits. I seek by this amendment to strike out of the bill any attempt to give the President control over real estate credit. I think it is wrong. It should not be done. We can set standards in this bill, good standards, proper standards within which to keep our real estate credit. Let us not give away the right to legislate for all time on credit controls to any one person in Government. Do not let them tell you that this is like the bill we tried to pass in 1953. That was to give the President standby controls during an emergency. The President said he did not want them during an emergency. You agreed with him then. He should not ask for it in this permanent legislation.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I believe this is perhaps as good a place as any to bring this to an issue, to find out what we might do in respect to the other similar provisions of the bill.

It is true that there is a certain amount of flexibility in this program, but there is, nothing to the contrary notwithstanding, no regulation X in this program. I am not going to take the time to answer the charges made in the minority views in that respect because it is not important enough, but I want to point out that this bill is designed to fit housing into the American economy. If we had had this flexibility in the veterans' program last year or the year before that, there would not have been any stymieing of the veterans' program. We all recall that for a year previous to the exercise of judgment by the Secretary of the Treasury and the Veterans' Administrator last year the Veterans' Administration program of housing guaranty was at a standstill and veterans could not get financing of homes under the GI bill of rights.

This amendment directed at removing flexibility is likely to draft into this bill the same conditions which could cause a similar stymieing not only of the GI program in respect to housing but the FHA program in respect to housing, nothing to the contrary notwithstanding.

It is amazing to me that some of those who in recent weeks have decried the fact that we are having a recession, not a rolling adjustment, that they contend might lead to a depression, would deny the President of the United States the facilities to prevent this. I cannot understand them. But we, who have some responsibility for the economic stability of the country as well as the housing program, can see the desirability of tying all of these programs into the economic situation, so whether it comes 1 month from now or whether it comes a year or 5 years from now the tools will be available not only to prevent a recession but to prevent new inflationary trends should they occur.

This program is designed to do that. That part of it was commented upon favorably by the Council of Economic Advisers, and approved by the President. It was in substance approved by the Joint Committee on the Economic Report as part of the machinery which could be put in motion to meet these situations. That is why it is in this bill. If the time ever comes when home construction is slowing down and a recession is being influenced by the slowing down of home construction, the President then could use these powers to prevent that situation from getting out of control. It would probably result—it could well result—in hundreds of thousands of homes being built that would not be built otherwise.

HARD-MONEY, HIGH-INTEREST POLICY

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words.

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Michigan has made some very strong arguments in the past in opposition to the very authority which is now attempted to be given to the President. If I felt that the President himself would exercise this power and authority, I would not oppose it. But I know as well as every other Member in the House knows, the President cannot exercise these powers personally and he must delegate the power and the authority, which we give to him, to others. In this case it refers to credit. Everyone knows that Dr. Randolph Burgess was brought into the administration even prior to the time that the President took the oath of office on January 20, 1953, to be the architect of the money policy of this administration. A special place has been created in the Treasury Department for Dr. Burgess. He has a place which is second to the Secretary of the Treasury. The unusual situation is that Dr. Burgess has power and authority—administrative power and authority—over everyone immediately below the Secretary of the Treasury, and at least 4 of the people under him, and possibly 5, but at least 4, must be confirmed by the United States Senate. But Dr. Burgess was brought into the administration in a way so that he is not confirmed by the United States Senate. So he is the unconfirmed Deputy Secretary of the Treasury, and being the unconfirmed Deputy Secretary of the Treasury, he is the one who will exercise this power and authority, which would be given to the President under the terms of this housing act. It is for that reason that I shall oppose it. In other words, there are certain things that the Congress should write into a law itself. One thing is the interest rate. There is no reason why that should not be specific, positive, and definite, as we have done in the past on interest rates on mortgage loans for veterans. It was 4 percent. That could be raised to 4½ percent under certain circumstances and conditions. By reason of those circumstances appearing, the interest rate was actually raised to 4½ percent. That is all right; it is within the law. It is true that it should be reduced now for the same reason that the rate was raised to 4½ percent then. But it has not been reduced. We should have government by law and not by men. We should not put these elastic phrases in a law where we can be more definite and positive in the writing of that law. The interest rate should be written in in a positive and definite way and other terms and conditions concerning credits should be definite and positive. For that reason this provision should be stricken out. Dr. Burgess is the man who caused Government bonds last year to go down and down and down to 89 and the interest rates went up in proportion, almost 3 percent on 2½ percent bonds.

It was by reason of that hard-money, high-interest policy that the administration was forced to reverse itself and take an about-face in order to cure and correct the philosophy of Dr. Burgess. Dr. Burgess was all right as a college professor or as an adviser to some president of a bank, but in running the monetary policy of the Government he has proven to be an absolute failure. An outstanding boner by Mr. Burgess is the 3.4 percent interest rate. Those bonds are now selling at a premium of $9 per hundred. That is an outstanding boner of Mr. Burgess. Therefore, we should not give more power and authority to a person who has demonstrated his ability and desire—I do not say intentionally, but by his actions in effect to absolutely ruin our country.

DEMOCRATS AGAINST HARD-MONEY POLICY

The Democratic Members of Congress denounced the hard-money policy from its beginning, in the early part of 1953, and offered a resolution—which I introduced—to change the hard-money, high-interest policy back to monetary stability and to right the wrong that was being perpetrated on the holders of Government bonds, who were being offered 89 cents on the dollar for them.

The administration's hard-money, high-interest policy, which was so aggressively and effectively enforced the first 6 months of 1953, is still with us, and will remain with us for the next 20 years. This is causing more money to go into the hands of a few people who do not need it and will not use it. It causes less money to go into the hands of those who need it as purchasing power and who would use it to consume available goods and services that would make our economy stronger.

WING CLIPPING ONLY INTENDED

Hard money was intended only to clip the wings of the goose that lays the golden eggs, but nearly killed the bird instead. If we Democrats had not been effective in opposing this terrible policy, they would have killed the bird.

Immediately after the present administration took office, the unconfirmed Deputy Secretary of the Treasury commenced the administration's hard-money, high-interest policy.

Interest rates were raised on the Government debt by three-quarters of 1 percent by the issuance and sale of 30-year Government bonds at a rate of 3¼ percent. When this pattern is put into effect on the entire debt, it will raise the cost to the taxpayers by $2 billion annually.

This issue is now selling at a premium of more than $9 on $100, or a capital gain at present prices of $108 million for a favored few, on a short-time investment. It is properly referred to as the "Humphrey-Burgess boner."

This action resulted in an increase in all other interest rates from home loans to installment purchases, which will cause devastating effects on our economy for years to come.

The golden eggs laid by the production goose are ineffective, unless there are sufficient golden eggs laid by the purchasing-power goose to permit the consumption of the production.

It is not difficult to restrict business by tight-money measures, but once business has been restricted, it is difficult to expand it by easy money.

They curbed the boom, but found they had not substituted price stability, but rather had started a recession. The dollar is worth less today than a year ago and there are fewer dollars.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Texas has expired.

Mr. WICKERSHAM. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word, and I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks at this point.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

Mr. WICKERSHAM. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. RAINS]. The views of the American Legion of Oklahoma and the Home Builders Association of Oklahoma have been made known, as follows:

LAWTON, OKLA., March 29, 1954.

Congressman VICTOR WICKERSHAM,
Washington, D. C.:

Housing bill goes to House floor for action Wednesday. First, House committee approved 3-percent FNMA investment requirement. We strongly advocate 2 percent to prevent excessive discount for use of new facility. Second, existing 1-for-1 plan ended by bill. A new 1-for-1 authorized based on new FNMA portfolio which may take a year or more to be effective. To bridge gap we advocate continuation of existing 1-for-1 based on present portfolio. Third, limitation on new FNMA purchases to those loans of type generally bought by private investors would destroy effectiveness of FNMA as secondary market support. Fourth, downpayments based on 95 percent of $8,000 are inadequate and should be changed to 95 percent of $10,000. Imposition of administrative discretion over downpayments, amortization terms, and mortgage amounts will seriously interfere with sound, long range planning and should be stricken. Possible committee floor amendments will be agreed upon next 2 days. Urge you contact the chairman and members of the House Banking Committee immediately and sell these points. We are depending upon you. Thanks a million.

W. H. HOUSE,
President, Lawton Home Builders
Association.

My reply is:

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 30, 1954.
Mr. W. H. HOUSE,
President, Lawton Home Builders Association,
Lawton, Okla.:

Reurtel am in accord with your recommendations. Have contacted chairman and members of committee. Will be uphill fight but am doing my best. Regards.

VICTOR WICKERSHAM,
Member of Congress.

THE AMERICAN LEGION,
NATIONAL LEGISLATIVE COMMISSION,
Washington, D. C., March 29, 1954.

Re H. R. 7839, Housing Act of 1954

Hon. VICTOR WICKERSHAM,
House Office Building,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR CONGRESSMAN WICKERSHAM: As you know, the bill H. R. 7839, commonly referred to as the Housing Act of 1954, was reported out by the House Banking and Currency Committee on March 28, 1954, and is scheduled to come up for debate on the floor of the House on March 31, 1954.

The American Legion strongly opposes certain provisions of this bill, namely, sections 201 and 201 (1) having to do with fixing interest rates on Veterans' Administration mortgages, and section 901, which has to do with veterans' preference in obtaining war housing.

Under sections 201 and 201 (1) the President would be given power to fix interest rates from time to time, but not in excess of 2½ percent above the annual yield of marketable obligations of the United States having a maturity date of 15 years or more.

Attached please find a memorandum showing the American Legion's objections to this method of fixing the interest rates on veterans' mortgages.

The American Legion also objects to the provisions of section 901 of the bill on the ground they fail to give veterans the same preferences in the purchase of war housing as are contained in the present laws. I attach a separate statement giving our objections in further detail.

Appreciating your interest in the protection of qualified veterans, I know these objections will receive your serious consideration. I respectfully request that when H. R. 7839 comes up for consideration in the House you will vote to strike sections 201, 201 (1), and 901 from the bill.

Thanking you for your favorable consideration of this request, and with kindest personal regards, I am

Sincerely yours,

MILES D. KENNEDY,
Director.

WHY THE AMERICAN LEGION OPPOSES SECTIONS 201 AND 201 (1) OF H. R. 7839 (INTEREST RATES ON VA MORTGAGES)

1. We believe in the maintenance of a separate housing program for veterans under the sole jurisdiction of the VA; we want the present policy continued.

2. The power to regulate interest rates should remain in Congress.

3. We submit that the phrase contained in section 201 "the President is hereby authorized, without regard to any other provision of law" is too broad and that only specific authority should be granted, not only to the President, but to any other Government official who may be concerned.

4. These sections are bound to result in an increase in the interest rate, now fixed at 4½ percent in keeping with the provisions of Public Law 101 of the 83d Congress.

5. The proposed method of fixing interest rates would result in discrimination between veteran home purchasers, due to the fact the rates would vary from time to time, during the same year, depending on the average yield of marketable obligations of the United States.

6. This method of fixing interest is not practical from the standpoint of the veteran-mortgagor or the builder.

7. There is nothing to stop the rate from being increased to 6 percent any time the yield on Government obligations goes to 3½ percent.

8. The big-money interests will not be satisfied until they get the rate on veterans' mortgages up to 6 percent. They are not interested in the veteran as such.

9. The VA advises that the average loan to a veteran in 1953 was $9,480, with a typical maturity of 20 years, and that had the interest rate in 1953 been 5¼ percent rather than 4 and 4½ percent (as it actually was), the veteran would have had to pay an increase in interest of $70.72 for the first year, and $932.83 additional interest over the period of his mortgage. At 5½ percent, 5¾ percent, or 6 percent the amount of interest will, of course, increase accordingly.

10. When the original Servicemen's Readjustment Act (Public Law 346, 78th Cong.) was written, a ceiling was placed on the interest rate on these mortgages in order that there might not be a prohibitive rate charged those who had served in the Armed Forces and for whom the legislation was intended to give some assistance in reestablishing themselves on a sound economic basis. Sections 201 and 201 (1) violate this principle in every respect.

11. Sections 201 and 201 (1) abridge the principle of veterans' preference, and should be stricken from the bill.

WHY THE AMERICAN LEGION OPPOSES SECTION 901 OF H. R. 7839 (DISPOSAL OF PERMANENT WAR HOUSING WITHOUT REGARD TO VETERANS' PREFERENCE HOUSING LAWS)

1. Under the provisions of section 901 (g) (new), the Administrator would be authorized to dispose of any permanent war housing without regard to the preferences contained in subsections (b) and (c) of the present law (Public Law 475 of the 81st Cong., p. 26).

2. Said subsection (b) of the present law states that preferences in the purchase of any dwelling designed for occupancy by not more than four families and offered for separate sale shall be granted to veterans over other purchasers for such period as the Administrator may determine and in the following order:

"(1) A veteran who occupies a unit in the dwelling structure to be sold and who intends to continue to occupy such unit;

"(2) A nonveteran who occupies a unit in the dwelling structure to be sold and who intends to continue to occupy such unit;

"(3) A veteran who intends to occupy a unit in the dwelling structure to be sold."

Subsection (c) of the present law grants first preference to groups of veterans organized on a mutual ownership or cooperative basis, etc., where a housing project is to be disposed of.

3. No such preferences are contained in section 901.

4. Section 901 would open wide the door for the elimination of veterans' preference in the disposal of permanent war housing.

5. It has been the experience of American Legion representatives that many officials of the Housing and Home Finance Agency have absolutely no regard for veterans.

6. While we have confidence in the present Administrator of the Housing and Home Finance Agency, there are too many employed in that Agency who feel that preference in the sale of surplus housing to veterans should be eliminated, and we fear those who would actually be responsible for the administration of the law would use this authority to gain their personal desire to deprive veterans of their rights to purchase surplus war housing.

7. We contend that veterans' preference has never hindered the sale of these properties or worked a hardship on the Housing Agency.

8. Stripped of its legal phraseology, section 901 is nothing more or less than a bold attempt to knock out veterans' preference in the purchase of defense housing.

9. Current economic conditions do not warrant a weakening of the preference laws granted veterans in the field of housing.

10. Section 901 abridges the principle of veterans' preference and should be stricken from the bill H. R. 7839.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. MULTER].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. MULTER) there were—ayes 104, noes 112.

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Chairman, I demand tellers.

Tellers were ordered, and the Chair appointed as tellers Mr. MULTER and Mr. WOLCOTT.

The Committee again divided; and the tellers reported that there were—ayes 140, noes 142.

So the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 105. Section 203 (b) (3) of said act, as amended, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"(3) Have a maturity satisfactory to the Commissioner, but not to exceed, in any event, 30 years from the date of the insurance of the mortgage: Provided, That the maturity of any such mortgage shall not exceed the maximum maturity prescribed therefor by the provisions of this section 203 in effect prior to the effective date of the Housing Act of 1954, unless the President, pursuant to section 201 of the Housing Act of 1954, has authorized a greater maturity, in which event the maturity of such mortgage shall not exceed such greater maturity."

SEC. 106. Section 203 (b) (5) of said act, as amended, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"(5) Bear interest (exclusive of premium charges for insurance, and service charges if any) at not to exceed 5 percent per annum on the amount of the principal obligation outstanding at any time, or not to exceed such percent per annum not in excess of 6 percent as the Commissioner finds necessary to meet the mortgage market."

SEC. 107. Section 203 (c) of said act, as amended, is amended by striking out of the second sentence the word "Provided" and inserting: "Provided, That debentures presented in payment of premium charges shall represent obligations of the particular insurance fund to which such premium charges are to be credited: Provided further."

SEC. 108. Section 203 (d) of said act, as amended, is hereby amended by striking the period at the end thereof and inserting a colon and the following: "And provided further, That no mortgage shall be insured pursuant to this subsection after the effective date of the Housing Act of 1954, except pursuant to a commitment to insure issued on or before such date."

SEC. 109. Subsections (f) and (g) of section 203 of said act, as amended, are hereby repealed.

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment which must be offered to section 104 at page 110, line 9. The Clerk was reading too fast for me to follow. I therefore ask unanimous consent to return to section 104.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MULTER: On page 110, line 9, change the period to a colon and add the following: "and Provided further, the mortgagor shall agree (i) to certify, upon completion of the physical improvements on the mortgaged property or project and prior to final endorsement of the mortgage, either (a) that the amount of the actual cost of said physical improvements (exclusive of off-site public utilities and streets and of organizations and legal expenses) equaled or exceeded the proceeds of the mortgage loan or (b) the amount by which the proceeds of the mortgage loan exceeded the actual cost of said physical improvements (exclusive of off-site public utilities and streets and of organization and legal expenses), and as the case may be, and (ii) to pay, within 60 days after such certification, to the mortgagee, for application to the reduction of the principal obligation of such mortgage, the amount, if any, so certified to be in excess of such actual cost. The Commissioner shall construe the term "actual cost" in such a manner as to reduce same by the amount of any kick-backs, rebates, and normal trade discounts received in connection with the construction of the said physical improvements, and to include only the actual amounts paid for labor and materials and necessary services in connection therewith."

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Chairman, this rather complicated language must be offered in at least four other places in the bill in addition to section 104 which is now before us if we are going to improve this bill and make it workable and prevent it from becoming a builder's or speculator's bonanza.

The language seeks to prevent what is known in the trade as mortgaging-out. "Mortgaging-out" is the colloquial expression given to that process by which a speculative builder or speculative realtor goes in and purchases some land, files his plans and specifications to erect buildings and an estimated cost on the basis of which he gets a commitment for a mortgage. By playing around mathematically with his figures, sometimes drawing upon his imagination as to what he will give to the prospective home buyer, more often omitting in the final building some of the things called for in his plans and specifications, he gets a commitment for a mortgage which sometimes has run as high as 125 percent of the actual cost of the building. To be specific so you can follow me more closely, let me take as an instance a $10,000 unit or house, where it may actually cost the builder $10,000 for that house. He will call for, in his estimated cost figures, 25 percent or more over that, and then get a commitment for $12,500 on his mortgage commitment instead of his actual cost. He will then complete the project at a cost of $10,000, sell it over for $12,500, and walk away out of his mortgage money with $2,500 more than the actual cost.

The language that is being proposed is proposed for the purpose of stopping that kind of practice. It is not based on imagination of what may happen. It is based upon testimony that has been given to the committees of the Congress as to what has been done in the past. And, if you want to stop that kind of phony business, the only way you can do it is by writing into this law provisions such as called for by this amendment now before you. That will require the owner or builder, when he completes his project, to certify what it actually cost, and then if his cost is less than his estimated cost, his mortgage will be reduced accordingly. You probably will be told that this is going to stymie the program; it is going to hurt the GI's, and all of that nonsense.

There is nothing in this amendment directed against the GI's; there is nothing in this directed against the legitimate builder. Every legitimate builder and every legitimate financier who has come before our committee has told us you need something like this to protect the legitimate builder who wants to do a real job. If you want real housing, if you want to protect the home buyer, if you want to protect the Government's guaranty of its mortgages, you have to prevent the phony builder from operating. You have to prevent the phony builder cooperating with the phony mortgagee who will sell over the mortgage to the mortgage market for a house that is not worth what it cost.

Mr. BOLLING. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MULTER. I am happy to yield to the gentleman.

Mr. BOLLING. The gentleman is aware, no doubt, that on page 6 of the minority report it is pointed out that:

When FHA title IX, as part of the Defense Housing and Community Facilities and Services Act of 1951, was adopted, it was amended with bipartisan sponsorship to require that the mortgagor certify upon completion of the physical improvements on the mortgaged property the amount, if any, by which the proceeds of the mortgage loan exceeded the actual costs of the physical improvements.

In other words, a provision very substantially the same as the amendment being offered by the gentleman; is that not correct?

Mr. MULTER. It is the identical language now being proposed. We found it necessary to do it in the Wherry Act. We found it necessary to do it in the defense housing. We got into it too late to try to prevent it in the 608 housing. If we are going to prevent that kind of thing, we must adopt an amendment such as this in each of the six places where it will be offered.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

I think there is an implication somewhere—and I surely would not charge the gentleman from New York [Mr. MULTER] as contributing to it; but I think his advisers perhaps should go into a huddle on it, because there is an implication in certain amendments which have been offered in the last 2 days, that there is a feeling somewhere that the Government assistance in financing of home construction should be completely scuttled.

Yesterday there was an amendment which would have severely crippled the proposed operation of the Federal National Mortgage Association, by prohibiting FNMA from selling its mortgages under par. The evil of that came from the fact that FNMA can buy under par, always has been able to buy under par. Assume, for instance, that it bought on a 5-percent discount, paid 95 percent, or a little more. The amendment proposed yesterday would have prohibited it from selling out at 99 and making 4 points profit.

I cannot imagine why some of the Members here voted as they did on that amendment.

Let us analyze this amendment before us. The mortgagor shall agree to make the certification. I ask you, in all fairness—and I suggest to the gentleman that he had better ask those who have been advising him on this in all fairness—is a mortgagor of a home in a position to tell the cost of each nail that went into that house? I ask anyone here, if you were to buy a house, would you be in a position to certify the actual cost of that house? If you happened to be the builder also, as well as the owner, you might be able to do it. But this amendment says the mortgagor, in order to get insurance, must certify to the FHA that the house cost so-and-so—lumber, cement, and so forth. The mortgagor, the person who is buying the house and giving the mortgage that is insured by FHA, must make this certification under the proposed amendment.

I wish the gentleman would check with his advisers, because this is a monstrosity if there ever was one.

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOLCOTT. I should be glad to yield, because I think this should be clarified by the gentleman. I should not think the gentleman would want to offer an amendment like that if he is doing it on his own, so I am charging the gentleman with getting some bad advice and suggesting that he had better check with his advisers.

Mr. MULTER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOLCOTT. I am glad to yield.

Mr. MULTER. I am sure the gentleman offers his comments in good faith.

Mr. WOLCOTT. And in all friendliness, I might say.

Mr. MULTER. And in all friendliness. And my criticisms, if any, are offered in all friendliness. I am sure the gentleman agrees with the principle that no one should be able to speculate on these mortgages and walk away with any profit out of the mortgage money.

Mr. WOLCOTT. This program has been in effect now for about 20 years, and FHA has not had much trouble in doing many billions of dollars' worth of insurance without loss to the Government.

Mr. MULTER. Will not the gentleman concede that we had to put in amendments of this kind to stop this kind of activity in defense housing and military housing, and that we had a very bad situation under 608?

Mr. WOLCOTT. I will not agree that there is a comparable situation at all.

Mr. MULTER. Will not the gentleman agree we should put some legislation in this bill to prevent a similar situation occurring?

Mr. WOLCOTT. I think it can be done by regulation. It has been done by regulation, and FHA has been doing a mighty good job of assisting in the financing of these homes.

Mr. McCARTHY. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCARTHY. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. MULTER. The fact of the matter is that this situation is a very real one. You cannot hide behind the word "mortgagor" in this amendment and say the amendment should be defeated because it is bad in principle. It is good in principle. All the gentleman need do is add some new definition to the word "mortgagor." The word "mortgagor," as used in this amendment and throughout the bill, means the person who is applying for the mortgage. It applies to the builder. It means the builder. If the gentleman wants a good bill and does not want to hide behind words, all he need do is offer an amendment to clarify what I say is already in the law, which is that the word "mortgagor," as used in this amendment, applies to the builder. It will stop only the speculative builder and lender from walking away with money that belongs to the owner. He should not have it and he should not get it under a guaranteed mortgage or any other way. If you want a good building program, you should have the same amendment added to this law as you had in the defense housing and in the military housing, and that is what we are trying to get into this bill by amendment.

Mr. McCARTHY. The gentleman should point out that the standards for determining mortgages under the co-operative program were changed by the committee under this recommendation because they wanted to prevent mortgaging out. So this is a real problem. It should not be left to regulation.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCARTHY. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. WOLCOTT. The gentleman knows this same provision applies to old houses. How would any purchaser of an old house know how much the house cost?

Mr. McCARTHY. You can correct it as to old housing if you wish to.

Mr. EBERHARTER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words.

Mr. Chairman, I think this amendment has a very fine purpose in mind. Within the past 10 days I was told by people who have had experience that a builder had put up a large number of homes and that he had a commitment for $1,600 more than the houses were worth. After that was discovered he reduced the prices for these homes $1,000.

I know definitely from experience that many builders in my home district in the Pittsburgh area, the western Pennsylvania area, have become very, very wealthy through this mortgaging-out procedure. Something definite should be put in the bill. I cannot speak as to the technical language, but I know positively from people who have had experience in this thing that when houses were in great demand commitments were made for anywhere from $1,000 to $2,500 more than their value. So I hope the committee will adopt this amendment. If there is something the matter with the technical phrasing of it, that can be corrected later. Certainly I feel it incumbent upon me from what people who have had experience in housing have told me to see that some language should be put in this bill for the protection of the people who are buying these homes.

Mr. YATES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. EBERHARTER. I yield.

Mr. YATES. Certainly the gentleman from Michigan is attempting to confuse this issue by his statement as to what occurred yesterday, and he gave the example of a purchase by FNMA of a mortgage at 95 and the inability of the FNMA to sell it at 99. He forgot to say that for 15 years FNMA never sold its mortgages at a discount prior to last year, according to testimony given by Mr. Bauman to our committee and last year was the first time that mortgages which had been purchased by FNMA at 100 were sold at 4 points discount. So I think what is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander, and the gentleman is only trying to confuse the issue here.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. EBERHARTER. I yield.

Mr. WOLCOTT. May I suggest to the gentleman from Illinois that he read title III of this bill, and I think the matter will unfold itself to him and become clear.

Mr. EBERHARTER. I think every member of the committee here wants to protect the person who is buying a home and not to give an advantage to the person who is putting up the mortgage money.

Mr. HALLECK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. EBERHARTER. I yield.

Mr. HALLECK. I have always thought in my experience here that the admission by a Member who offered an amendment that it is subject to question or has defects apparent in it, is about the best reason in the world for voting such an amendment down.

Mr. EBERHARTER. I am sure the members of this committee, sitting here this afternoon, want to protect the person who is buying a home, and if it is for that purpose, all Members here should vote to adopt the amendment.

Mr. MERRILL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. EBERHARTER. I yield.

Mr. MERRILL. One of the most important parts of this bill is that it gives the privilege to people who want to buy older homes to buy on the same liberal terms that new homes are bought. Does the gentleman realize that if this amendment is adopted that program will be completely wrecked, and it will then not be possible for people who want to buy older homes to have the privileges that this bill would give to them in its present form?

Mr. EBERHARTER. I might say to the gentleman I think the gentleman who offered the amendment intended it to apply to new homes and to give protection in such a way that the home buyer would not be taken advantage of.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. EBERHARTER. I yield.

Mr. McCORMACK. It seems to me from the colloquy that both sides admit there is something wrong here, and that something should be done to protect the purchaser. What does the Republican side offer to protect the purchaser?

Mr. EBERHARTER. That is true.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. MULTER), there were—ayes 91, noes 143.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask what is the program with reference to this bill.

Mr. WOLCOTT. As far as I know, we will continue reading the bill until the Committee rises. I do not have any information as to when the Committee will rise, but I understand that is being discussed among the leadership now. I am sure the gentleman from Kentucky and myself will be in hearty accord with our leadership.

Mr. SPENCE. It seems perfectly obvious that we cannot pass this bill tonight unless we sit here until a very late hour. I do not like working at night.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Of course, we reported the bill out at 10 o'clock at night, so we have 5 hours left. However, I would not like to suggest that we stay here until 10 o'clock.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SPENCE. I yield.

Mr. RAYBURN. I hope the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HALLECK] will be able to tell us shortly how long we intend to sit.

Mr. HALLECK. I had hoped we might conclude this bill today, but it seems obvious that it cannot be done. If we continue until 5:45 and then come in tomorrow at 11 o'clock—

Mr. RAYBURN. That is less than 30 minutes more.

Mr. HALLECK. I might suggest it will be my purpose to come in at 11 o'clock tomorrow with the hope that we might finish the bill early.

Mr. RAYBURN. I shall certainly not object to coming in at 11 tomorrow.

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment which is at the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MULTER: At page 110, line 25, strike out the words "and service charges, if any."

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Chairman, this amendment would apply with equal force in at least three other places in this bill. It seeks to strike from the bill some new matter which appears for the first time in any of the housing bills that have yet come before the House. The language is not in any existing housing law upon the statute books. The language against which the amendment is directed reads: "service charges, if any." So that you may get the full import, let me read from section 106.

Section 106 of this bill amends section 203 (b) (5) of the Housing Act so it will read as follows:

Bear interest—

That is, the mortgages shall bear interest—

(exclusive of premium charges for insurance, and service charges if any) at not to exceed 5 percent per annum on the amount of the principal obligation outstanding at any time, or not to exceed such percent per annum not in excess of 6 percent as the Commissioner finds necessary to meet the mortgage market.

That is the way the law has read up to the present time. Now for the first time an amendment is presented in this bill to add to the premium charges for insurance these words: "and service charges, if any."

Heretofore the premium charge has been one-half of 1 percent; so the 5-percent mortgage was 5½ and had to be paid by the mortgagor or homeowner.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MULTER. I yield.

Mr. PATMAN. Is it not a fact that the phrase "and service charges" has been added? It is entirely new; it has never been in the law before.

Mr. MULTER. That is precisely the point I am making.

Mr. PATMAN. It is not defined and the sky is the limit as to the amount.

Mr. MULTER. You are so right, sir.

In other words, your 6-percent limitation on interest is now increased by another one-half percent for the premium charge and as much as the traffic will bear for the service charge.

The administration tells us it will be only another half of 1 percent, that that is their experience. There is, however, no limitation written into the bill. Even if it is only another half percent it means that if you are a veteran you will not be paying $4\frac{1}{2}$ percent but will be paying at least 5 percent; and everybody else who is not a veteran will have to pay either 6 or $6\frac{1}{2}$ percent if the administration limits the service charge to one-half of 1 percent.

If this program has worked so well since 1937 without the service charge in it, you do not need it today in an easy money market.

If easy money is available for all these mortgages, why add another one-half or another 1 percent to the charges and make it that much more difficult and that much more expensive to the person acquiring a home?

You tell us this bill is designed so that a person can get a home cheap, that it is going to cost very little with a very low down payment and in some instances no down payment. We have already heard that it is going to cost some thirty-odd thousand dollars to carry the $7,600 home without a down payment at current interest rates. Add another half or another 1 percent to it and it is going to make it too costly to carry the house even though you can move into it for nothing.

I submit, Mr. Chairman, that if you want a good bill you will strike out of this bill this language which permits an additional charge to be added over the interest and over the insurance charge, a service charge of whatever the traffic will bear.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I have always been impressed with the fact—and I think the gentleman on frequent occasions has impressed others in the committee and here on the floor likewise—that he is very much interested in the small homeowner—the rural homeowner—especially the rural homeowner out in the remote areas.

Section 8 of title I of existing law—and this is in answer to the gentleman's statement that this language has never been in the law before—does have an identical provision specifically permitting service charges. In section 8 of title I we find this language as follows:

Bear interest (exclusive of premium charges for insurance and service charges, if any) not to exceed 5 percent—

And so forth. That is in the existing law.

Now, let me read from the report. The gentleman should have read the majority report of the committee. He should not have confined his reading to the minority report. On page 17 of the majority report, having in mind also that these service charges cannot be put on unless the Administrator sees fit to do so—and we very deliberately provided that the Administrator shall not put the service charges on except in remote cases—it is stated:

Under existing law there is statutory authority for a service charge in addition to the insurance premium and interest charge on mortgages insured by FHA under section 8 of title I. As previously noted, this section 8 small home-insurance program is to be integrated with the FHA section 203 insurance program—

That is under this bill—

A service charge was permitted in connection with a section 8 mortgage because of the modest amount of the mortgage and because of the higher cost incident to the fact that many of these mortgages were written on properties in outlying areas. The bill as reported would permit a service charge on section 203 mortgages. It is the opinion of your committee that, if a service charge is permitted to be collected in addition to the interest and insurance premium charges on such insured mortgages, the service charge should only be permitted in connection with lower-cost homes similar to the present section 8 FHA insured mortgage program.

This present section 8, which is integrated with the proposed section 203, is for the little home—the little homes out in the rural areas.

Now, take it away from them if you want to do it. I do not want to do it.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. MULTER].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read, as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MULTER: Page 110, line 25, insert after the word "any" the words "which service charges shall in no event exceed one-half of 1 percent."

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Chairman, I admit I overlooked section 8 of FHA, title I, when I said there was no existing law containing the phrase "service charges." I will concede also that that section was intended to and does affect rural housing. But I will not concede that the rest of this bill affects rural housing. When the bill came to us it contained nothing for rural housing except a repeal of the provisions that applied to rural housing. It was not until the distinguished Member from Alabama [Mr. JONES] appeared before our committee and pointed out to us there was nothing in this bill for the farmer that we did try to do something, little as it was, in this bill for farm housing.

With reference to the precise amendment, if you intend a service charge to apply only to the small mortgage, you should say so.

As it is written here now, it is going to apply to every mortgage and every homeowner in the country. If you are acting in good faith, and if you think that the charge should not exceed one-half of 1 percent, as we have been told by the administration, then you should adopt this amendment, which simply says that the service charge shall be limited to not more than one-half of 1 percent.

Now let us see who is acting in good faith.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. MULTER].

The question was taken; and on a division there were—ayes 79, noes 131.

So the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 110. Section 203 of said act, as amended, is hereby further amended by adding the following new subsection at the end thereof:

"(h) Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, the Commissioner is authorized to insure any mortgage which involves a principal obligation not in excess of $7,000 and not in excess of 100 percent of the appraised value of a property upon which there is located a dwelling designed principally for a single-family residence, where the mortgagor is the owner and occupant and establishes (to the satisfaction of the Commissioner) that his home which he occupied as an owner or as a tenant was destroyed or damaged to such an extent that reconstruction is required as a result of a flood, fire, hurricane, earthquake, storm, or other catastrophe since the President, pursuant to section 2 (a) of the act entitled 'An act to authorize Federal assistance to States and local governments in major disasters and for other purposes' (Public Law 875, 81st Cong., approved September 30, 1950), as amended, has determined to be a major disaster."

SEC. 111. Section 204 (a) of said Act, as amended, is hereby amended—

(1) by striking out of the third sentence the words "any mortgage insurance premiums paid after either of such dates" and inserting "any mortgage insurance premiums paid after either of such dates, and any tax imposed by the United States upon any deed or other instrument by which said property was acquired by the mortgagee and transferred or conveyed to the Commissioner";

(2) by striking out of the second proviso the words "or under section 213 of this act," and inserting the following: "or under section 213 of this act, or with respect to any mortgage accepted for insurance under section 203 on or after the effective date of the Housing Act of 1954,"; and

(3) by striking the period at the end thereof and inserting a colon and the following: "And provided further, That, notwithstanding any requirement contained in this act that debentures may be issued only upon acquisition of title and possession by the mortgagee and its subsequent conveyance and transfer to the Commissioner, and for the purpose of avoiding unnecessary conveyance expense in connection with payment of insurance benefits under the provisions of this act, the Commissioner is authorized, subject to such rules and regulations as he may prescribe, to permit the mortgagee to tender to the Commissioner a satisfactory conveyance of title and transfer of possession direct from the mortgagor or other appropriate grantor and to pay the insurance benefits to the mortgagee which it would otherwise be entitled to if such conveyance had been made to the mortgagee and from the mortgagee to the Commissioner."

SEC. 112. Section 204 (d) of said act, as amended, is hereby amended by striking out of the second sentence thereof the words "3 years after the 1st day of July following the maturity date of the mortgage on the property in exchange for which the debentures were issued, except that debentures issued with respect to mortgages insured under section 213 shall mature 20 years after the date of such debentures" and inserting "10 years after the date thereof."

SEC. 113. Section 204 of said act, as amended, is hereby amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(1) In the event that any mortgagee under a mortgage insured under section 203 forecloses on the mortgaged property but does not convey such property to the Commissioner in accordance with this section, and the Commissioner is given written notice thereof, or in the event that the mortgagor pays the obligation under the mortgage in full prior to the maturity thereof, and the mortgagee pays any adjusted premium charge required under the provisions of section 203 (c), and the Commissioner is given written notice by the mortgagee of the payment of such obligation, the obligation to pay any subsequent premium charge for insurance shall cease, and all rights of the mortgagee and the mortgagor under this section shall terminate as of the date of such notice."

SEC. 114. Section 205 of said act, as amended, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 205. (a) The Commissioner shall establish as of July 1, 1954, in the mutual mortgage insurance fund a general surplus account and a participating reserve account. All of the assets of the general reinsurance account shall be transferred to the general surplus account whereupon the general reinsurance account shall be abolished. There shall be transferred from the various group accounts to the participating reserve account as of July 1, 1954, an amount equal to the aggregate amount which would have been distributed under the provisions of section 205 in effect on June 30, 1954, if all outstanding mortgages in such group accounts had been paid in full on said date. All of the remaining balances of said group accounts shall as of said date be transferred to the general surplus account whereupon all of said group accounts shall be abolished.

"(b) The aggregate net income thereafter received or any net loss thereafter sustained by the mutual mortgage insurance funds in any semiannual period shall be credited or charged to the general surplus account and/or the participating reserve account in such manner and amounts as the Commissioner may determine to be in accord with sound actuarial and accounting practice.

"(c) Upon termination of the insurance obligation of the Mutual Mortgage Insurance Fund by payment of any mortgage insured thereunder, the Commissioner is authorized to distribute to the mortgagor a share of the Participating Reserve Account in such manner and amount as the Commissioner shall determine to be equitable and in accordance with sound actuarial and accounting practice: Provided, That, in no event, shall any such distributable share exceed the aggregate scheduled annual premiums of the mortgagor to the year of termination of the insurance.

"(d) No mortgagor or mortgagee of any mortgage insured under section 203 shall have any vested right in a credit balance in any such account or be subject to any liability arising out of the mutuality of the Fund and the determination of the Commissioner as to the amount to be paid by him to any mortgagor shall be final and conclusive."

SEC. 115. Section 207 (c) of said act, as amended, is hereby amended—

(1) by inserting before the semicolon at the end of paragraph numbered (2) a colon and the following: "And provided further, That nothing contained in this section shall preclude the insurance of mortgages covering existing construction located in slum or blighted areas, as defined in paragraph numbered (5) of subsection (a) of this section, and the Commissioner may require such repair or rehabilitation work to be completed as is, in his discretion, necessary to remove conditions detrimental to safety, health, or morals";

(2) by striking out the word "Alaska" in paragraph numbered (2) and inserting "Alaska, or in Guam"; and

(3) by striking out paragraph numbered (3) and inserting the following:

"(3) not to exceed, for such part of such property or project as may be attributable to dwelling use, $2,000 per room (or $7,200 per family unit if the number of rooms in such property or project is less than four per family unit): Provided, That as to projects to consist of elevator type structures, the Commissioner may, in his discretion, increase the dollar amount limitation of $2,000 per room to not to exceed $2,400 per room and the dollar amount limitation of $7,200 per family unit not to exceed $7,500 per family unit, as the case may be, to compensate for the higher costs incident to the construction of elevator type structures of sound standards of construction and design: And provided further, That such mortgage shall not involve a principal obligation exceeding the maximum amount prescribed by the provisions of this section 207 in effect prior to the effective date of the Housing Act of 1954, unless the President, pursuant to section 201 of the Housing Act of 1954 has authorized a greater maximum amount, in which event such principal obligation shall not exceed such greater maximum amount."

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment. Since we have agreed to rise at a quarter of 6, that would leave only about 5 minutes for debate.

Mr. HALLECK. Mr. Chairman, that might settle it. If the gentleman has an amendment, I think he had better offer it.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read the amendment as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MULTER to H. R. 7839: On page 118, line 4, change the period to a semicolon and add: "and (iii) the builder or the mortgagor as the case may be (except a mortgagor coming within the provisions of paragraph (2) (B) of this subsection (d)) shall agree (i) to certify, upon completion of the physical improvements on the mortgaged property or project and prior to final endorsement of the mortgage, either (a) that the amount of the actual cost of said physical improvements (exclusive of off-site public utilities and streets and of organization and legal expenses) equaled or exceeded the proceeds of the mortgage loan or (b) the amount by which the proceeds of the mortgage loan exceeded the actual cost of said physical improvements (exclusive of off-site public utilities and streets and of organization and legal expenses), as the case may be, and (ii) to pay, within 60 days after such certification, to the mortgagee, for application to the reduction of the principal obligation of such mortgage, the amount, if any, so certified to be in excess of such actual cost. The Commissioner shall construe the term "actual cost" in such a manner as to reduce same by the amount of any kick-backs, rebates, and normal trade discounts received in connection with the construction of the said physical improvements, and to include only the actual amounts paid for labor and materials and necessary services in connection therewith."

This shall not apply to old houses.

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Chairman, are we going to rise at a quarter to 6? I am entitled to 5 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes, so he has the 5 minutes.

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Chairman, possibly now the distinguished Chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency will accept this amendment. This is quite similar to the amendment I offered on mortgaging-out to section 203 housing, and you were told the objection there was that it applied to the mortgagor, that it might apply to the small homeowner and it might affect the old houses, that the man who owned an old house could not get a mortgage under this. Now we are on section 207. Two hundred and seven houses are multi-family houses for rental purposes. I now change the language, so instead of reading, as it did before, "mortgagor," it now reads "the builder or the mortgagor, as the case may be," so the mortgagor is not the fellow who has to certify; only the builder who did the building and made the estimate will certify as to the cost.

To make sure it did not apply to any but new construction, I added, "This shall not apply to old houses."

I want to know what objection there can be to putting this kind of precaution into this bill to stop the thefts, and I say it advisedly, which happened under the 608's, under the defense housing, and under the military housing.

Since we expect to rise in about 2 minutes, I yield back the balance of my time so that somebody can tell us what is now wrong with this amendment.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, this section 207 has been in the act ever since its inception, for I do not know how long; 20 years, something like that. All of a sudden it has apparently occurred to somebody that something is wrong with the FHA program, especially as it applies to, of all things, rental properties in which there is a 20-percent equity requirement on the part of the builder.

We have had faith and confidence in the administration of the FHA throughout these 20 years. All of a sudden in 1954 comes a change of administration. Now they want to tie the administration up in some manner or other. I hope it is not in the hope that the administration will fail to get adequate homes for the people who deserve them. There may be cases where there are some crooked builders and where there are some crooked owners, but the taxpayer is protected largely by the administration of the act. Understand that before you can get FHA insurance, you must have a series of inspections on the property as it is being built up to the point where the mortgage is insured. I do not think we should be expected, if I may use an old expression, to burn down the barn to kill the rats. There may be some rats somewhere, but that is no reason we should stymie the 207 rental property program, the building of properties which, I assume, the gentleman from New York is most vitally interested in: the building of multiple dwellings or apartment houses.

The amendment should be defeated.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. MULTER].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. REECE of Tennessee, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H. R. 7839) to aid in the provision and improvement of housing, the elimination and prevention of slums, and the conservation and development of urban communities, had come to no resolution thereon.

BATAAN DAY

Mr. HALLECK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's desk the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 143) providing for the observance of April 9, the 12th anniversary of the fall of Bataan, as Bataan Day, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the Senate joint resolution, as follows:

Whereas April 9 of this year marks the 12th anniversary of the end of the epic struggle of American and Filipino forces on Bataan; and

Whereas Bataan symbolizes the spirit which moves men of different races and different creeds to fight shoulder to shoulder for their freedom; and

Whereas the rallying of the people of the Philippines to the side of the United States and the other United Nations in the recent struggle in Korea was a further expression of American-Filipino unity; and

Whereas the people of the Philippines have demonstrated to all other nations in the Asian sphere the fact that mutual friendship and mutual security are common goals, and the role of the United States in Asia is that of a friend of peoples, regardless of race; and

Whereas President Ramon Magsaysay has designated April 9 as Bataan Day in the Philippines: Therefore be it

Resolved, etc., That April 9, the 12th anniversary of the fall of Bataan, should be observed as Bataan Day and that the Congress recommends that on that day the flags of the United States and the Republic of the Philippines be flown, and that encouragement be given to the holding of appropriate services in schools and churches, and in other gatherings.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

Mr. HALLECK. Mr. Speaker, I rise at this time to urge the Members of the House to join in a tribute to the memory of those gallant defenders of Bataan whose courage in the face of extreme adversity shall be an everlasting source of inspiration to the free world.

It is well for us to remember that the tragedy of that ordeal increased the determination of the people of America and of the Philippines to turn back the forces of oppression which threatened the survival of liberty.

We look back upon that episode with sorrow and with sympathy; sorrow for those who were called upon to give their lives or to endure inhuman hardships; sympathy for the families who suffered the anguish of bereavement.

But we look back also with great pride and gratification; pride in the spirit and the courage shown by Americans and Filipinos who stood side by side to the death; gratification in the knowledge that the traditional bonds between our nations were drawn even closer in those dark hours.

In these days of world tensions—of mistrust and hatred—we are sustained and encouraged in our pressing search for lasting peace by steadfast friends who have proved in the crucible of war their own devotion to the ideals of free men.

From the pages of history we find once again in the chapter of Bataan the lesson that eternal vigilance is indeed the price of liberty.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I have the honor to introduce a joint resolution similar to one introduced and passed in the other body—Senate joint resolution 143—on Wednesday which provides for the observance of April 9, the 12th anniversary of the fall of Bataan, as Bataan Day.

I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the joint resolution.

The Senate joint resolution was agreed to, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

DAIRY PRICE SUPPORT PROGRAM

(Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin (at the request of Mr. LAIRD) was granted permission to extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD.)

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I have today introduced legislation designed to give the Secretary of Agriculture the tools he needs to conduct an effective price support program for the dairy farmer.

It is clear to everyone that the present price support program has produced a major crisis in the dairy industry. During the past 12 months, the prices of milk and butterfat used in manufactured dairy products have been supported at 90 percent of parity. As of this March 24, the inventory of the Commodity Credit Corporation included the following quantities of dairy products:

	Million pounds
Butter	328.1
Cheese	339.2
Nonfat dry milk solids.....	539.2

These quantities represent about 21 percent of the total annual butter production, 21 percent of the total annual cheese production and 45 percent of the total annual nonfat dry milk solids production.

Purchases by the Government continue at a heavy rate, and the prospect is that production in the marketing year beginning April 1, 1954, will be considerably in excess of production during the last marketing year when such heavy stocks were accumulated.

In recognition of these factors, the Secretary of Agriculture has announced that the level of price supports for milk and butterfat will be reduced from 90 to 75 percent beginning April 1, the maximum reduction permitted by law. This drastic action came as a shock to those of us who realized that a reduction in support levels was necessary but who had assumed the reduction would be gradual, as announced by the President in outlining his farm program to Congress.

While we may quarrel with the decision of the Secretary, and I question the legal requirement for such a drastic reduction, nevertheless, it is important to understand that his action was based upon his honest interpretation of the existing law. His reasons are best explained in a speech he gave at Ithaca, N. Y., on March 24:

I have been asked, "Why did you drop the support price for dairy products the full amount, from 90 to 75 percent?"

One answer is—from a legal standpoint there was nothing else I could do.

Let's see what the law says. Dairy products, the law reads, "shall be supported at such level not in excess of 90 percent nor less than 75 percent of the parity price therefor as the Secretary determines necessary in order to assure an adequate supply."

We own a billion pounds of butter, cheese, and dried milk. Our stocks are still in good condition, but we are fast approaching a time when we shall have to move them—somehow, somewhere—or to be confronted with the costly and embarrassing problem of spoilage. We have done our utmost to move these stocks at home and abroad. Thus far we have been able to dispose of only a limited amount.

Under these circumstances, can anyone seriously contend that 90 percent of parity—or 80 percent or even 75 percent—is necessary to assure an adequate supply? The Solicitor of the Department of Agriculture has ruled that, in view of this section of the law and in the light of the present supply situation, the level of support could not legally be fixed higher than 75 percent of parity for the new marketing season.

Surely, if the Secretary's analysis of the law is correct, we must with all possible haste move to amend the law in order to establish broader criteria for price-support action. For, if the law requires such a drastic reduction, then the law does not take into consideration the effect of its requirement upon the dairy farmer and the economy as a whole.

This effect is extremely adverse. The announced reduction will lower income to producers of manufacturing milk and butterfat by about $300 million. If fluid milk prices in fluid milk markets are reduced comparably, an additional $300 million loss will result, for a total income loss of $600 million. Such a serious reduction in income is bound to have far-reaching effects, not only upon the dairy farmer, but upon the entire economy as well.

We must move to protect the income of the dairy farmer, and the whole economy, from such drastic and sudden declines which the law, as interpreted by the Secretary, makes possible. Of this, there can be no question.

Legislation now being considered by the House Committee on Agriculture would set aside the decision of the Secretary. It would maintain dairy price supports at the same level of supports for basic commodities, and would permit only a 5-percent reduction per year in the price-support level, instead of the 15-percent reduction now permissible, and possibly required, under law.

It is my belief, however, that we must provide the Secretary with broader authority, which would not hamper effective support action by rigid formulas and which would enable him to meet the current situation, and later situations, as and when they develop. He should be required to consider not only the narrow question of adequate supply, but the overall effect of any action he might take upon the welfare of the dairy farmer.

4. ADJOURNED until Mon., Apr. 5 (p. 4240). Legislative program, as announced by Rep. Halleck: Mon., Consent Calendar and Interior appropriations; Tues., Private Calendar and Interior appropriations; Wed., antitraitor bill; balance of week, tax appeals, extradition, and impounding mail (p. 4231).
5. INTERIOR APPROPRIATION BILL, 1955. In reporting this bill (see Digest 60) the committee made the following statements in its report:
Seeding lands. "The committee is advised that there is a program contemplated for making use of surplus seed, acquired by the Department of Agriculture, for reseeding the public lands...It is the committee's earnest desire that such an arrangement can be worked out..."
Reclamation. "The Bureau has been operating, in cooperation with State Agricultural Extension Service interests, so-called development farms in some of the project areas. It is the committee's understanding that the purpose of such undertakings has been to find crops and farming methods best suited to the project lands. Agricultural development and demonstration work of this type should be left to the Department of Agriculture and to the various State agricultural services. Funds for such development farms programmed for the fiscal year 1955 are specifically disallowed." (The committee also criticized other aspects of Bureau of Reclamation administration.)

Vehicles. "A number of bureaus of the Department have avoided the limitations placed on purchase of passenger vehicles by having a box end mounted on the rear end of business coupes and counting them as pickup trucks. No further purchases of this type are to be made without specific authorization..."

The committee commended plans to consolidate all legal services under the Office of the Solicitor but postponed action pending receipt of more detailed information.

The bill carries a total of $363,360,989, compared with budget estimates of $422,118,430 and 1954 appropriations of $434,631,050.

SPECIAL ORDER GRANTED

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts asked and was granted permission to address the House today for 5 minutes, following the legislative business of the day and any other special orders heretofore entered.

ATOMIC WEAPONS

(Mr. FEIGHAN asked and was given permission to extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD.)

Mr. FEIGHAN. Mr. Speaker, on Monday, March 29, I called attention of the House to the rising clamor, both in this country and abroad, over the terrifyingly powerful hydrogen weapons with which we have been experimenting, and I observed at that time the widespread demands for more information about the nuclear weapons.

I might note, Mr. Speaker, that on the very day it was reported that a second hydrogen bomb was detonated on March 26, I quoted Walter Millis, of the New York Herald Tribune, as saying that—

There will surely have to be an official report on the current experiments at least frank enough to answer some of the myriads of questions as to national policy which the rumors have evoked and to give the public some concrete idea of what is actually planned or intended by the incorporation of nuclear weapons into current military and diplomatic policy to the extent which is being done.

On Wednesday that report was given by Admiral Strauss, Chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission. Instead of stilling the clamor, however, Admiral Strauss' stunning description of what Defense Secretary Wilson called the bomb's unbelievable power, has increased that clamor to an uproar, not only in this country but perhaps even to a greater extent abroad.

The political implications of the present situation are extremely grave. I cite, for example, the angry reactions among a large section of British press and politicians. The Labor members of the House of Commons were almost unanimous in demanding drastic action by the British Government. Most of them demanded the cessation of our Pacific experiments they do not seem to consider so pacific. Next Monday the House of Commons will hold a full-dress debate on the military and political implications of our activity.

It is in this highly explosive context, Mr. Speaker, that I have today introduced H. R. 8701 covering 2 out of the 3 sections of the President's message of February 17 asking for amendment of the Atomic Energy Act of 1946. As I noted before, the first two sections deal with relaxation of restrictions on atomic information. The third section deals with the tremendously complicated question of who shall control the industrial development of atomic energy in the years to come.

Unless I am completely mistaken, Mr. Speaker, there is a vast difference in degree of urgency between the information sections and the atom-for-industry section. It is, I believe, a matter of extreme urgency, given the delicacy of the President's position vis-a-vis our allies, imposed on him by the 8-year-old McMahon Act. It should be noted that the secrecy provisions of this act were drawn up during the period of our so-called atomic monopoly. It is only necessary to read the story of the Soviet's own hydrogen bomb development to realize how anachronistic these secrecy provisions are now.

It is imperative that the President be given elbow room in which to operate in the discussions with our allies which will surely eventuate in the near future. Here let me note that the President began his message by stating the purposes of his suggested amendments in these words:

For the purpose of strengthening the defense and economy of the United States and of the free world, I recommend that the Congress approve a number of amendments to the Atomic Energy Act of 1946. These amendments would accomplish this purpose, with proper security safeguards, through the following means:

First, widened cooperation with our allies in certain atomic energy matters;

Second, improved procedures for the control and dissemination of atomic energy information; and Third, encouragement of broadened participation in the development of peacetime uses of atomic energy in the United States.

In order to help the President achieve our national purposes, I have introduced H. R. 8701, a bill to implement to first two means he has indicated.

HOUSING ACT OF 1954

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill H. R. 7839, to aid in the provision and improvement of housing, the elimination and prevention of slums, and the conservation and development of urban communities.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill H. R. 7839, with Mr. REECE of Tennessee in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. When the Committee rose on yesterday the Clerk had read through section 115 ending on line 4, page 118, of the committee amendment.

If there are no further amendments to this section the Clerk will read.

Mr. TALLE. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I am not making an argument; I am not offering an amendment; I merely desire to furnish some information. At the time of the hearings on the pending bill, H. R. 7839, when Mr. Cole, Administrator, and his associates of the Housing and Home Finance Agency, were before the committee, I asked a question which I should like to call to the attention of the Committee of the Whole.

It has been my experience that much time has been consumed in past years in getting appraisals in connection with FHA loans. Housing, we are all agreed, is extremely important, and the American people should not be blamed if they become a bit restive when they find that so much time is taken in the making of appraisals. So I put this question to Mr. Cole:

How much time elapses between the filing of an application for an FHA loan and the consummation of the loan to the point where the borrower has the money available for use?

Mr. Cole readily agreed that an answer would be supplied by Mr. Hollyday, Commissioner of the FHA. The statement appears in the hearings on pages 113 and 114. I may say that normally the time required, as indicated in that statement by Mr. Hollyday, is approximately 14 days.

Subsequently, I put the same question to Mr. T. B. King, of the Veterans' Administration. I asked:

Approximately how much time elapses between the time when a veteran makes an application for a VA loan and the time when he has the money available for use?

I asked Mr. King if he would be good enough to set his reply out in detail—steps 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6—showing the different steps which must be taken and the approximate time normally required for each step.

His statement will be found in the hearings on pages 228 to 233. I know that statements in printed hearings are often buried and are not brought to the attention of Members. I am therefore taking this time to point out to the membership that these statements are available; they are in the printed hearings, and they do represent standards which we may examine when constituents write in to complain that too much time is taken in the making of appraisals.

Mr. GROSS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TALLE. I yield to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. GROSS. I wish to compliment my colleague from Iowa for his statement and ask how much time does it take to consummate a loan through the Veterans' Administration?

Mr. TALLE. Mr. Chairman, in reply to the question of the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Gross], I may say that the statement of Mr. King appears on page 232 of the hearings. The steps which I asked for are set out there, from 1 to 6, and in adding the number of days indicated following each step I find a total of 48.4. That is more than a month and a half and is a much longer period than reported by FHA. It is understandable, of course, that in a situation where title search and a number of other things are necessary, more time is required to consummate a loan than is needed for normal cases.

Mr. BROOKS of Louisiana. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TALLE. I yield to the gentleman from Louisiana.

Mr. BROOKS of Louisiana. As I understand it, the gentleman said that after 48 days the veteran who has not received a loan completed is justified in pushing for it most vigorously?

Mr. TALLE. I may say to the gentleman from Louisiana that not only is he justified in pushing for it vigorously but he has very good reason for being disappointed because of undue delay.

Mr. BROOKS of Louisiana. I have 2 or 3 instances in mind where it took 6 months, and I have 1 in mind in particular where it took 7 months and is not yet completed.

Mr. TALLE. I may say in reply to the gentleman from Louisiana that I have had some unfortunate experiences myself and it is for that reason and because I know that my experiences are not unusual that I wanted to pinpoint this fact, so that the printed RECORD might show the standards of FHA as they are now and the standards of VA as set forth in the agency's printed statement.

Mr. BROOKS of Louisiana. I will say to the distinguished gentleman that he is engaged in a most worthwhile effort.

Mr. TALLE. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. Chairman, at this time, I should like to say that I believe the American people are served well through the Administrator of the Housing and Home Finance Agency, our former colleague, the Honorable Albert Cole, and I believe, too, that Mr. T. B. King, of the VA, is doing a good job. Those gentlemen have many difficulties to deal with. I have been patient with both agencies. I know other Members have been patient. Now we want both to move along at as rapid a pace as thorough work will permit.

Mr. Chairman, the statements I have previously referred to follow:

FHA records indicate that during the current fiscal year 67 percent of applications for home-mortgage insurance have been processed to either commitment or rejection within 14 days of the date of application. Although data are not available for establishing averages on this subject, it appears that the median application is probably processed in about 10 to 12 days and the average processing time for all cases is probably from 13 to 16 days.

It is to be noted that the time when money is available to the borrower may be dependent on many things after the FHA has issued its commitment to insure the mortgage. From FHA's point of view, the case is suitable for closing as soon as a commitment has been issued, subject to compliance with any specific conditions noted on the commitment. However, actual closing of the loan and endorsement for insurance may be delayed by several months for a construction period with respect to new houses or for periods of a month or longer with respect to existing houses depending on necessary title search, repair activities, or vacating of the property by the seller. FHA processing time does not, of course, include these operations.

STATEMENT OF THE VETERANS' ADMINISTRATION REGARDING ELAPSED TIME IN PROCESSING LOAN APPLICATIONS

In accordance with Congressman TALLE's request, the purpose of this statement is to indicate the processing steps which are necessary between the time a veteran makes application to a lender for a loan and the time at which the veteran is notified that the proposed loan will be made, and to supply such information as is available on the approximate elapsed time involved for the various steps, insofar as VA processing is concerned.

The table which follows outlines the typical processing steps for VA-guaranteed loans which are submitted on a prior approval basis (which represent 65 percent of the volume of applications filed) and where the VA appraisal is not made until after the veteran applies to the lender for a loan—the most time-consuming type of procedure normally encountered. The data on average elapsed time for those steps where VA processing is involved are taken from a special survey conducted by VA in April and May of 1953. A further discussion of the variations for other typical processing procedures follows the table.

Typical processing steps for VA-guaranteed home loans on existing property, including VA appraisal of individual unit and processing of loan application submitted for VA prior approval

AVERAGE ELAPSED TIME FOR VA PROCESSING, PER SAMPLE SURVEY, APRIL-MAY 1953—DAYS¹

1. Veteran applies to lender for loan after he has entered into a contract for purchase.
2. Lender obtains veteran's discharge papers or certificate of eligibility, checks income and credit rating of veteran, and (if not previously done by seller or veteran) requests VA to appraise property.
Total.....¹ 18.0
3. VA appraisal function:²
 - (a) VA receives appraisal request, notifies fee appraiser of appraisal assignment.....¹ 1.4
 - (b) VA's fee appraiser make appraisal of property, checks for compliance with minimum property requirements, and sends report to VA.....¹ 11.2
 - (c) VA reviews fee appraiser's report, checks data on comparable property sales, determines reasonable value, and issues certificate of reasonable value (CRV).....¹ 5.4
4. Lender receives CRV, completes VA loan application and mails to VA with supporting documents.
5. VA loan processing (prior approval loans).³ VA receives loan application, checks eligibility of veteran, reasonable value of property, veteran's ability to repay, etc., prepares certificate of commitment and mails to lender.....¹ 12.4
6. Lender advises veteran that loan will be closed on specified date, provided title to property is found to be satisfactory.³

¹Elapsed time in calendar days, including weekends and holidays.

²Steps 3 and 5 may be concurrent.

³After the loan has been fully disbursed, the lender submits a report to VA, and VA issues the evidence of guaranty.

VA estimates that most offices should be able to process appraisals currently on existing properties (step 3 in the table) within 2 weeks of the time the request for appraisal is received, and hopes to cut the time further by the introduction of streamlined procedures which are to be issued shortly.

The time for VA loan processing (step 5) should be reduced since VA has decentralized entitlement control in January 1954, and it is believed that most offices are currently in a position to issue guaranty commitments within 1 week or less of the time the application is received. However, any substantial increase in the volume of loan activity may, in view of existing personnel limitations, cause the development of some delays in processing in the offices concerned.

In considering the data in the table, it should be emphasized that both the processing steps and the typical elapsed time will vary depending on the circumstances. If the veteran applies for a loan from a supervised lender (e. g., a bank, savings and loan association, or insurance company), which intends to process the loan on an automatic basis—i. e., close the loan and report to the Veterans' Administration after it is disbursed—it is only necessary for the lender to determine that the proposed loan meets certain requirements, e. g., that the applicant is an eligible veteran, that the veteran's income and credit reputation are such that he has an indicated ability to repay the obligation, and that the proposed purchase price of the property does not exceed the reasonable value thereof as determined by the Veterans' Administration, the certificate of reasonable value having been obtained by the lender prior to his commitment to make the loan. In all "automatic loan" cases, steps 4 and 5 in the table would be eliminated, and if the VA appraisal had been made in advance (at the request of the builder or seller) step 3 would also be unnecessary.

With respect to loans originated by non-supervised lenders, and those loans made by supervised lenders where VA's prior approval is requested, it is necessary to submit a formal application to VA for prior approval of the proposed loan. In such cases, the VA appraisal may also have been completed before the veteran makes application to the lender, in which case the only time lapse occasioned by VA processing is that between the receipt of the veteran's loan application by VA and VA's approval thereof (step 5).

In those cases where the VA appraisal has not been completed in advance, the lender or seller would immediately request a Veterans' Administration appraisal of the property. The typical elapsed time required for such processing is dependent on the circumstances. For example, the appraisal of a single completed home can be completed much more expeditiously than the appraisal, based on plans and specifications, of a proposed housing project involving many units. Of course, in most large subdivisions the builder will obtain an appraisal from VA before he starts building operations, and usually before the prospective veteran purchaser is in the picture.

With respect to the determination of the veteran's eligibility, such determinations will not normally delay the processing of the loan application since the Veterans' Administration regional office can determine whether or not the veteran is eligible for GI loan benefits very quickly in practically all cases. In "prior approval" processing, the eligibility determination is a part of the regular processing procedure. In "automatic loan" cases, the lender may require the veteran to obtain a certificate of eligibility, but since most offices are in a position to give 48-hour service on practically all such requests, the eligibility determination would normally be completed concurrently with the lender's actions in checking the veteran's credit and preparing the necessary loan instruments. Accordingly VA's eligibility determinations should ordinarily occasion no delay for either automatic or prior approval loans.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Iowa has expired.

(Mr. TALLE asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

The Clerk read as follows:

"(B) by Federal or State instrumentalities, municipal corporate instrumentalities of one or more States, or limited dividend or redevelopment or housing corporations restricted by Federal or State laws or regulations of State banking or insurance departments as to rents, charges, capital structure, rate of return, or methods of operation.

"(3) The mortgage shall involve a principal obligation (including such initial service charges, appraisal, inspection and other fees as the Commissioner shall approve) in an amount—

"(A) not to exceed $20,000 in the case of property upon which there is located a dwelling designed principally for a one- or two-family residence; or $27,500 in the case of a three-family residence; or $35,000 in the case of a four-family residence; or in the case of a dwelling designed principally for residential use for more than four families (but not exceeding such additional number of family units as the Commissioner may prescribe) $35,000 plus not to exceed $7,000 for each additional family unit in excess of four located on such property; and not to exceed an amount equal to the sum of (i) 95 percent of $8,000 of the appraised value (as of the date the mortgage is accepted for insurance) and (ii) 75 percent of such value in excess of $8,000: Provided, That such mortgage shall not involve a principal obligation exceeding the maximum amount prescribed by the provisions of section 203 in effect prior to the effective date of the Housing Act of 1954, unless the President, pursuant to section 201 of the Housing Act of 1954 has authorized a greater maximum amount, in which event such principal obligation shall not exceed such greater maximum amount; or

"(B) (i) not to exceed $5 million, or, if executed by a mortgagor coming within the provisions of paragraph (2) (B) of this subsection (d), not to exceed $50 million; and

"(ii) Not to exceed 90 percent of the estimated value of the property or project when the proposed improvements are completed (the value of the property or project may include the land, the proposed physical improvements, utilities within the boundaries of the property or project, architect's fees, taxes, and interest during construction, and other miscellaneous charges incident to construction and approved by the Commissioner); and

"(iii) not to exceed, for such part of such property or project as may be attributable to dwelling use, $2,250 per room (or $3,100 per family unit if the number of rooms in such property or project is less than 4 per family unit): Provided, That as to projects to consist of elevator-type structures, the Commissioner may, in his discretion, increase the dollar amount limitation of $2,250 per room to not to exceed $2,700 per room and the dollar amount limitation of $3,100 per family unit to not to exceed $3,400 per family unit, as the case may be, to compensate for the higher cost incident to the construction of elevator-type structures of sound standards of construction and design: Provided further, That a mortgage coming within the provisions of this paragraph (3) (B) shall not involve a principal obligation exceeding the maximum amount prescribed by the provisions of section 207 in effect prior to the effective date of the Housing Act of 1954, unless the President, pursuant to section 201 of the Housing Act of 1954 has authorized a greater maximum amount, in which event such principal obligation shall not exceed such greater maximum amount: And provided further, That nothing contained in paragraph (B) shall preclude the insurance of mortgages covering existing multifamily dwellings to be rehabilitated or reconstructed for the purposes set forth in subsection (a) of this section.

"(4) The mortgage shall provide for complete amortization by periodic payments within such terms as the Commissioner may prescribe, but as to mortgages coming within the provisions of paragraph (3) (A) of this subsection (d) not to exceed the maximum maturity prescribed by the provisions of section 203 in effect prior to the effective date of the Housing Act of 1954, unless the President, pursuant to section 201 of the Housing Act of 1954, has authorized a greater maturity, in which event the maturity of such mortgage shall not exceed such greater maturity: Provided, That such maturity shall not exceed, in any event, 30 years from the date of insurance of the mortgage. The mortgage shall bear interest (exclusive of premium charges for insurance and service charge, if any) at not to exceed 5 percent per annum on the amount of the principal obligation outstanding at any time, or not to exceed such percent per annum not in excess of 6 percent as the Commissioner finds necessary to meet the mortgage market; contain such terms and provisions with respect to the application of the mortgagor's periodic payment to amortization of the principal of the mortgage, insurance, repairs, alterations, payment of taxes, default reserves, delinquency charges, foreclosure proceedings, anticipation of maturity, additional and secondary liens, and other matters as the Commissioner may in his discretion prescribe.

"(e) The Commissioner may at any time, under such terms and conditions as he may prescribe, consent to the release of the mortgagor from his liability under the mortgage or the credit instrument secured thereby, or consent to the release of parts of the mortgaged property from the lien of the mortgage.

"(f) The mortgagee shall be entitled to receive the benefits of the insurance as hereinafter provided—

"(1) as to mortgages meeting the requirements of paragraph (3) (A) of subsection (d) of this section, as provided in section 204 (a) of this act with respect to mortgages insured under section 203; and the provisions of subsections (b), (c), (d), (e), (f), (g), and (h) of section 204 of this act shall be applicable to such mortgages insured under this section, except that all references therein to the Mutual Mortgage Insurance Fund or the fund shall be construed to refer to the Section 220 Housing Insurance Fund and all references therein to section 203 shall be construed to refer to this section; or

"(2) as to mortgages meeting the requirements of paragraph (3) (B) of subsection (d) of this section, as provided in section 207 (g) of this act with respect to mortgages insured under said section 207, and the provisions of subsections (h), (i), (j), (k), and (l) of section 207 of this act shall be applicable to such mortgages insured under this section, and all references therein to the Housing Insurance Fund or the Housing Fund shall be construed to refer to Section 220 Housing Insurance Fund.

"(g) There is hereby created a Section 220 Housing Insurance Fund which shall be used by the Commissioner as a revolving fund for carrying out the provisions of this section, and the Commissioner is hereby authorized to transfer to such fund the sum of $1 million from the War Housing Insurance Fund established pursuant to the provisions of section 602 of this act. General expenses of operation of the Federal Housing Administration under this section may be charged to the Section 220 Housing Insurance Fund.

"Moneys in the Section 220 Housing Insurance Fund not needed for the current operations of the Federal Housing Administration under this section shall be deposited with the Treasurer of the United States to the credit of such fund, or invested in bonds or other obligations of, or in bonds or other obligations guaranteed as to principal and interest by, the United States. The Commissioner may, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, purchase in the open market debentures issued under the provisions of this section. Such purchases shall be made at a price which will provide an investment yield of not less than the yield obtainable from other investments authorized by this section. Debentures so purchased shall be canceled and not reissued.

"Premium charges, adjusted premium charges, and appraisal and other fees received on account of the insurance of any mortgage accepted for insurance under this section, the receipts derived from the property covered by such mortgage and claims assigned to the Commissioner in connection therewith shall be credited to the Section 220 Housing Insurance Fund. The principal of, and interest paid and to be paid on debentures issued under this section, cash adjustments, and expenses incurred in the handling, management, renovation, and disposal of properties acquired under this section shall be charged to such Fund.

"Sec. 221. (a) This section is designed to supplement systems of mortgage insurance under other provisions of the National Housing Act in order to assist in relocating families to be displaced as the result of governmental action in a community respecting which (1) the Housing and Home Finance Administrator has made the certification to the Commissioner provided for by subsection 101 (c) of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended, or (2) there is being carried out a project covered by a Federal-aid contract executed, or prior approval granted, by the Housing and Home Finance Administrator under title I of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended, before the effective date of the Housing Act of 1954. Mortgage insurance under this section shall be available only in those localities or communities which shall have requested such mortgage insurance to be provided: Provided, That the Commissioner shall prescribe such procedures as in his judgment are necessary to secure to the families to be so displaced, referred to above, a preference or priority of opportunity to purchase or rent such dwelling units: And provided further, That the total number of dwelling units in properties covered by mortgages insured under this section in any such community shall not exceed the total number of such dwelling units which the Commissioner determines to be needed for the relocation of families to be so displaced and who would be eligible to obtain the benefits of the insurance authorized by this section.

"(b) The Commissioner is authorized, upon application by the mortgagee, to insure under this section as hereinafter provided any mortgage which is eligible for insurance as provided herein and, upon such terms and conditions as the Commissioner may prescribe, to make commitments for the insurance of such mortgages prior to the date of their execution or disbursement thereon.

"(c) As used in this section, the terms 'mortgage,' 'first mortgage,' 'mortgagee,' 'mortgagor,' 'maturity date,' and 'State' shall have the same meaning as in section 201 of this act.

"(d) To be eligible for insurance under this section, a mortgage shall—

"(1) have been made to and be held by a mortgagee approved by the Commissioner as responsible and able to service the mortgage properly;

"(2) involve a principal obligation (including such initial service charges, appraisal, inspection, and other fees as the Commissioner shall approve) in an amount not to exceed $7,600, except that the Commissioner may by regulation increase this amount to not to exceed $8,600 in any geographical area where he finds that cost levels so require, and not to exceed 100 percent of the appraised value (as of the date the mortgage is accepted for insurance) of a property, upon which there is located a dwelling designed principally for a single-family residence: Provided, That the mortgagor shall be the owner and occupant of the property at the time of the insurance and shall have paid on account of the property at least $200 (which amount may include amounts to cover settlement costs and initial payments for taxes, hazard insurance, mortgage insurance premium, and other prepaid expenses): Provided further, That nothing contained herein shall preclude the Commissioner from issuing a commitment to insure and insuring a mortgage pursuant thereto where the mortgagor is not the owner and occupant and the property is to be built or acquired and repaired or rehabilitated for sale and the insured mortgage financing is required to facilitate the construction or the repair or rehabilitation of the dwelling and provide financing pending the subsequent sale thereof to a qualified owner-occupant, and in such instances the mortgage shall not exceed 85 percent of the appraised value; or

"(3) if executed by a mortgagor which is a private nonprofit corporation or association or other acceptable private nonprofit organization, regulated or supervised under Federal or State laws or by political subdivisions of States or agencies thereof, as to rents, charges, and methods of operation, in such form and in such manner as, in the opinion of the Commissioner, will effectuate the purposes of this section, the mortgage may involve a principal obligation not in excess of $5 million; and not in excess of $7,600 per family unit for such part of such property or project as may be attributable to dwelling use, except that the Commissioner may by regulation increase this amount to not to exceed $8,600 in any geographical area where he finds that cost levels so require, and not in excess of 100 percent of the Commissioner's estimate of the value of the property or project when repaired and rehabilitated for use as rental accommodations for 10 or more families eligible for occupancy as provided in this section; and

"(4) provide for complete amortization by periodic payments within such terms as the Commissioner may prescribe, but not to exceed 40 years from the date of insurance of the mortgage; bear interest (exclusive of premium charges for insurance and service charge, if any) at not to exceed 5 percent per annum on the amount of the principal obligation outstanding at any time, or not to exceed such percent per annum not in excess of 6 percent, as the Commissioner finds necessary to meet the mortgage market; and contain such terms and provisions with respect to the application of the mortgagor's periodic payment to amortization of the principal of the mortgage, insurance, repairs, alterations, payment of taxes, default reserves, delinquency charges, foreclosure proceedings, anticipation of maturity, additional and secondary liens, and other matters as the Commissioner may in his discretion prescribe.

"(e) The Commissioner may at any time, under such terms and conditions as he may prescribe, consent to the release of the mortgagor from his liability under the mortgage or the credit instrument secured thereby, or consent to the release of parts of the mortgaged property from the lien of the mortgage.

"(f) The property or project shall comply with such standards and conditions as the Commissioner may prescribe to establish the acceptability of such property for mortgage insurance.

"(g) The mortgagee shall be entitled to receive the benefits of the insurance as hereinafter provided—

"(1) as to mortgages meeting the requirements of paragraph (2) of subsection (d) of this section, as provided in section 204 (a) of this act with respect to mortgages insured under section 203; and the provisions of subsection (b), (c), (d), (e), (f), (g), and (h) of section 204 of this act shall be applicable to such mortgages insured under this section, except that all references therein to the mutual mortgage insurance fund or the fund shall be construed to refer to the section 221 housing insurance fund and all references therein to section 203 shall be construed to refer to this section; or

"(2) as to mortgages meeting the requirements of paragraph (3) of subsection (d) of this section, as provided in section 207 (g) of this act with respect to mortgages insured under said section 207, and the provisions of subsections (h), (i), (j), (k), and (l) of section 207 of this act shall be applicable to such mortgages insured under this section, and all references therein to the housing insurance fund or the housing fund shall be construed to refer to the section 221 housing insurance fund; or

"(3) in the event any mortgage insured under this section is not in default at the expiration of 20 years from the date the mortgage was endorsed for insurance, the mortgagee shall, within a period thereafter to be determined by the Commissioner, have the option to assign, transfer, and deliver to the Commissioner the original credit instrument and the mortgage securing the same and receive the benefits of the insurance as hereinafter provided in this paragraph, upon compliance with such requirements and conditions as to the validity of the mortgage as a first lien and such other matters as may be prescribed by the Commissioner at the time the loan is endorsed for insurance. Upon such assignment, transfer, and delivery the obligation of the mortgagee to pay the premium charges for insurance shall cease, and the Commissioner shall, subject to the cash adjustment provided herein, issue to the mortgagee debentures having a total face value equal to the amount of the original principal obligation of the mortgage which was unpaid on the date of the assignment, plus accrued interest to such date. Debentures issued pursuant to this paragraph (3) shall be issued in the same manner and subject to the same terms and conditions as debentures issued under paragraph (1) of this subsection, except that the debentures issued pursuant to this paragraph (3) shall be dated as of the date the mortgage is assigned to the Commissioner, and shall bear interest from such date at the going Federal rate determined at the time of issuance. The term "going Federal rate" as used herein means the annual rate of interest which the Secretary of the Treasury shall specify as applicable to the 6-month period (consisting of January through June or July through December) which includes the issuance date of such debentures, which applicable rate for each such 6-month period shall be determined by the Secretary of the Treasury by estimating the average yield to maturity, on the basis of daily closing market bid quotations or prices during the month of May or the month of November, as the case may be, next preceding such 6-month period, on all outstanding marketable obligations of the United States having a maturity date of 8 to 12 years from the first day of such month of May or November (or, if no such obligations are outstanding, the obligation next shorter than 8 years and the obligation next longer than 12 years, respectively, shall be used), and by adjusting such estimated average annual yield to the nearest one-eighth of 1 percent. The Commissioner shall have the same authority with respect to mortgages assigned to him under this paragraph as contained in section 207 (k) and section 207 (l) as to mortgages insured by the Commissioner and assigned to him under section 207 of this act.

"(h) There is hereby created a section 221 housing insurance fund which shall be used by the Commissioner as a revolving fund for carrying out the provisions of this section, and the Commissioner is hereby authorized to transfer to such fund the sum of $1 million from the War Housing Insurance Fund established pursuant to the provisions of section 602 of this act. General expenses of operation of the Federal Housing Administration under this section may be charged to the section 221 housing insurance fund.

"Moneys in the section 221 housing insurance fund not needed for the current operations of the Federal Housing Administration under this section shall be deposited with the Treasurer of the United States to the credit of such fund, or invested in bonds or other obligations of, or in bonds or other obligations guaranteed as to principal and interest by, the United States. The Commissioner may, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, purchase in the open market debentures issued under the provisions of this section. Such purchases shall be made at a price which will provide an investment yield of not less than the yield obtainable from other investments authorized by this section. Debentures so purchased shall be canceled and not reissued.

"Premium charges, adjusted premium charges, and appraisal and other fees received on account of the insurance of any mortgage accepted for insurance under this section, the receipts derived from the property covered by such mortgage and claims assigned to the Commissioner in connection therewith shall be credited to the section 221 housing insurance fund. The principal of, and interest paid and to be paid on debentures issued under this section, cash adjustments, and expenses incurred in the handling, management, renovation, and disposal of properties acquired under this section shall be charged to such fund."

SEC. 124. Title II of said act, as amended, is hereby further amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section to transfer to title II the mortgage insurance program in connection with the sale of certain publicly owned property as contained in section 610 of title VI; the insurance of mortgages to refinance existing loans insured under section 608 of title VI and sections 903 and 908 of title IX; and to authorize the insurance under title II of mortgages assigned to the Commissioner under insurance contracts and mortgages held by the Commissioner in connection with the sale of property acquired under insurance contracts:

"Miscellaneous housing insurance

(a) Notwithstanding any of the provisions of this title, and without regard to limitations upon eligibility contained in section 203 or section 207, the Commissioner is authorized, upon application by the mortgagee, to insure or make commitments to insure under section 203 or section 207 of this title any mortgage—

Additional amendments relating to Federal Housing Administration

"SEC. 126. Title VI of said act, as amended, is hereby amended by adding the following new section at the end thereof:

"SEC. 128. Section 803 (a) of said act, as amended, is amended by striking out "July 1, 1954" and substituting therefor "June 30, 1955".

"SEC. 129. Section 104 of the Defense Housing and Community Facilities and Services Act of 1951, as amended, is hereby amended by striking out the material within the parentheses in clause (a) and substituting therefor "except pursuant to a commitment to insure issued on or before such date".

Mr. WOLCOTT (interrupting the reading of title I). Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the further reading of title I be dispensed with and that the whole title be open to amendment from this point on.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, and I shall not object, I would like to know where we would be after title I is read. This is page 146, line 15?

The CHAIRMAN. The title ends on page 146, line 15.

Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. WOLCOTT:

Page 122, in line 17, strike out "located in" and insert in lieu thereof "where such dwelling accommodations are located in (1)."

Page 122, insert before the period in line 22 a comma and the following: "or (2) the area of a project covered by a Federal-aid contract which has been executed, or with respect to which prior approval has been granted, by the Housing and Home Finance Administrator under title I of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended, before the effective date of the Housing Act of 1954."

Page 123, strike out lines 7 through 9 and insert in lieu thereof "date of their execution or disbursement thereon."

Page 123, in line 16, strike out "The" and insert in lieu thereof "Unless located in an area referred to in clause (2) of subsection (a) of this section, the."

Page 123, in line 22, strike out "That," and insert in lieu thereof "That (with respect to such delineated area)."

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, may I say that a copy of this amendment has been submitted to the minority members of the committee with the explanation that this is more or less of an oversight when we considered the bill in the committee. I do not think there will be any objection to it.

May I make this statement, that this amendment simply makes clear that the new FHA section 220 insuring authority would also operate in connection with a present slum clearance or urban redevelopment program which is now underway.

In addition to the changes proposed by this amendment, when we reach page 182 of the bill it will also be necessary to insert some additional language in connection with accomplishing the purposes of this amendment.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I am sure there will be no objection to the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WOLCOTT].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MULTER: At page 119, line 11, strike out "estimated value of" and insert in lieu thereof "lesser of either the appraised value or the estimated cost of."

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Chairman, this is the last of a series of amendments that I will offer with reference to the defects in this bill. I called your attention to the credit controls, and you refused to improve the bill. I have called your attention to the service charges which should not be imposed. I have called your attention to the necessity of preventing kickbacks when I offered the amendment to prevent mortgaging-out.

Other very serious defects have been pointed out, with little hope of any attention from this body.

Now, there is one more that I want to call to your attention.

These defects appear in almost every title in this bill.

This would be a good place to set forth the minority views of our committee, as follows:

[H. Rept. 1429, pt. 2, 83d Cong., 2d sess.]

HOUSING ACT OF 1954

(Mr. SPENCE, from the Committee on Banking and Currency, submitted the following minority report:)

This report is filed on behalf of those members whose signatures appear at the end of the report.

We of the minority find ourselves in fundamental disagreement with the majority on numerous major aspects of H. R. 7839. These include: (1) Failure to maintain traditional veterans' housing preferences; (2) failure to provide a realistic workable secondary mortgage market; (3) delegation to the President of authority to set maximum interest rates on FHA and VA mortgages; (4) delegation to the President of authority to control real-estate credit; (5) failure to authorize any units of low-rent public housing; (6) failure to establish safeguards against "mortgaging-out" under the various FHA rental housing programs; and (7) failure to require builders of FHA and VA houses to give the home buyer a warranty against defective construction.

In order that the House may be fully cognizant of the seriousness of these deficiencies, a detailed analysis of each is set forth below.

VETERANS' PREFERENCE

The minority regrets that your committee has not seen fit to continue the traditional congressional policy of veterans' preference in the field of housing. We believe the veteran, by his wartime service, earned the right to the preference that he has been accorded. Even if this were not true, however, he would be entitled to this preference because his lengthy absence from civilian life has placed him at a decided disadvantage in obtaining adequate housing. Unfortunately H. R. 7839 does much to dilute that preference.

Amendments to title II of the National Housing Act contained in title I of the bill would have immeasurable effect on the GI home-loan program in several respects. The proposed increase in loan-to-value ratios and the reduction in cash downpayments, together with the increase in the permissible term of the loan which will make lower monthly carrying charges possible, will make considerably more liberal financing terms possible for home purchasers under the FHA program. This, of course, would tend to dilute the preference which has been available to veterans obtaining GI financing, since the amendments would place nonveterans in virtually an equal position in respect to housing credit terms.

On the other hand, it is noted that the only action which the President could take in respect to VA-guaranteed home loans would be to make GI loan terms more restrictive. All eligible veterans, including recent veterans of the Korean conflict, will be deprived to a considerable degree of the preferred position they heretofore enjoyed in respect to housing credit.

In the reconstitution of the Federal National Mortgage Association provided under title III of the bill, there is no provision that preferred support continue to be given to GI loans under the reconstituted secondary market facility. Similarly, GI loans are not enumerated among the special Fannie May assistance programs authorized by subsection 301 (b) of the bill.

Under present law, the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs is authorized, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, to establish such rate of interest on VA mortgages, not in excess of $4\frac{1}{2}$ percent, as he may find the loan market demands. The National Housing Act provides similar authority for adjustment of maximum interest rates by FHA up to a maximum of 6 percent for most home mortgages. Since the Federal Housing Commissioner has adequate authority already to authorize an upward adjustment of the interest rate on FHA loans, the effect of section 201 is to make an upward adjustment of the interest rate for GI loans possible whenever the mortgage bankers decide to tighten the market.

The bill provides that the average yield on all marketable Government bonds with a maturity of 15 years or more shall be the base for comparison with FHA and VA interest rates. While the majority of VA loans are written for terms of 20 or 25 years, under the statutory maximum of 30 years, the best available estimates indicate that such mortgages will probably have an average life of not over 10 or 12 years. Accordingly the inclusion of extremely long-term issues such as the $3\frac{3}{4}$ -percent issue maturing in 1983 in the average used for comparison with mortgage interest rates will result in maintaining an artificially high maximum interest rate on home mortgages for veterans.

FEDERAL NATIONAL MORTGAGE ASSOCIATION

Title III is the most important section of the Housing Act of 1954. An adequate and readily available supply of mortgage financing is a prime requirement for a high and sustained volume of homebuilding. Yet, according to the consensus of testimony before the committee, title III in its present form imposes unduly restrictive requirements upon FNMA and may actually have the effect of deterring mortgage lending instead of sustaining it. Specifically it was pointed out to the committee that the 3-percent nonrefundable contribution to the Federal National Mortgage Association, to be borne by the lender upon mortgage sales to FNMA, will unduly restrict use of the facility. It is noted, in passing, that it is unlikely lenders will assume the burden of the 3-percent contribution. Rather, the homebuilder, or more likely, the home buyer will ultimately pay it. Consequently, under the bill Federal credit (and equity capital provided by home purchasers) will be used to build up a multi-million-dollar secondary market reserve facility which will then be turned over to banks and insurance companies, who sold mortgages to FNMA but otherwise contributed little to acquire ownership share.

Under title III, the FNMA requirement to purchase at or below market price, the 3-percent contribution and the service fee, may result in a discount on home mortgages of $6\frac{1}{2}$ to 7 percent under today's market condition.

The president of the National Association of Homebuilders testified:

"On a $12,000 loan, for example, this formula would result in a cost for permanent mortgage financing of $750 to $850. This equals, and probably exceeds, the extremely high discounts which characterized the mortgage market during last summer's unusual credit stringency."

Furthermore, the requirement that the Association liquidate its portfolio of old mortgages and limit its new purchases to mortgages which can be readily resold does not contribute additionally to the stability of the mortgage market now provided by conventional private brokerage operations. These requirements in fact create the danger that an undue increase in the mortgage supply arising from FNMA sales may lead to price declines.

Preference heretofore accorded GI mortgage loans in the secondary market operations of the FNMA is not continued under the bill. GI loans are not specifically included in the category of home mortgage loans for which FNMA is authorized to provide special assistance. Neither, apparently, is the special assistance which FNMA has given FHA section 213 cooperatives to be continued. The bill establishes no priority for use of the limited total of $700 million authorized for the special assistance secondary market operations under section 301 (b). In the aggregate this amount could only assist the construction of approximately 70,000 dwelling units. To operate practically in the field of housing that needs special assistance by secondary market support, a system of priorities and a larger sum would appear to be required.

Finally it would appear that an appropriate policy statement indicating specifically the purpose that a secondary market facility is intended to serve should be included.

The National Association of Home Builders, representing the industry that does the constructing, has suggested the following:

"It should help provide an adequate and stabilized mortgage market so that homes may be provided in the volume, in areas, of the size, and at the prices that the home-buying market requires."

The provisions of title III, in the opinion of the NAHB, "will prove unworkable and possibly do more to depress than to assist the mortgage market. Its terms go far beyond those reasonably necessary to prevent excessive use and, in effect, amount to a complete denial of the facility to the very users for whom it is intended."

INTEREST RATES

Under the authority vested in the President by title II of H. R. 7839 to adjust interest rates, fees, and service charges, maximum financing charges on federally aided home mortgage loans may go as high as 7 percent on the lowest priced housing (the new FHA sec. 221 program), $6\frac{1}{2}$ percent on the other FHA-insured mortgages and $5\frac{1}{2}$ percent on VA-guaranteed home mortgage loans.

In this connection it is pointed out that under section 203, the FHA Commissioner already has authority to raise interest rates on most insured mortgages as high as 6 percent. On the other hand, under present law the maximum rate on GI home loans cannot be higher than $4\frac{1}{2}$ percent. Consequently, it appears that the net effect of the new authority proposed under section 201 of the bill is to enable increases in interest rates to be made on GI home loans.

Concerning the desirability of establishing maximum limits and using automatic formulas as guides in setting effective financing charges on federally aided home mortgages, we recall the witness representing the Veterans' Administration stating that there is "considerable administrative experience to the effect that maximums tend to become minimums as well."

Provision for a $2\frac{1}{2}$ percent spread over the yield on long-term marketable Government bonds under title II of the bill represents a rise of 1 percentage point in the spread that investors were willing to accept prior to the inauguration of the tight credit policies in early 1951. In view of the considerable easing of the money and credit supply since mid-1953, it does not appear necessary to provide for an increase in the traditional spread of $1\frac{1}{2}$ percent between the maximum rate on federally aided home mortgages and the yield on long-term Government bonds, unless it is intended to reimpose restrictive tight money conditions on the economy.

Furthermore, in view of the testimony presented before the committee that the estimated average life of VA and FHA mortgages is considerably less than 15 years, using the yields on bonds with from 15 to 30 years remaining to maturity as the basis for setting maximum interest rates on such mortgages is highly questionable.

CONTROL OF REAL ESTATE CREDIT

Subsection 201 (5) would give the President authority to control real estate credit. It was under similar authority contained in the Defense Production Act of 1950 that regulation X was issued.

In the opinion of the minority, real estate credit controls are in reality a rationing mechanism, not a credit control mechanism. They are, moreover, a one-way rationing mechanism. They ration housing solely on the basis of the ability of the people who need housing to raise the downpayment. In recommending the termination of real estate credit controls on June 16, 1952 (p. 15, H. Rept. 2177, 82d Cong., 2d sess.), your Committee on Banking and Currency stated:

"Evidence was presented to your committee that the inevitable discriminatory aspect of credit controls; namely, that they bear most heavily upon those in the lower income groups, who have less ready cash, had in the existing situation overshadowed the anti-inflationary aspect."

In 1953, a proposal to restore this authority was rejected by your committee.

Only a grave national emergency would justify the reimposition of real estate credit controls. In the admitted absence of such an emergency, the minority is opposed to granting the President authority to reimpose them.

LOW-RENT PUBLIC HOUSING

Several facts were developed throughout the hearings on H. R. 7839 with reference to the need for congressional action on the size of the low-rent public housing program, even though this issue is not dealt with in this measure.

Emphasis was placed by administration spokesmen and by a large majority of other witnesses on proposals to accomplish slum clearance, urban redevelopment, and urban renewal. Great hope was expressed that new programs under sections 220 and 221 under the Federal Housing Administration would make it possible to rehabilitate old homes, sound in structure, and provide new housing at low cost and with liberal financing terms for families presently living in substandard housing.

The minority agrees totally with the objectives of these programs. However, if old housing is to be rehabilitated and refinanced, one fact is very clear. A substantial number of families, probably half, presently living in the substandard units will be forced to vacate because their economic status will not permit them to live in the more expensive remodeled and modernized homes. It is also a fact that a program of rehabilitation will reduce, rather than enlarge, the housing supply. In those instances where slum housing is demolished as part of an urban renewal program, at least half of the tenants of the old property will have insufficient incomes to permit home purchases even of the proposed $7,600 house ($8,600 in high-cost areas), if it can be built, with no downpayment and 40 years to pay.

It follows, therefore, that unless provision is made to rehouse low-income families, displaced through either renewal or slum clearance, these programs cannot be undertaken and the objectives of H. R. 7839 can never be realized.

The President in his housing message recognized that fact when he urged that 35,000 units of low-rent public housing be provided in fiscal year 1955 and during each of the following 3 years. Administrator Albert M. Cole indicated that such a program was essential for the rehousing of many displaced families. While it is the opinion of the minority, that a program of 35,000 public-housing units would be entirely inadequate, even if limited to families displaced by slum clearance, urban renewal, or for other public purposes, it would at least have been something.

The entire issue of public housing has always been within the initial jurisdiction of the House Committee on Banking and Currency. The Housing Act of 1949 provided for 810,000 of such units to be built at the rate of 135,000 a year for a 6-year period.

That still represents basic national policy, except as it has been amended by legislative limitations on appropriation bills voted under a waiver of rules. The size of the program goes to the very heart of the public housing issue. But no reference to size is contained in H. R. 7839.

The minority recommends that the proposed Housing Act of 1954 be amended by striking unit limitations adopted in the passage of the Independent Offices Appropriation Acts for fiscal years 1953 and 1954, thereby returning to the basic provisions of the Housing Act of 1949. If that were done the President would have to increase or decrease the size of the public-housing program in line with economic needs and considerations. It would make it possible for him to carry out the program he proposed, and to meet the needs of families of low income displaced by the slum clearance and urban renewal program he recommends. It is the desire of the minority to make his program realistically workable.

At the same time, by establishing the size of the low-rent public-housing program as part of a total housing program, it would be returned to its place of proper jurisdiction; namely, with the basic legislative committee, the House Committee on Banking and Currency.

PROTECTION AGAINST MORTGAGING-OUT

It is the opinion of the minority that every reasonable legislative safeguard must be provided against abuses in existing and proposed rental-housing programs where the Federal Government is assuming large risks. Members of Congress will recall that under the FHA 608 rental-housing program there were instances where mortgagors completed projects for less than the amount of the mortgage and pocketed the difference plus normal profits. This was commonly referred to as mortgaging-out.

When FHA title IX, as part of the Defense Housing and Community Facilities and Services Act of 1951, was adopted, it was amended with bipartisan sponsorship to require that the mortgagor certify upon completion of the physical improvements on the mortgaged property the amount, if any, by which the proceeds of the mortgage loan exceeded the actual costs of the physical improvements, and to pay within 60 days after such certification to the mortgagee for application to the reduction of the principal amount of the mortgage the amount so certified to be in excess of actual cost. It provided protection against kickbacks and other abuses. Last year, the Congress added an identical provision to FHA title VIII (Wherry Act military housing).

Efforts of the minority to protect the new programs under FHA section 220 and 221 and existing programs under FHA sections 207 (rental housing) and 213 (cooperatives) with identical safeguards were defeated.

MANDATORY BUILDER'S WARRANTY

The minority feels that the buyer of a 1- or 2-family house, built with Federal assistance, should be given a warranty by the builder that the house has been built according to the plans and specifications on which the Federal assistance was based. Such a provision was included in last year's housing bill, as reported by your committee. It passed the House without opposition, but was eliminated in conference. A mandatory builder's warranty would carry out the chief recommendation resulting from the Rains subcommittee's investigation of housing constructed under the FHA and VA programs. The subcommittee found that the purchasers of FHA and VA houses generally bought through purchase contracts which did not contain, or incorporate by reference, plans or specifications which would in any way protect the buyers. On the basis of these contracts they rarely had any legal basis for suit against the builders. The minority feels that a mandatory builder's warranty is an absolute necessity if the defective construction of FHA and VA houses is to be prevented in the future.

In taking this position, however, the minority wishes to emphasize that the requirement of a warranty is not a reflection on the honest builder. In fact, providing the buyer with a warranty is a common practice in many other lines of industry. When a person buys a house he is, as a rule, making a lifetime investment and he should have reasonable protection.

It is the intention of the minority to offer amendments on the floor of the House with the view to correcting the several major deficiencies, described above, contained in H. R. 7839. We are firmly convinced that the adoption by the House of these amendments to the Housing Act of 1954 is an absolute necessity if the President's laudable recommendations to provide the country with a new and dynamic housing program are to be transferred by this Congress into concrete statute form.

BRENT SPENCE, WRIGHT PATMAN, ALBERT RAINS, ABRAHAM J. MULTER, CHARLES B. DEANE, GEORGE D. O'BRIEN, HUGH J. ADDONIZIO, ISIDORE DOLLINGER, RICHARD BOLLING, WILLIAM A. BARRETT, WAYNE L. HAYS, BARRATT O'HARA, EUGENE J. MCCARTHY.

I can do no more than make the record.

We on the Democratic side of the aisle have placed the responsibility upon the shoulders of the majority party. Let them try to explain when they go back to their districts why this program does not produce any housing and why it does not give the homeowner an opportunity to buy a house, as they pretend this bill will do and why the homeowner, veteran and nonveteran, alike, will overpay.

Heretofore we have required mortgages to be made on the basis of the cost of construction. The estimated cost of construction was used in determining the amount of the mortgage. In this bill, instead of using "estimated cost" the words "estimated value" are substituted. The Agency told us if you used the words "appraised value" you would be using a term that is known in the real estate trade, that has definite meaning. It has definition attributed to it by the courts. You know where you are going. But the majority of the committee would not accept that. They insisted on sticking to the words, "estimated value," so that in estimating a $10,000 home you can fix a $15,000 estimated value for it and thus get a fictitiously high mortgage, which FHA will insure and guarantee.

This amendment seeks to strike out the language "estimated value" and put in its place "the lesser of either, the appraised value or the estimated cost" of the unit; and, in that way at least, give some additional safeguard. This will set up in this bill some standard so that we will not let the speculative builder run away with this program and take out of the mortgage profits which he should get only out of the building.

I urge the adoption of the amendment.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

This matter was studied by the committee exhaustively. We had testimony from those who are more familiar with this type of financing than any others, noticeably the Bowery Savings Bank of the gentleman's hometown of New York. This is a safeguard against the practices which the gentleman was afraid of, in his talk yesterday.

At the present time, for example, on 213, they are what we call cooperative projects, their insurance can go as high as 95 percent. This language is to protect the Government and the cooperative veteran members themselves. The amendment surely should be defeated.

Mr. YOUNGER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Yesterday, the gentleman from New York [Mr. MULTER] talked about the builders as though they were doing a great injury. He overlooked the fact that in the history of the FHA, the 608, or the military housing, was based on cost. It was true that basing it on cost there were mortgages insured which had value greater than the construction cost. The defense housing, in 207, was based on value. There was no trouble with that. The Wherry Act housing was on cost. The 213, the cooperatives, were on cost. Now you want to change the estimated value, which is the same term that was used in title 2.

As a matter of fact, the term "value estimator" is a common expression. I am talking here on one subject, at least, that I know something about, because I think I am the only Member of the House who is a member of the appraisal union, the American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers. I have spent my life in this. What you want to do is to restore the cost, and in restoring the cost you are opening the doors. That is what the gentleman has been attempting to do repeatedly.

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. YOUNGER. Just for a question.

Mr. MULTER. Before I can put the question I must direct the gentleman's attention to the language in the amendment. This does not restore "cost." It says the lesser of either the appraised value or the estimated cost.

The question I wanted to direct to the gentleman is, Is it not a fact, as an appraiser who knows his business, that wherever we find now the word "value" in the Housing Acts up to now it has been coupled with the word "appraised," in the law heretofore and even in this bill in various places? We still use the phrase "appraised value." What I am objecting to is that you are now substituting for "appraised value," which has a very definite meaning in the trade, the phrase "estimated value." I say take, instead of estimated value, the lesser of either the appraised value or the cost.

Mr. YOUNGER. I think the gentleman will find that "estimated value" is the correct term. It is well recognized in the appraisal field. When you tie that in with the estimated cost, then you are tying it in improperly, insofar as the appraisal work is concerned. All you are doing is simply balling up the whole situation.

Mr. MULTER. Does the gentleman say that a man should get the higher of the two, either the cost or the estimated value?

Mr. YOUNGER. I have faith enough in the appraisal policies, the appraisal procedure that has been followed by the FHA, as it is carefully worked out. Where you have left it to the appraised value or the estimated value you have had no trouble, but where you have tied it in with cost, as you did with the military housing under the Wherry Act, you have had trouble. If you are going to do this again, as you are attempting to do, you will institute more trouble.

Mr. MULTER. We have never tried it this way.

Mr. YOUNGER. I hope the amendment is defeated, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. TALLE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. YOUNGER. I yield to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. TALLE. If I am correctly informed, the gentleman from California has many years of experience as an appraiser under FHA; is that not correct?

Mr. YOUNGER. No. I went through the first appraisal school, set that up for the FHA and selected all the appraisers in the 20 western States. I have made loans under it and have worked carefully with it. However, I was never an official appraiser of theirs. I was with the HOLC.

Mr. TALLE. The gentleman does not say it, but on my own account I will say, Mr. Chairman, that certainly the gentleman from California is the voice of experience speaking in the appraisal field.

Mr. YOUNGER. I thank the gentleman.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York.

The amendment was rejected.

The Clerk proceeded to read title II.

Mr. WOLCOTT (interrupting the reading of the bill). Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that title II in its entirety be considered as read and open to amendment at any point.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Title II is as follows:

TITLE II—HOME MORTGAGE INTEREST RATES AND TERMS

SEC. 201. On the basis of reviews, which shall be made from time to time at the request of the President by a committee consisting of the Secretary of the Treasury, as Chairman, the Housing and Home Finance Administrator, and the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs, of conditions affecting the mortgage investment market (including current market yields on comparable investments such as long-term obligations of the United States and of States and municipalities and long-term corporate bonds), and after taking into consideration conditions in the building industry and the national economy, the President is hereby authorized, without regard to any other provision of law except provisions hereafter enacted expressly in limitation hereof, to establish from time to time—

(1) the maximum rates of interest (exclusive of premium charges for insurance and service charges, if any) for various classifications of residential mortgage loans insured or guaranteed or made under the National

Housing Act, as amended, or the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944, as amended: Provided, That no such maximum rate of interest shall, at the time established by the President, exceed 2½ percent plus the annual rate of interest determined by the Secretary of the Treasury, at the request of the President, by estimating the average yield to maturity, on the basis of daily closing market bid quotations or prices during the calendar month next preceding the establishment of such maximum rate of interest, on all outstanding marketable obligations of the United States having a maturity date of 15 years or more from the first day of such next preceding month, and by adjusting such estimated average annual yield to the nearest one-eighth of 1 percent;

(2) the maximum financing charges for various classifications of loans as to which financial institutions are insured against losses under title I of the National Housing Act, as amended;

(3) the rate of interest for debentures issued under the National Housing Act, as amended, in connection with defaults upon mortgages insured thereunder: Provided, That no such rate shall, at the time established by the President, exceed the annual rate of interest determined by the Secretary of the Treasury in the manner set forth in numbered clause (1) of this section;

(4) the maximum fees and charges permitted to cover the costs of the origination of, including the costs of supervision of non-Government-assisted construction loan disbursements in connection with, residential mortgage loans insured or guaranteed under the National Housing Act, as amended, or the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944, as amended, and the maximum special service charges, if any, permitted in connection with those mortgages insured under section 203 of said National Housing Act for which such special service charges may be found to be appropriate by the President on the basis of the low original principal amounts of the mortgages or on the basis of other factors impeding an adequate flow of credit for the type of housing involved and in connection with mortgages insured under section 220 or 221 of the National Housing Act, as amended; and

(5) the maximum ratios of loan to value and the maximum maturities with respect to residential mortgage loans eligible for assistance under the National Housing Act, as amended, or the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944, as amended, and the maximum dollar amount limitation per room or per family unit with respect to such mortgage loans eligible for assistance under the National Housing Act, as amended: Provided, That no such maximum ratio of loan to value and no such maximum dollar amount limitation in the case of mortgages insured under the National Housing Act, as amended, shall be in excess of the applicable maximum ratio of loan to value or the applicable maximum dollar amount limitation per room or per family unit prescribed by that act, and no such maximum maturity shall be in excess of the applicable maximum maturity prescribed by the National Housing Act, as amended, or the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944, as amended: Provided, further, That in establishing the maximum ratio of loan to value there shall be accorded to veterans obtaining loans made, guaranteed or insured under the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944, as amended, a preference of not less than 5 percent on the first $8,000 of the value of the related unit and 5 percent of such value in excess of $8,000: And provided further, That no action by the President pursuant to this section shall apply with respect to loans made, or loans with respect to which a contract of insurance or guaranty or a firm commitment to insure or guarantee has been entered into, under the National Housing Act, as amended, or the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944, as amended, prior to such action.

SEC. 202. The Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944, as amended, is hereby amended by adding the following new section at the end of title III:

"Sec. 515. With respect to mortgage loans for the purchase or construction of residential property (not including farm homes) guaranteed, insured, or made pursuant to this title, the Administrator shall make such rules and regulations concerning (1) maximum rates of interest for such residential mortgage loans, (2) maximum ratios of loan to value and maximum maturities with respect to such residential mortgage loans, and (3) maximum fees and charges permitted to cover the costs of the origination of, and of the supervision of construction loan disbursements in connection with, such residential mortgage loans as may be necessary to carry out limitations relating thereto established by the President pursuant to the authority vested in him by section 201 of the Housing Act of 1954."

SEC. 203. Section 501 (b) of the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944, as amended, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"(b) Any loan made to a veteran for the purposes specified in subsection (a) of this section 501, may, notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (a) of section 500 of this title relating to the percentage or aggregate amount of loan to be guaranteed, be guaranteed, if otherwise made pursuant to the provisions of this title, in an amount not exceeding 60 percent of the loan: Provided, That the aggregate amount of any guaranties to a veteran under this title shall not exceed $7,500, nor shall any gratuities payable under subsection (c) of section 500 of this title exceed the amount which as payable on loans guaranteed in accordance with the maxima provided for in subsection (a) of section 500 of this title."

SEC. 204. Section 504 of the Housing Act of 1950, as amended, is hereby repealed.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. PATMAN: On page 146, strike out line 16 and all that follows down to page 151, line 22.

STRIKE OUT TITLE II

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, by striking out title II, you strike out the high interest mandatory provision in this law for borrowers to buy or build homes. In addition to that, you strike out the attempt that is written into this title to restore regulation X. Regulation X was under the Defense Production Act of 1951. It became very unpopular when the emergency was over. Now, with no emergency, this bill would restore completely regulation X. May I invite your attention to the fact that on page 147 of the bill, the phrase is used "The President is hereby authorized, without regard to any other provision of law except provisions hereafter enacted expressly in limitation hereof, to establish from time to time—" these regulations that I refer to. Now read again, if you please, may I suggest to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BROWNSON] who had an amendment adopted yesterday concerning lower down payments—that means that if this is adopted the Brownson amendment is out the window. And read again this amendment. It says, "The President is authorized without regard to any other provision of law except provisions hereafter enacted expressly in limitation hereof to establish from time to time" these things. Read again your veterans' 4½-percent-interest law. It is worthless, it is out the window, if this is enacted by this Congress. There are two things it will do. First, it will restore regulation X, which you do not want. Another thing it will destroy the veteran's right to get his interest rate at 4½ percent and make it 6 percent under this, if you vote for it. In addition to that, it will increase the pattern of interest rates a minimum of 1 percent. I do not believe you want either one of the three, and the way to get rid of them is to strike out title II.

Mr. MERRILL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. I yield.

Mr. MERRILL. Is the gentleman not aware of the fact there has been an authorization in housing legislation to increase interest rates all along, and that at no time has the actual interest rate fixed by legal authority gone up to the maximum. Therefore, history argues against your statement that the maximum allowed here is going to be the actual interest rate. Is that not true?

Mr. PATMAN. Let us forget history and take the present, current situation. Interest rates were raised on veterans a maximum from 4 percent to 4½ percent. Why? Because long-term Government bonds at 2½ percent went down to 89. That made those bonds actually earn or draw about 3 percent interest. Therefore, the money lenders and investors had an unanswerable argument to raise the interest rate to 4½ percent so that there would be a spread of 1½ percent from the 3 percent to the 4½ percent. There was no argument against that. It was perfectly justified. But, now the situation has changed and the bonds have gone back to par. The interest rates have gone back to 2½ percent. Therefore, veterans' interest rates should have come down to 4 percent. But you people are keeping it at 4½ percent. It ought to be reduced today. It ought to be reduced today, but instead of reducing it today, if you pass this, they will put another 1½ percent interest on top of it, and throw your veterans' preference out of the window.

Mr. MERRILL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield at this point?

Mr. PATMAN. I yield briefly to the gentleman for a question.

Mr. MERRILL. Will the gentleman say whether or not at this time even at 4½ percent interest, the mortgages are selling at a premium, or at a discount?

Mr. PATMAN. I am not concerned about that in this discussion.

Mr. MERRILL. The fact is they are not selling at a premium.

Mr. PATMAN. There are more applications today than they have ever had.

Mr. MERRILL. Is it not true that if the mortgage rates were overvalued these mortgages would be selling at a premium and they actually are not?

Mr. PATMAN. Why do you want to sell them at a premium? There is no reason for requiring that they sell at a premium.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Texas has expired.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 5 additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection? There was no objection.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. I yield.

Mr. COOPER. Am I correct in my understanding that the gentleman's amendment includes the position urged by the American Legion and the veterans' organizations?

Mr. PATMAN. Absolutely.

Mr. COOPER. That section 201 and 201 (1) be stricken out of the bill?

Mr. PATMAN. Yes.

Mr. COLE of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. Please do not insist that I yield. I cannot yield. I have only a few minutes.

I want to quote an organization that I have never quoted before in this House, but they are so right that I must repeat to you what the National Home Builders Association has said. In their bulletin they state:

ANOTHER REGULATION X?

There is strong administration pressure to keep in its hands the powers to vary not only interest rates but also FHA down payments, mortgage amortization terms, fees, and charges, and maximum dollar limits per room or per unit. This is urged by Government spokesmen as necessary to permit stimulation or contraction of the home-building economy.

Delegation of these powers to administrative officials is vigorously opposed by NAHB as a serious threat to the stability of the industry, disruptive of all normal confidence and long-term planning. No emergency exists as during regulation X days, hence there is no sound basis for such administrative control. It would be confusing to the public as well as an undue delegation of congressional authority. While the authority would be vested in the President, as a practical matter, a number of anonymous Federal officials would determine whether or not and at what point regulations would specify how much buyers would pay down. HHFA Administrator Cole has already testified that, if the bill is enacted in its present form, down payment limits will be established below the bill's maximum of 95 percent of $8,000 plus 75 percent of the excess.

He has already testified to that. Any time you write this language into the bill—that the President is hereby authorized, without regard to any provision of law except the provisions hereafter enacted expressly—you are throwing the Brownson amendment out of the window because Mr. Cole has given you notice by testifying before the Committee on Banking and Currency as to what he would do.

Mr. TEAGUE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. TEAGUE. Will the gentleman tell the House who testified in behalf of this section or who was interested in seeing that this section becomes law?

Mr. PATMAN. Well, the mortgage lenders, and the lenders generally are pretty much interested in this 2½-percent provision. It is a boost of 1 percent in interest rates when interest rates ought to be going down. Naturally they want more interest if they can get it; naturally you cannot blame them if they can persuade Congress to give them a big bonus of several hundred million dollars a year.

Mr. COLE of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. I yield.

Mr. COLE of Missouri. Following the question asked by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. COOPER] as to what the American Legion thought about this, I find that in title 2; but they also suggest that 901—

Mr. PATMAN. Oh, that is a different subject.

Mr. COLE of Missouri. But will you tell me where that is in the bill?

Mr. PATMAN. Oh, it is away over. A motion will be made to strike that out also.

Mr. McDONOUGH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. McDONOUGH. The gentleman has given the House the impression that the President has this exclusive authority. The gentleman will remember that I insisted in committee that the Housing Administrator, the Veterans' Affairs Director, and the Secretary of the Treasury advise the President.

Mr. PATMAN. I am sorry the gentleman brought that out.

Mr. McDONOUGH. The gentleman gave the House the impression that the President had this authority.

Mr. PATMAN. Yes, I did, because I am protecting your President. I think a lot of Mr. Eisenhower. He is a great man and doing his very best to make a good President and I want to help him. I am not willing to belittle him by saying he is compelled by congressional law to only confer with certain of his inferiors. That is what you would do by that. It is no compliment to the President and I am sorry the gentleman brought it up.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Texas has expired.

(By unanimous consent Mr. PATMAN was allowed to proceed for 3 additional minutes.)

Mr. MERRILL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. I yield.

Mr. MERRILL. Does not the gentleman realize that unless title II is enacted there is no possibility under this bill for the reduced amount of down payments provision which the gentleman mentioned under Mr. BROWNSON's amendment to go into effect at all? It is only if this title II is enacted that that can go into effect.

Mr. PATMAN. The gentleman is entirely mistaken. This is the mortgage lender's provision; this is the investor's provision; this is the banker's bonus bill part. You do not want this. There is no reason to give an extra bonus when interest rates are going down. You must keep in step with the times. You know, we are in easy money now; an aboutface has taken place.

Mr. MERRILL. Is not the gentleman aware that the maximum provisions as provided under this bill can only go into effect if the President acts under title II?

Mr. PATMAN. I cannot agree with the gentleman.

Mr. SECREST. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. I am glad to yield to the gentleman.

Mr. SECREST. I would like to point out that the Committee on Veterans' Affairs composed of 14 Republicans and 14 Democrats is as far as I know the only committee of this House politically evenly balanced. This committee considered this section and section 901, and unanimously agree that they are a disservice to the veterans and not a service to them.

Mr. PATMAN. I thank the gentleman for his observation.

Mr. SECREST. If the veterans' interests are to be served we should take out both these sections.

Mr. PATMAN. I have before me the Defense Production Act of 1951 which contained the law which brought about the promulgation of Regulation X, and some of the exact language of the Defense Production Act is contained in this bill before you. I will point it out to you. Turn to page 149 of the bill. It states there: "ratios of loan to value."

Turn to the Defense Production Act which brought about Regulation X and it states: "Ratios of loan to value."

On page 149 it states: "And maximum maturities."

Regulation X of the Defense Production Act of 1951 states: "Maximum maturities."—the exact language.

And here we have our friends who have always been strenuously and vigorously opposed to these regulations even in time of war coming in here in time of peace and trying to get you to adopt these strict Regulation X rules.

This title II should be stricken from this bill and I hope you vote that way.

Mr. AYRES. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, there are many committees established in the Congress. I have been under the impression that it is the purpose of congressional committees when they go out into the field to gather information and do it as unemotionally as they can in order not to harass and embarrass witnesses, but to go into the field and gather facts and information, then come back to the committee and make suggestions and recommendations.

We have a subcommittee established by the chairman of the Veterans' Affairs Committee, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mrs. ROGERS], which is called the Subcommittee on Veterans' Housing. It is comprised of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. TEAGUE]—who is probably one of the foremost authorities on the GI program in the Congress—the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. EDMONDSON], the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BONIN], the gentleman from Vermont [Mr. PROUTY], and myself. A little over a year ago it was next to impossible to get a GI guaranteed loan in many sections of the country. We held hearings throughout the Middle West, and at that time it was quite apparent to me—and I want to make it clear that I am not speaking for the other members of the subcommittee—that we were not going to get any GI guaranteed loans unless the interest rate was increased.

The reason for that was twofold. The 4-percent money had dried up, first, because it was not a realistic rate, and, secondly, because the lenders had been left with the impression there was going to be an increase about a year before there was. When that happened they immediately said: "If we are making 20-year loans why not wait until we get a little more?"

To give you an idea of how bitter the feeling was of some bankers throughout the country, I would like to quote from the testimony found in our hearings of March 20, 1953, in Cleveland, Ohio. I do not wish to embarrass this particular banker, but these are his words:

Mr. EDMONDSON. Well, if this interest rate were to be raised from 4 to 4½ or 4¾ percent, would you lower your downpayment requirement?

The BANKER. I believe we would.

Mr. EDMONDSON. How substantial?

The BANKER. One of the reasons we are asking for a 25-percent downpayment is in order to discourage as many GI applications as possible.

That was his attitude at that time. The testimony goes on to show that they had no intention of making loans for a 5-percent downpayment so long as the interest rate remained at 4 percent. We continued our hearings, and it was after completing the hearings in May that the Veterans' Administrator raised the rate to 4½ percent.

This morning I called Mr. King, of the Veterans' Administration, and he tells me that for the month of February they had 34,000 applications for appraisal. That is the second largest month in history and the largest month since the boom of October 1950. To give you an idea of how it is in the Middle West, I received a letter from the veterans' regional director in Cleveland on March 23, in which he said:

Because of money being more readily available and of the many lenders coming back into the picture, our loan activities will exceed any month of the past 2 years. Our increase over March of 1952 is approximately 26 percent and 37 percent more daily than March of 1953, and 20 percent better daily than the largest month of the past 2 years.

Mr. MERRILL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. AYRES. I yield to the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. MERRILL. The gentleman will agree that when the interest rate on the GI loans was 2 percent the whole program was stymied. There was no mortgage money.

Mr. AYRES. When the interest was at what rate?

Mr. MERRILL. Four percent. Because there was flexibility in the program at that time you were able to raise the interest rate to 4½ percent and immediately obtained the necessary money, so that the GI's are now getting homes, is that right? It was the fact there was flexibility in the program at that time that they were able to get homes?

Mr. AYRES. We had the flexibility from 4 to 4½ percent. We still have flexibility insofar as that is concerned.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Ohio has expired.

(At the request of Mr. SECREST, and by unanimous consent, Mr. AYRES was allowed to proceed for 5 additional minutes.)

Mr. AYRES. I may say to the gentleman from Indiana that here is the thing I am afraid of. If we change it now or leave the impression that we will have a higher rate, the same thing will happen that happened a year or 2 years ago. We have a program now that is working to the satisfaction of the veterans' organizations, it is working to the satisfaction of the individual GI buyer, and it is working to the complete satisfaction of the builders, and the lenders are co-operating. I know that the gentleman from Indiana would agree that from a practical point of view, and we hear this politically sometimes, we do not want to change horses in midstream when we are headed in the right direction. At times I think there are gentlemen in Washington, not necessarily in this body, who sit up nights figuring out ways to make it more difficult to understand what is going on.

Mr. MERRILL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield at that point?

Mr. AYRES. Yes.

Mr. MERRILL. You may remember the time when the GI program was going very well at 4 percent, and then it became completely stymied and it was only because there was flexibility that you were able to rescue the program. Has there ever been a time in all its history when the people in charge of this program have shown a tendency to be over-eager to raise the rate? Has there ever been a time when they have been over-eager to raise the rate as has been forecast by some of the gentlemen from the other side of the aisle?

Mr. AYRES. If you will read the testimony, you will find out that every lender that came before the committee said that if we did not get more money, you would not get any loans. It may be that simple.

Mr. MERRILL. Was there ever a time when the Government officials were over-eager to raise the rate? What I am trying to say is that this idea of the maximum allowed is going to become the actual rate overnight has no historical background. Actually, the Government officials have been reluctant to raise the rate even though they had the authority to do so, so much that is being said is a hobgoblin that has no existence.

Mr. AYRES. I would much rather have pressure applied to 435 Members of the House of Representatives than I would a few members in the executive branch.

Mr. MERRILL. And have the program be stymied for 6 months in the meantime?

Mr. AYRES. The program will not be stymied. I cannot agree with everything that the gentleman from Texas [Mr. PATMAN] says. He is always talking about lower interest rates. I think he is just as wrong to disrupt the program as long as it is working. There is nothing to compel the lender to ask for 4.5 percent. If this soft money policy that the gentleman from Texas refers to is so soft, then the lender can put the loan out for anything he wants to. But, I think we should say that 4.5 is all he can get under this program.

Mr. SAYLOR. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. AYRES. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. SAYLOR. Is it not a fact that your committee reported to the full Committee on Veterans' Affairs that it was the unanimous opinion of the Committee on Veterans' Affairs that the interest rate should be fixed at 4.5 percent and should remain at 4.5 percent and no increase above that amount?

Mr. AYRES. The committee did not take any action on raising the interest rate. However, I did find out during the hearings that veterans were just as interested in the low down payment, and he was not begging for something that was not there. But the committee did say that 4.5 percent is as high as we should go at this time, and when the lenders realized that that was all they were going to get, they got into the market.

Mr. SECREST. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. AYRES. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. SECREST. When there was a chance of the interest rate going to 4.5, the lenders knew that and they refused to make loans in the hope that the interest rate would be increased. That stymied the program. Now, if we have a 4.5-percent rate and raise it further, they will again sit back waiting to see if they cannot get the additional interest.

Mr. AYRES. That is what I am concerned about.

Mr. SECREST. As it is now, when we are getting a great number of loans in this country, we better let it alone.

Mr. AYRES. I will say to the gentleman that we are also getting a great number of loans at a very low down-payment.

Mr. TEAGUE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. AYRES. I yield to the gentleman from Texas, who has done far more work on this than I have. He has been chairman of the subcommittee in past Congresses, and as I have said before, he is recognized as one of the authorities in the field.

Mr. TEAGUE. First I want to thank the gentleman from Ohio.

Buffalo was the only instance where veterans were taken care of. Every veteran that applied for a loan got that loan because those lenders made up their minds to take care of the veterans, and they also testified they were making money on their loans. But I am sorry to say that in other areas where they expected this increase they were not making loans, they were holding back because, as the gentleman said, they were pressuring us to increase the interest rate. The same thing will happen again if we invite it by passing title II of this bill.

I wish to compliment the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. AYRES], who is chairman of the Subcommittee on Housing of the Veterans' Affairs Committee. I have been privileged to be associated with BILL AYRES on this subcommittee and I wish to say to the House that the subcommittee has operated entirely without partisan consideration. The gentleman from Ohio has exerted a great deal of effort to acquaint himself with conditions in the mortgaging market throughout the United States. Under his leadership, his subcommittee has held hearings in Cleveland, Ohio, Cincinnati, Ohio, Louisville, Ky., Oklahoma City, Okla., and San Antonio, Tex., Los Angeles, Calif., and extended hearings in Washington, D. C. In my opinion, there is no Member of this House who is more conversant with the financial provisions of the veterans' loan guaranty program than the gentleman from Ohio.

The gentleman from Ohio is speaking from experience when he says that his subcommittee was told by literally dozens of lenders that they did not intend to loan money until the interest rate was raised. His subcommittee made a detailed inquiry into the "sitdown strike" by lenders when they were trying to get the interest rate raised from 4 to 4½ percent. He knows whereof he speaks when he says that we are inviting another sitdown strike by indicating to the lenders of this country that it is our attitude that interest rates should go higher. He has supported by facts and figures his statements that the veterans' loan guaranty program is operating successfully now.

I hope that Members on both sides of the aisle will support the distinguished chairman of the Veterans' Affairs Housing Subcommittee in voting title II, which would seriously disrupt the veterans' housing program.

I wish to read a statement prepared by the Veterans' Administration which accurately shows the tremendous amount of money involved should the maximum interest rates allowed by the bill be placed into effect:

ASSISTANT ADMINISTRATOR FOR LEGISLATION,
DEPUTY ADMINISTRATOR FOR VETERANS' BENEFITS.
March 3, 1954.

(Letter dated February 19, 1954, from Congressman OLIN E. TEAGUE.)

1. This is in reply to your request for comment on a letter from Congressman OLIN E. TEAGUE, referring to the provisions of section 201 (1) of H. R. 7839. Section 201 (1) establishes a formula which would regulate the maximum interest rate which may be established on residential mortgage loans guaranteed or insured by the Veterans' Administration. Such maximum rate may not exceed 2½ percent plus the annual rate of interest determined by the Secretary of the Treasury by estimating the average yield to maturity on outstanding marketable obligations of the United States having a remaining maturity of 15 years or more, adjusted to the nearest one-eighth of 1 percent.

2. Congressman TEAGUE's letter requests that, based on the formula in section 201 (1), the maximum rate of interest be established for certain dates. Based upon information from the Treasury Department, which reflects yields to maturity of all marketable Government obligations maturing in 12 years or more, the maxima for the dates requested are as follows:

	Percent
Feb. 1, 1954.....	5¼
June 30, 1953.....	5½
Jan. 1, 1953.....	5¼
June 30, 1952.....	5½

The Treasury Department has not made the calculations necessary to fit the precise language of the proposed section 201 (1); however, the yield (or interest rate) on the same type of securities maturing in 15 years or more would be only slightly higher (perhaps one to four-hundredths), and not sufficiently different to change the maxima cited above.

3. The Congressman's letter further requests that an estimate be prepared of the amount of increased interest which would have been involved on the veteran loans guaranteed by the Veterans' Administration during calendar year 1953 if maximum interest rates had been in effect as allowed by section 201 (1) instead of the interest rate established by existing law. The Congressman requests that this be estimated (1) for the total permissible life of each loan, and (2) during the first year of the loan's existence.

4. In order to simplify the computations involved, it has been assumed that, if the maximum permissible rate of interest were to be fixed as the actual rate, such a determination would be made as of the first of the year. Accordingly, an interest rate of 5¼ percent has been used as the presumptive interest rate on veteran loans under the provisions of the proposed section 201 (1), even though a higher maximum obtained during part of the calendar year. As a further simplification of the necessary calculations, we have assumed that all GI loans closed in the first half of the year bore the 4-percent rate and that all those closed during the last half of the year were written at 4½ percent. Inasmuch as many 4-percent loans were actually disbursed after the maximum was increased to 4½ percent in May 1953, the use of this assumption is not believed to affect the accuracy of our estimates materially.

5. On this basis, if a maximum rate pursuant to section 201 (1) had been in effect for the calendar year 1953 at 5¼ percent, rather than the 4 and 4½-percent rates actually in effect, the additional amount of interest payments to be made on account of loans guaranteed or insured by the Veterans' Administration would aggregate $429 million over the total life of the loans. During the first year of all loans guaranteed or insured by VA in 1953, under the same conditions, the difference in interest payments would have been almost $29 million. The average loan made to a veteran in 1953 amounted to $9,480. For such a loan with a typical maturity of 20 years, the increase in the interest rate from 4½ to 5¼ percent would require an additional interest payment of $932.83 over the whole term of the loan. During the first year, the increase in interest would be $70.72.

6. In connection with these estimates, it should be noted that the rates indicated in paragraph 2 and the rates used in estimating the increased costs are maximum permissible rates of interest. The President, under the provisions of section 201 (1) would be given authority to set the maximum rate from time to time at whatever figure was deemed most appropriate in the light of prevailing conditions, provided it did not exceed the maximum permitted.

RALPH H. STONE.

Mr. AYRES. The gentlemen from Buffalo were most fair in their testimony, but they did testify that they were doing it without making a fair return, and they were going to hold on as long as they possibly could.

I hope that the gentleman's amendment will be supported in order to protect the GI loan program.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has again expired.

Mr. HAYS of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I take this time in order to question Mr. AYRES for just one moment further. I think this is perfectly clear, but at the risk of being repetitious, I want to go over it again. The gentleman's fear, I think, is the same as mine; if we hold open the possibility of raising the interest rate, the bankers generally are not going to make loans, in the hope that they will be able to get the maximum.

Mr. AYRES. That is true; plus the fact that I cannot see any reason for changing a program that is working as well as this program is working today.

Mr. HAYS of Ohio. In other words, at the present maximum rate at which the loans are being made?

Mr. AYRES. That is true. They are being made in larger numbers than they have in any month since October in 1950, which was a big year. It is the consensus of those in the field that this will be the second largest GI housing program year in the history of the program.

Mr. HAYS of Ohio. In other words, the interest rate is adequate. If we open the door to another raise, it is more than probable, in the opinion of the gentleman, we will again find that the loans will not be made pending a campaign to get the maximum that they can get, if we increase that maximum?

Mr. AYRES. I think it is only human nature to assume that if the lender who is about to take a 20-year mortgage thinks that he is going to get a higher interest rate 6 months from now, he will think it will be better not to make the loan this month and wait for the higher rate.

Mr. HAYS of Ohio. I think the position of the gentleman on that point, and mine, are identical.

Mr. BROOKS of Louisiana. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HAYS of Ohio. I am glad to yield to the gentleman from Louisiana.

Mr. BROOKS of Louisiana. I should like to say, in addition to what the distinguished gentleman has said with reference to this amendment, that these men who compose the leadership of the American Legion, are very able and patriotic men. They know what the veteran needs and they know what the veteran wants. I find that usually they do not go far wrong in reference to their recommendations to Congress. In this particular instance, we are trying to legislate to assist the veteran to obtain loans and therefore I am glad to be able to join with the gentleman in supporting this amendment.

Mr. MERRILL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HAYS of Ohio. I am glad to yield to the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. MERRILL. I should like to point out in answer to that statement which has just been made, that when the interest rate was 4 percent, and because the interest rate was 4 percent, there were no GI loans being made. The GI's could not get houses under the program. At that time, the people to whom the gentleman has just referred were then opposing the raising of the rate to 4½ percent, even though the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. AYRES] pointed out that the minute we did the thing that the veterans' organizations did not want done, the minute we raised the rate one-half percent, the money flowed in and the GI's are now getting their homes. So that history shows actually that we had to go against the recommendations of certain of these veterans' organizations and do the very thing that the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. AYRES] now says is what has enabled the GI's to get homes now, when they were not getting those GI loans before. That is history.

Mr. HAYS of Ohio. Let me say this to the gentleman. There was a campaign at that time which had the sanction of people high in the administration to raise the interest rates. The banks simply went on a strike, because they were pretty sure that they were going to get higher rates. But if this Congress says to them "4½ percent is it, we are not going any higher," I think that is going to settle the matter. But if we leave the door open and we say, "You can go to a higher rate," I think that is what the veterans' organizations are afraid of and I think they are right in being afraid. If we leave the door open, then you are going to have a strike. It has been my personal experience that there are very few banks who are anxious to make any veterans' loans, because they are saying—and I hear this back home—"We are going to wait and see what they are going to do about this interest rate." I think once we make a decision and say "4½ percent is the rate," that is going to settle it and then they will go ahead and make the loans, because then the door will not be open to pressure to raise the rate.

Mr. EVINS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HAYS of Ohio. I yield to the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. EVINS. I will say to the gentleman that the very situation that he has referred to has occurred in the past. There has been, in effect, a freeze on available loan money. The Veterans' Administration was not in favor of raising the interest rate from 4 percent to 4½ percent, but the Veterans' Administrator did so following pressure from other agencies of the Government and following the administration's high-interest rate policy. The Veterans' Administration did not want to raise the VA rate before but were forced to do so following the hard-money policy.

Mr. BROOKS of Louisiana. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HAYS of Ohio. I yield.

Mr. BROOKS of Louisiana. May I say further that the Federal Reserve embarked on a policy of raising the interest rates and the Federal Reserve must have known at that time that it would affect the housing program for veterans. When these people abandoned that policy of raising the interest rate we came back all right to a normal program.

Mr. LONG. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words, and rise in support of the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, practically all I am going to say has already been said. I merely want to add just a little emphasis to what has gone before.

May I say in the beginning that this is truly the bankers' bonus bill. It benefits no one except the big boys, and that seems to be the trend at this time. The Republicans are trying to pay off their election debts by permitting the bankers to make money. There is no question about that.

I am always inclined to go along with the committees that have studied these measures, especially when the committee is in unanimous agreement; because, usually, the committee has had plenty of time to study the particular bill in question. Having heard the witnesses, I feel they are better able to pass on a bill than I am or anyone else who has not had an opportunity to study it and has not heard the witnesses.

This amendment has been discussed at length in the Committee on Veterans' Affairs, of which I am a member. It is composed of 14 Democrats and 14 Republicans, and I dare say there is not a man or woman on that committee who is not in favor of this amendment.

We know this—the bankers sat down and waited last year, because they knew that if they waited long enough, the interest rate would be raised one-half cent. They waited and, of course, as we all know, the interest rate was raised. This was done without an act of Congress.

What happened then will happen again, if we pave the way. This bill, as it now stands, provides for the interest rates to be raised by the President, and all the bankers have to do is sit and wait. The soldiers will not get any homes until the interest rate is raised again.

There is no reason for raising the interest rate. At the time it was raised, money was a little hard to get; but, today, the situation is changed, and the interest rate should be reduced. Do you hear the bankers saying now that money is easy and they are ready to reduce the rate? No; they will reduce the rate when they are forced to; and if you open the way here now, they will raise the interest rate again.

Referring to the Committee on Veterans' Affairs again, let me say I think we should go along with the committee—not only this committee, but any other committee that votes unanimously—and we are unanimously for this amendment. Our committee has been all over this country studying this very problem, and a poll will show that all of its members, both Republicans and Democrats, are for it.

Please do not come in here and take snapshot judgment and let someone, just for the sake of helping his banker friends back home, make it possible for the interest rate to go up again on these poor soldiers. I think the interest rate, as I said before, should go down now; and if those interested were trying to help the soldiers, it would go down.

I expect to vote for the Patman amendment, and I trust that it will be adopted.

(Mr. LONG asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last three words.

Mr. Chairman, the Committee on Veterans' Affairs is thoroughly in favor of the provisions of the Patman amendment. We believe the interest rate should be established by law, not by an administrative committee. We are unanimous in that feeling.

I am primarily opposed to this section in H. R. 7839, for the reason, first, that it would substantially increase the cost of housing to the veteran; second, it would result in chaos and discrimination by providing one group of veterans with interest rates much lower than other loans which might be negotiated at a later date; third, the uncertainty as to when the rate might change would result in delay in construction and a reluctance on the part of lenders to loan money; fourth, the proposal clearly invades the jurisdiction of the Committee on Veterans' Affairs.

I should like to state great appreciation of our committee's Subcommittee on Housing, of which the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. AYRES] is chairman. He and the other fine members of the subcommittee have done remarkable work on GI housing. They have become experts in that field. The subcommittee has thoroughly studied veterans' housing both here and in the field, by hearings in Ohio, Texas, Oklahoma, and California. All the members of that subcommittee have done splendid work—the gentleman from Vermont [Mr. PROUTY], the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BONIN], the gentleman from Texas [Mr. TEAGUE], and the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. EDMONDSON].

Mr. Chairman, if the interest rate goes up to 5.3 percent, it will cost the veteran over $900 additional for his loan, over the life of the mortgage. May I also point out the agony of mind the veteran suffers when he does not know whether he is going to be charged 4½ percent, or 5 percent, or more. There is unfairness to the man who has to pay the higher rate of interest. I believe it is entirely unnecessary. We would be discriminatory against different groups of veterans. There could be, under the bill as reported, one interest the first 6 months of a year and an entirely different one the second 6 months.

Mr. VAN ZANDT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentlewoman yield?

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. VAN ZANDT. Will the gentlewoman explain just what she meant when she said that this will cost the veteran $900 in addition?

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. If this sliding interest rate were in effect today, the interest rate could be set as high as 5.3 percent. Over a 20-year maturity period a veteran with an average mortgage of $10,000 would pay $900 more in interest than he would pay if the rate remained at 4½ percent.

Mr. VAN ZANDT. Does it mean then that the interest rate might be increased then possibly to 5 percent or 6 percent?

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Nobody knows whether it will go to 5 percent and perhaps even 6 percent. The proposal is to set the rate at 2½ percent above the average yield of long-term Government bonds.

Mr. VAN ZANDT. In other words, this discretionary authority is going to make it possible for them to raise the interest rate to 6 percent or 7 percent, if it is necessary.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. That is true and it should not be. The Secretary of the Treasury should not be the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs and we should establish the interest rate by act of Congress.

Mr. VAN ZANDT. Does the gentlewoman know how many veterans actually made loans last year?

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. No, I do not have those figures. I might ask the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. AYRES] if he has those figures. I have been relying upon him and his Subcommittee on Housing for information in that field. Since the law was passed in 1944, I believe about 3½ million loans have been guaranteed; about 43,000 direct loans have been made in this program started in 1950. Loss ratio has been less than 1 percent in both categories.

Mr. EVINS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentlewoman yield?

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. I yield.

Mr. EVINS. If the pending amendment does not prevail, we will be faced with the spectacle of some veterans paying 4½ percent interest on their loans and others paying 5 percent and possibly 5½ percent interest on their loans. In other words, there will be a discrimination between veterans as to the rates of interest that they pay, if this amendment does not prevail. VA rates should be reduced rather than increased, and certainly they should be uniform in rate.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. It seems to be manifestly unfair. After all, we would have no freedom in our country today, we would not be as prosperous as we are today, and we would not even be safe, if it were not for the veterans. I know that everyone wants to do everything that they can to give the veterans a fair chance to get a home. He lost his chance to get a home earlier because he was fighting a war for us. In addition I will say to the gentleman from Tennessee that a sliding scale for interest rates will undoubtedly lead to delays in construction and reluctance by lenders to make loans.

Mr. MERRILL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentlewoman yield?

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. I yield.

Mr. MERRILL. I should like to point out that at the present time there are certain veterans enjoying 4-percent loans and certain veterans enjoying 4½-percent loans so that this idea that there may be a difference in the amount of interest that veterans will be paying from time to time will not be something new because that is already the case, and will always be the case while we have flexible interest rates such as we had when the rate was raised from 4 percent to 4½ percent.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentlewoman yield?

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. I yield.

Mr. PATMAN. The gentlewoman knows this to be true, but it has not been brought out—we are talking about Government-guaranteed paper at 4½ percent. That is correct, is it not?

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. That is correct and one wrong should not be compounded.

Mr. PATMAN. And that certainly should be high enough when United States Government bonds at 2½ percent are selling above par today.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. I agree with the gentleman.

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentlewoman yield?

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. I yield.

Mr. MULTER. I wonder if the gentlewoman would tell us whether these veterans who, as the gentleman said, enjoyed paying 4½ percent interest will enjoy paying 6 percent interest, which will be the result if this amendment should not prevail.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. That would not be fair, and the gentleman knows that I feel that way about it. As I indicated to him last week when we passed the direct-loan bill, I do not favor any increase in interest rates for veterans' loans for any reason.

Mr. AYRES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentlewoman yield?

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. I yield.

Mr. AYRES. The veterans are just as interested in getting a home with a lower downpayment as he is interested in getting a fair rate of interest on the loan. It was brought out in the testimony when we asked some veterans whether they would pay 6 percent and whether they would pay 7 percent. I think Mr. TEAGUE asked them even if they would pay 8 percent, and they replied, "Yes; if I could get a home, I would be willing to pay that interest." But that is not the point. The arrangement that has been working satisfactorily so far, and that is fair should be left to remain the way it is.

Mr. MULTER. In other words, the interest rate should be left at 4½ percent and not any more than 4½ percent.

Mr. AYRES. It is working very well now, and I have said several times, why do we want to change it?

Mr. MULTER. In other words, we do not want to change it. We do not want to increase it over 4½ percent; is that not correct?

Mr. AYRES. That is right.

Mr. EDMONDSON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, when the debits and the credits on this entire proposition are added up, I do not see how anyone can avoid the conclusion that the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. PATMAN] should be adopted and that section 201 and section 901 as well should be stricken from this bill. I believe that those amendments will be voted on and will be voted overwhelmingly by the membership of the House. I do not think you can read the commitments of both major parties in the 1952 campaign without arriving at the conclusion that those commitments require that those provisions be stricken from this bill. Any way you analyze this bill, as it stands at the present time, you must reach that conclusion. In the first place, the bill as it is now written could provide for a substantial increase in interest rates on guaranteed loans. There is no question about that. It could provide for a substantial increase in interest. Aside from that, in the provision giving to the President authority to raise those rates no one can avoid this conclusion, either: that the effect of this bill is to weaken and to dilute the authority of the Veterans' Administrator over Veterans' affairs. That also is obvious.

Mr. MERRILL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. EDMONDSON. I yield.

Mr. MERRILL. Does the gentleman realize that the bill could provide for an increase in the interest rates and could provide equally as well for a decrease in the interest rates, if that is necessary?

Mr. EDMONDSON. I realize that; but it is still a fact that it could provide for a substantial increase. I have no objection to flexibility in the interest rates if there is a ceiling on it.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. EDMONDSON. I yield.

Mr. PATMAN. Is it not a fact that the rate of 4½ percent can be reduced without this provision?

Mr. EDMONDSON. That is right. We have that provision already in the law for a reduction.

Now, what did the platform commitments of the Republican Party in the 1952 campaign say on this point? I ask the indulgence of the Members on the majority side for a moment as I read to you from the Republican Party platform in 1952 on veterans' affairs. They began with this statement:

We believe that active duty in the Armed Forces of the United States of America during a state of war or national emergency constitutes a special service to our Nation and entitles those who have so served to aid and compensation in return for this service.

Consequently we propose that the aid and compensation given to veterans of previous wars be extended to veterans of the Korean conflict.

Does it say "extended at an increased interest rate?" Does it say "at an increased cost to the veteran?" No. It says:

We believe it should be extended and it is clearly inferred that it is the same aid and the same compensation that the veterans of World War II received.

Furthermore, they also propose in this platform "that the Veterans' Administration be maintained as a single, independent agency in full charge of all veterans' affairs."

With those commitments the Republican Party sought the votes of millions of veterans in our country.

Mr. TEAGUE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. EDMONDSON. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. TEAGUE. Regardless of what the platform said, I hope the gentleman will point out the work that this subcommittee of the Committee on Veterans' Affairs did under the excellent direction of Congressman AYRES, of Ohio. If there has ever been a committee which is nonpolitical that has worked earnestly trying to find the right answer, I think it is the work of this committee under Mr. AYRES.

Mr. EDMONDSON. I endorse the gentleman's statement wholeheartedly. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. AYRES] is one member of the party who has demonstrated that these words in the platform mean something to him. I believe that many Members believe that they mean what they say as they vote for this amendment which is now before the House.

Mr. VAN ZANDT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. EDMONDSON. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. VAN ZANDT. How does this question come into the House Committee on Banking and Currency? Does it not belong to the House Committee on Veterans' Affairs?

Mr. EDMONDSON. I am satisfied that is the feeling of the Committee on Veterans' Affairs, that it does belong to that committee.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Oklahoma has expired.

(Mr. EDMONDSON asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. STRINGFELLOW. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the requisite number of words, and I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. STRINGFELLOW. Mr. Chairman, it is very difficult for the Members of Congress to discuss such a problem, because I realize that many of us, when dealing in the field of veterans' affairs, are too often impressed by what sounds right rather than what is right. It is very difficult for me to think that Mr. Eisenhower, our distinguished President, who is a great veteran himself and who has an honest and sincere compassion for the veterans, would take any action, after consulting with his designated advisers, which would not be in the veteran's best interest.

A great deal has been said about the raising of interest rates. The President would have discretionary authority in title II of this bill to lower interest rates, and I am sure if it was in the best interest of the veterans in a competitive market, the President would take such action.

I would like to tell you something about what happened in my State during the past 3 or 4 years. Our history has been that mortgage money dries up much sooner than it does in other areas in the United States.

When I came to Congress I was disturbed over the fact that the veterans were not getting their loans. I was deeply concerned when I found that the Congress had written into the GI bill their intent that when the rigid 4 percent should become noncompetitive the Veterans' Administrator, after conferring with the Secretary of the Treasury, could raise the interest rate to 4½ percent so that once again it could become competitive in the investment market. But somewhere along the line somebody was playing politics, refusing to take permissive action in our election year, and, therefore, the interest rate was not raised.

I am a great friend of organized veterans' associations. I realize that they have the interest of the veterans at heart.

Mr. EDMONDSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STRINGFELLOW. Yes; I yield to the gentleman from Oklahoma.

Mr. EDMONDSON. Is the gentleman stating that there was a big decline in the year 1952 in GI housing? You stated that in an election year someone was playing politics, whereas I think the facts will show that 1952 was a big year in veterans' housing.

Mr. STRINGFELLOW. I am dealing with the veterans in my area. If the gentleman is an expert on the veterans in my area I will be glad to listen to him. I decline to yield further.

I realize that the veterans' organizations have the interests of the veterans at heart, but sometimes I do not feel that they take area problems into consideration, for example, when they lobby against a raise of an interest rate which would have made it possible for my veterans to get homes. During this time when the rate was rigid our veterans did not get their homes, and a lot of them would have been in these homes paying for them if the Veterans' Administrator after conferring with the Secretary of the Treasury would have exercised the permissive power in the GI bill.

The question is not one of what may be an acceptable rate late this year or some time next year or 5 years from now, but what is an acceptable rate today. By giving the President discretionary authority I am sure that he will establish the interest at a rate consistent with the best interests of the veteran so that he can get his home after consulting with the committee which is set up under the legislation.

The recognition of prevailing conditions existing in the market is long overdue. There is no point in talking about a lenders' strike. Lending institutions must keep their available funds invested at all times. There is, moreover, no need for a strike to cause a withholding of funds from guaranteed mortgage investment; alternative investment opportunities are too prevalent to make such a remote contingency possible.

One of the reasons which has been raised here for not adjusting the rate is that the veteran has been assured of preferential treatment in the mortgage market. Aside from the fact that an arrangement that freezes the veteran out of the market or involves him in hidden costs is a very poor preference, there is no cause to believe that an adjustment in the VA rate would deprive the veteran of the special advantage due him. It is more likely that the rate will come down. The preference, however, must be considered to be a relative one, not an absolute one.

Speaking about preferential treatment for the veteran I would like to say that we are all interested in giving the veteran certain preferential treatment, but I say that the American veteran, regardless of what the organized veterans might say, would want his treatment to be consistent with the times, consistent with sound economic policy, consistent with a sound program which will help the veteran get his money and therefore his home.

In conclusion, Mr. Chairman, I fear that too many of us are forgetting one basic fact during the consideration of this legislation: That is, it is an honor and a privilege to fight for one's country. I know that the veterans out in my district have not been consulted regarding this problem except through me. Telegrams regarding this matter, reaching my desk, I am sure, were inspired at the Washington level without proper consideration as to the views of the veteran on the local level. Their desire is to get a home. I am going to support any measure which I feel will do just that. Giving the President the discretionary authority which is embodied in this legislation in title II certainly is consistent with a sound program for helping the veteran get his home.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, in an effort to expedite consideration of the bill, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on title II and all amendments thereto close in 15 minutes.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, I think 10 would be sufficient, 5 to be allotted to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. ROGERS], and 5 reserved for the committee on your side.

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, is the request to close debate on this amendment or this title?

Mr. WOLCOTT. To the title and all amendments thereto.

Mr. MULTER. I must object, Mr. Chairman; I do not know whether there will be other amendments to the title or not. I have no objection to closing debate on this amendment.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I will modify my request and ask unanimous consent that all debate on this title and all amendments thereto, including the present amendment, close in 10 minutes, the last 5 to be reserved to the committee.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Chairman, as I stated, I have no objection to closing debate on this amendment, but as to the title, I do not know whether other amendments will be offered or not and I must object. I do not think there would any objection if the gentleman would confine it to the pending amendment. If the gentleman makes his consent to apply to the whole title, there are other amendments that may be offered.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I will amend my unanimous-consent request so that it applies to the pending amendment only.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Mr. ROGERS of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the pending amendment. I feel I would be derelict in my duty and recreant in my feelings and in my attitude toward the veterans if I did not at this time rise in support of this amendment.

The veterans' program, as heretofore stated, is being administered in an excellent manner. The veterans are being taken care of as satisfactorily as possible and at as low an interest rate as is possible to assist veterans in home ownership. The present interest rate should not be raised and this amendment precludes any raise in interest rate. I doubt if it would be raised even if the House were to reject this amendment, because the authority is put in the hands of the President of the United States to either increase or decrease the rate. I do not believe that President Eisenhower would permit an increase in interest rate to our veterans. If there has ever been a man who occupied the Presidency and who would look after the interests of the veterans, it is President Eisenhower. He is an individual with a great mind and a noble heart that beats in the interest of humanity, and without doubt he would look after the interest of the veterans. He knows the veterans and their needs since he has spent the greater portion of his life as a soldier, reaching the top grade of a five-star general.

Unless this amendment is adopted we return to the policy and principle of controls, which is contrary to the fundamental principles of our Government—and particularly so in peacetime. We want to stay away from controls.

If we adopt the pending amendment it means that we will keep the program as it is, which is what I want to do. Since I have been a Member of the Congress I have always, without exception, supported any reasonable legislation for the benefit and welfare of our veterans. I think the shortest speech ever made in this House was made by me when I stated: "There is nothing too good for our veterans."

I believe that we should take care of the veterans. While I am not afraid that the interest rates will be increased so long as President Eisenhower is our Chief Executive, I do feel this is the function of the Congress, and the Congress should not shift the responsibility to the President in this instance but should measure up to its responsibility.

Mr. BROWN of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROGERS of Florida. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. BROWN of Georgia. The gentleman has made an excellent speech. He thoroughly understands the needs of the veterans, and I feel very much encouraged now that this amendment will be adopted through the influence of the distinguished statesman from the State of Florida.

Mr. ROGERS of Florida. I appreciate the gentleman's compliment very much and in response may I say that the gentleman is a great man. I do not know of a more statesmanlike individual in the Congress than is the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BROWN]. He is always on the job.

Mr. EVINS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROGERS of Florida. I yield to the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. EVINS. The experience has been that the raising of the interest rate from 4 to 4½ percent will mean from $900 to $1,000 increase on the veteran's home. The gentleman from Florida [Mr. ROGERS] would certainly not be in favor of raising the cost of a veteran's home, would he?

Mr. ROGERS of Florida. I would not. I think the gentlewoman from Massachusetts [Mrs. ROGERS] commented on that point.

Mr. MATTHEWS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROGERS of Florida. I yield to my colleague, the gentleman from Florida [Mr. MATTHEWS].

Mr. MATTHEWS. Mr. Chairman, I should like to associate myself with the distinguished gentleman from Florida [Mr. ROGERS], and to state to him that I certainly agree with his statement. I do not think we ought to raise the interest rate to our veterans.

Mr. ROGERS of Florida. I thank the gentleman, and may I say further, that the veterans have a great friend in the gentleman from Florida [Mr. MATTHEWS].

Mr. MILLER of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROGERS of Florida. I yield to the gentleman from Kansas.

Mr. MILLER of Kansas. In the gentleman's opinion, the adoption of the pending amendment would be in the interest of the veterans?

Mr. ROGERS of Florida. It certainly would, since it would foreclose any possibility of an increase of more than 4½ percent as permitted under the present law.

Mr. MILLER of Kansas. Have the veterans of the United States, of the various wars, ever asked anything unreasonable of the American people or the American Congress?

Mr. ROGERS of Florida. As far as I know, they have not.

Mr. HAGEN of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROGERS of Florida. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. HAGEN of California. Is not the idea of this legislation to provide the veteran with a cheap loan, not just a loan, and that we are subverting the purposes or the intent of this veterans' program if we let the interest rate get up to anything above 4 or 4.5 percent?

Mr. ROGERS of Florida. We certainly do not want to go above 4½ percent, so adopt this amendment and the interest rate cannot go above and beyond 4½ percent.

(Mr. FINO (at the request of Mr. MULTER) was given permission to extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD.)

Mr. FINO. Mr. Chairman, as a Member of this Congress and, more particularly, as a member of the Committee on Veterans' Affairs, I, too, want to cast my objection to section 201 of the Housing Act of 1954 now under consideration.

Under this proposed section of the act, the authority of fixing interest rates on Veterans' Administration mortgages is given to the President, who is authorized to establish from time to time the maximum rates on VA mortgages. My objection is to the delegation of power relating to interest rates on these mortgages to any other branch or agency of Government.

Under the existing law—Public Law 101 of the 83d Congress—the interest rate on veterans' housing was fixed at 4½ percent—that was regulated and adjusted by this body and I firmly believe that the power to change it should remain with the Congress.

The application of this section of this bill is bound to result in an increase in the interest rate on VA mortgages beyond the fixed rate of 4½ percent. To allow this bill to pass as it is presently drawn would be unfair and discriminatory to our veterans. It would be unjust to veteran home buyers because the rate of interest could and would vary many times during the course of the same year, depending on the average yield of marketable obligations of this Government. This can very well result in increasing interest rates on VA mortgages even up to 6 percent.

As I recall, the original purpose of the Servicemen's Readjustment Act—78th Congress—was to give help and assistance to our veterans—help them in re-establishing themselves back home. This Congress placed a ceiling of 4 percent and last year to 4½ percent on interest rates, in order to protect the veterans who were interested in owning their own homes. We wanted to help them and we did by keeping their costs down.

Now we come along with this proposal, which not only violates the principles of veterans' preference, but strikes a hard blow to all our efforts on behalf of all veterans who are interested in buying their own homes.

The housing program for veterans should be kept within the jurisdiction of the Veterans' Administration, and the power to regulate the interest rates on VA mortgages should be kept in Congress.

The amendment is a corrective measure, and I will support it.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WOLCOTT].

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, of course, it is only natural that the debate would have turned upon interest rates, but I think I should call attention that we perhaps have been a little too overzealous in pleasing our veteran constituency and that in being anxious to do something for them we are losing sight of the fact that this title also includes provisions for adjusting downpayments and periods of amortization and open-end mortgages. Open-end mortgages for veterans mean a great deal, because without the open-end mortgage contained in this provision for veterans, the veteran might find himself in a position of having to get second and third mortgage financing at 6 or 7 percent. He might have a mortgage at the present time bearing only 4 percent, and any change of the interest by the President under the terms of this provision would not affect that situation. As a matter of fact, if this is stricken out, that would deny him the opportunity to get interest rates as low as he is getting now on his mortgage.

The Advisory Committee set up by the President has this to say with respect to interest rates, "that a committee of informed Government officials should be established and empowered to make certain that maximum interest rates on mortgages carrying FHA and VA insurance are responsive to upward or downward changes in the money market."

Now, almost everyone who has taken the floor in support of this amendment has impressed us with their confidence in the President. I think we should have in mind that the President of the United States, after he has consulted with the Secretary of the Treasury and the Administrator of the Housing and Home Finance Agency and the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs, will undoubtedly never use this to increase veterans' interest rates or FHA interest rates in the foreseeable future. What is it in here for?

Now, it is to offset a possible decline in the national economy incident to something happening, as we have been impressed by opponents it is going to happen in our country. To get new home construction in a lowering economy we give the President the authority, and it is just that simple, to come in under this formula here and decrease the interest rate to bolster up home production in this period.

Now, I can say to you on the best authority that I can get on it that the interest rates will not be increased or lowered in the foreseeable future. As a matter of fact, at the present time the interest rates on FHA mortgages are 4.5, a ceiling of 4.5, and on veterans' are 4.5. As has been suggested here, there came a time when the mortgage money market was such that the veteran could not get any mortgage financing. Well, it does not make any difference to the veteran, if he cannot get any mortgage, whether the interest rate is 2, 3, 4, or 4.5 percent. He does not pay any interest because he has no mortgage to pay interest on. That is what we want to protect him against.

I think we should be cognizant of the fact that this is designed to give the veteran and everyone else, for that matter, an opportunity to buy a home on the best possible terms that homes can be financed on during any change in our economy.

I do not want to be responsible, and I do not think you do, for any effect which the stymieing of the veterans' home program might have on our economy. I do not think you want to be responsible, also, for keeping from the President the facilities, the tools to adjust these interest rates, these downpayments, the periods of amortization in such manner as to fit them into any declining economy, so that the veterans can get what they need in housing.

I want to call attention to this fact. The Committee on Banking and Currency had this matter under consideration, and we decided we would not assume the responsibility of a veteran's not getting a home due to lack of available financing, if anything happened to the economy. Now the responsibility is yours, if you see fit to take it; but know what you are doing before you adopt this amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. CURTIS of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. CURTIS of Missouri. I want to be sure what this amendment provides. This strikes out all of title II; is that correct?

The CHAIRMAN. That is correct.

(Mr. BONIN asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD at this point.)

Mr. BONIN. Mr. Chairman, as a member of the Subcommittee on Housing of the Veterans' Affairs Committee, I join my colleagues to strike out sections 201 and 201 (1) and 901 from H. R. 7839, known as the Housing Act of 1954. The subcommittee held extensive hearings on interest rates and downpayments on loans guaranteed by the Veterans' Administration. Hearings were held in Washington, Cleveland, and Cincinnati, Ohio. Bankers, building and loan associations and insurance companies were heard on this subject, and, after full and exhaustive hearings, the committee was unanimous in its belief that the interest rate should not be changed. In May of 1953, the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs, after consultation with the Secretary of the Treasury, increased the interest rate from 4 percent to 4½ percent. I did not like this increase, but we did notice that mortgage money returned to the market. Prior to this decision, veterans all over the country had a difficult time obtaining loans. Since that time, the mortgage loan program has been working very successfully and the veterans' organizations throughout the Nation are satisfied with the present operations of the program.

Sections 201 and 201 (1) would authorize a flexible interest rate to be set by the President of the United States. I have the highest respect for the President and consider him one of the most outstanding veterans in the United States and in the world. I am confident that he would never commit any act which would injure or harm any veteran of these United States. However, I am a firm believer in government by law and not at the discretion of man. The present law is sufficient to keep the maximum rate at $4\frac{1}{2}$ percent. The discretion vested in the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs can lower the rate if the need should require it. Why should we tamper with a good sound piece of legislation by adopting sections 201 and 201 (1).

It is my honest opinion and judgment that any provision of the law would be detrimental to the interest of our veterans should be eliminated. I shall vote to strike out these sections of H. R. 7839.

When the committee held hearings in Cleveland, Ohio, we found a decided falling off of applications from the high points of 1947 and 1950 due to the fact that the lenders had been able to loan their money at a higher rate of interest and avoided making 4 percent loans. This was a reaction due to the fact that many of them had a large volume of 4 percent loans on their books which they had acquired during the first few years of the GI program. Our committee received assurance from all the lenders that they would cooperate with the veteran and they have kept their word. I say, let the program continue as it is and we shall have the veterans satisfied, the lenders will continue to lend their money, and the program will continue to supply the needs of housing. Give the veteran a break and strike out sections 201, 201 (1), and 901.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that any Member may have permission to extend his remarks on the subject of this amendment in the RECORD at this point.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. PATMAN]?

There was no objection.

Mr. EVINS. Mr. Chairman, since the start of the new administration, interest rates have been rising steadily on Government bonds, FHA mortgages, and veterans' housing loans. The situation has not been a salutary one, generally, from the standpoint of the money market—most certainly it has not been healthy from the standpoint of the veterans' housing program.

Following the administrative decision last year—less than 3 months after the start of the new administration—to increase veterans' housing loans from 4 percent to $4\frac{1}{2}$ percent, the Committee on Veterans' Affairs conducted extensive hearings on this matter and heard many protests on this action and, in formal committee action, made strong protests against the arbitrary and discriminatory action.

Notwithstanding the protests of the House Committee on Veterans' Affairs, the Veterans' Administrator raised the interest rates of veterans' mortgages from 4 percent to $4\frac{1}{2}$ percent. This, I am advised, under pressure of the new administration.

This increase of one-half percent means the cost of building a house by a veteran has jumped approximately $900 to $1,000—or, as someone has pointed out with great practicality, has caused the veteran's house to shrink by one bedroom.

Whichever way you look at it, only the veteran has lost from this increase of one-half percent in his housing loan.

Now we have a proposal to increase interest rates further. We have a proposal that this vital matter, particularly with regard to our veterans' housing program, be taken out of the hands of the Congress and turned over to an Administrator whose decision it would be as to when and how much a veteran's loan interest rate is to be increased.

As the distinguished gentlewoman from Massachusetts [Mrs. ROGERS] so clearly set forth yesterday, the proposal here made is clearly unpalatable to the Committee on Veterans' Affairs of the House inasmuch as it represents the invasion of one committee's jurisdiction by another committee. Clearly, any legislation touching upon or amending the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944—and this vital matter is a case in point—should come within the jurisdiction of the Veterans' Affairs Committee.

The proposal made by the Banking and Currency Committee provides for an administrative official of the executive branch to use a discretionary authority to establish the interest rate of a veteran's loan at a rate not to exceed $2\frac{1}{2}$ percent above the average yield of long-term Government bonds. With such a sliding scale and the granting of full discretionary power to one administrative officer of the Government, the veteran would have hanging over his head the possibility of interest rates up to 5 and not impossibly 6 percent.

It is not difficult to foresee the confusion and chaos which would result from the existence of such great power, discretionary power, in the hands of one individual.

Further, Mr. Chairman, the proposal would make all the efforts of the Veterans' Affairs Committee to bring about uniformity in veterans' legislation look pretty feeble. Here we would have a situation where one veteran has built a house at one rate of interest and another veteran who starts his house 6 months later has an interest rate considerably higher—in fact, has less house for more money.

It is clearly unfair and not in the best interests of the veterans of the Nation.

Sections 201 and 201 (1) authorizing the raising of interest rates on veterans' mortgages should be stricken from the bill.

In addition, Mr. Chairman, section 901 of this bill eliminating the veterans' preference in the purchase of surplus war housing is a bad feature of this bill. There have been too many assaults already on the veterans' preference rights and I strongly urge present veterans' preference rights be preserved and that this Congress not vote to increase interest rates on veterans' housing costs.

Let us strike out these objectionable features and attempt to improve and perfect this bill.

Mr. SELDEN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. PATMAN] that strikes title II from the bill now under consideration. Title II of the bill deals largely with the veterans' loan guaranty program created by the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944. In this connection, it is pointed out that the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944 creating the veterans' loan guaranty program as a rehabilitation benefit for World War II veterans' subsequently extended to Korean veterans by Public Law 550, 82d Congress, was considered and passed by the House Veterans' Affairs Committee.

Title II, for all practical purposes, completely rewrites substantial provisions of the veterans' loan guaranty program by removing control of the main provisions of the bill from the Congress and vesting these controls in the nature of standby authority in the Executive. Passage of the bill, including title II as now written, will for all practical purposes exclude the Veterans' Affairs Committee from jurisdiction over the veterans' housing program in the future and remove the major controls of the program from the Congress and vest it in the executive branch. Maximum interest rates, which are now controlled by the Congress through a specific provision of law, would be placed under the control of the Executive. The President would be allowed to adjust interest rates from time to time based on a formula prescribed by the bill, and the formula is such that it will allow an increase in the interest rates. Using the formula, maximum interest rates allowed by this formula were projected by the Veterans' Administration as indicated by the table below:

	Percent
Feb. 1, 1954.....	$5\frac{1}{4}$
June 30, 1953.....	$5\frac{3}{4}$
Jan. 1, 1953.....	$5\frac{1}{4}$
June 30, 1952.....	$5\frac{1}{4}$

The Veterans' Administration advises that the average loan to a veteran in 1953 was \$9,480, with a typical maturity of 20 years, and that had the interest rate in 1953 been $5\frac{1}{4}$ percent rather than 4 and $4\frac{1}{2}$ percent—as it actually was—the veteran would have had to pay an increase in interest of \$70.72 for the first year, and \$932.83 additional interest over the period of his mortgage. At $5\frac{1}{2}$ percent, $5\frac{3}{4}$ percent, or 6 percent the amount of interest will, of course, increase accordingly.

When the original Servicemen's Readjustment Act—Public Law 346, 78th Congress—was written, a ceiling was placed on the interest rate on these mortgages in order that there might not be a prohibitive rate charged those who had served in the Armed Forces and for whom the legislation was intended to give some assistance in reestablishing themselves on a sound economic basis. Title II violates this principle.

Also, should the House fail to adopt the amendment now under consideration, Congress will relinquish control of maximum interest rates and appointive officials of the executive branch will undoubtedly be subjected to pressure tactics for the lenders' lobby for increases in these rates.

The power to regulate interest rates under the veterans guaranty loan program should remain in the Congress, and I urge the adoption of the amendment now under consideration.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I am supporting the amendment offered by Congressman PATMAN, of Texas. In my speech on the floor yesterday I opposed the high interest rate provided in this bill. The veterans' housing has been progressing satisfactorily since the interest rate was raised to 4½ percent. This legislation will raise the veterans' loans another 1 percent and it will greatly disturb the present program.

Lenders will again boycott veterans' loans with the hope that in a few months they can reap this bonanza of additional interest. The members of the Veterans' Subcommittee who investigated and ironed out the veteran-loan bottleneck over the country are opposed to an increase beyond 4½ percent. I will support this amendment which will stop a further raise of 1 percent in veteran-loan interest.

I do hope the amendment to be offered this afternoon to legalize 35,000 annually for 4 years public-housing units is adopted. If the slum-clearance program of the President is to be of any value, we must have low-priced homes for the low-bracket-income family to purchase at low prices and carrying charges. I also hope that the veteran-preference amendment will be adopted by the House when offered later in the day.

Mr. DONOHUE. Mr. Chairman, as one who has consistently supported the intent and purpose of the original housing act I rise again today to speak in support of the continuation of an adequate public-housing program for the low- and middle-income families of this country, a great percentage of whom are recent war veterans just practically beginning their family lives.

The housing bill now under discussion has in my judgment several objectionable provisions which I earnestly hope will be, in all fairness and justice, eliminated by appropriate amendment before the debate is over, or at the very least sensibly modified.

Some of the undesirable aspects to which I refer are failure to continue traditional and reasonable veterans housing preference; failure to provide a realistic workable secondary mortgage market; failure to authorize any units of low-rent public housing; delegation to the Executive of authority to set maximum interest rates on FHA and VA mortgages, which may inevitably result in great hardship imposed on young veterans and low-income groups; and failure to require builders of FHA and VA houses to give the home buyers any real assurance against defective construction.

The technicalities of operation through which these objectionable features will serve to produce distress and hardship have already been explained by other speakers and I shall not further expand on them. However let me say that I have introduced a bill designed to lower the outstanding interest rate of 4½ percent to 4 percent because of my deep conviction any permitted flexible range of raising interest rates will unquestionably tend to discourage the ambition toward homeowning which a housing program is primarily intended to sustain.

PROTECT VETERANS' HOUSING

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Chairman, I am supporting the amendments offered by the distinguished gentleman from Texas [Mr. PATMAN] to strike out title II. Adoption of the amendment will prevent increasing interest rates beyond the amount now fixed as the maximum, to wit, 4½ percent per annum. That rate should be reduced.

I am also supporting the amendment of our distinguished colleague from Missouri [Mr. BOLLING] to strike out section 901 from this bill.

Adoption of his amendment will preserve for the veteran the preferences heretofore written into the Housing Act.

At this time in support of these amendments I wish to read the following:

THE AMERICAN LEGION,
NATIONAL LEGISLATIVE COMMISSION,
Washington, D. C., March 29, 1954.

Re H. R. 7839, Housing Act of 1954

Hon. ABRAHAM J. MULTER,

House Office Building,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR CONGRESSMAN MULTER: As you know, the bill H. R. 7839, commonly referred to as the Housing Act of 1954, was reported out by the House Banking and Currency Committee on March 28, 1954, and is scheduled to come up for debate on the floor of the House on March 31, 1954.

The American Legion strongly opposes certain provisions of this bill, namely sections 201 and 201 (1) having to do with fixing interest rates on Veterans' Administration mortgages, and section 901, which has to do with veterans' preference in obtaining war housing.

Under sections 201 and 201 (1) the President would be given power to fix interest rates from time to time, but not in excess of 2½ percent above the annual yield of marketable obligations of the United States having a maturity date of 15 years or more.

Attached please find a memorandum showing the American Legion's objections to this method of fixing the interest rates on veterans' mortgages.

The American Legion also objects to the provisions of section 901 of the bill on the ground they fail to give veterans the same preferences in the purchase of war housing as are contained in the present laws. I attach a separate statement giving our objections in further detail.

Appreciating your interest in the protection of qualified veterans I know these objections will receive your serious consideration. I respectfully request that when H. R. 7839 comes up for consideration in the House you vote to strike sections 201, 201 (1), and 901 from the bill.

Thanking you for your favorable consideration of this request, and with kindest personal regards, I am

Sincerely yours,

MILES D. KENNEDY,
Director.

WHY THE AMERICAN LEGION OPPOSES SECTIONS 201 AND 201 (1) OF H. R. 7839 (INTEREST RATES ON VA MORTGAGES)

1. We believe in the maintenance of a separate housing program for veterans under the sole jurisdiction of the VA. We want the present policy continued.

2. The power to regulate interest rates should remain in Congress.

3. We submit that the phrase contained in section 201, "the President is hereby authorized, without regard to any other provision of law," is too broad and that only specific authority should be granted not only to the President but to any other Government official who may be concerned.

4. These sections are bound to result in an increase in the interest rate, now fixed at 4½ percent in keeping with the provisions of Public Law 101 of the 83d Congress.

5. The proposed method of fixing interest rates would result in discrimination between veteran home purchasers, due to the fact the rates would vary from time to time, during the same year, depending on the average yield of marketable obligations of the United States.

6. This method of fixing interest is not practical from the standpoint of the veteran-mortgagor or the builder.

7. There is nothing to stop the rate from being increased to 6 percent any time the yield on Government obligations goes to 3½ percent.

8. The big-money interests will not be satisfied until they get the rate on veterans' mortgages up to 6 percent. They are not interested in the veteran as such.

9. The VA advises that the average loan to a veteran in 1953 was $9,480, with a typical maturity of 20 years, and that had the interest rate in 1953 been 5¼ percent rather than 4 and 4½ percent (as it actually was), the veteran would have had to pay an increase in interest of $70.72 for the first year and $932.83 additional interest over the period of his mortgage. At 5½ percent, 5¾ percent, or 6 percent, the amount of interest will, of course, increase accordingly.

10. When the original Servicemen's Readjustment Act (Public Law 346, 78th Cong.) was written, a ceiling was placed on the interest rate on these mortgages in order that there might not be a prohibitive rate charged those who had served in the Armed Forces and for whom the legislation was intended to give some assistance in reestablishing themselves on a sound economic basis. Sections 201 and 201 (1) violate this principle in every respect.

11. Sections 201 and 201 (1) abridge the principle of veterans' preference, and should be stricken from the bill.

WHY THE AMERICAN LEGION OPPOSES SECTION 901 OF H. R. 7839 (DISPOSAL OF PERMANENT WAR HOUSING WITHOUT REGARD TO VETERANS' PREFERENCE HOUSING LAWS)

1. Under the provisions of section 901 (g) (new), the Administrator would be authorized to dispose of any permanent war housing without regard to the preferences contained in subsections (b) and (c) of the present law (Public Law 475 of the 81st Cong., p. 26).

2. Said subsection (b) of the present law states that preferences in the purchase of any dwelling designed for occupancy by not more than four families and offered for separate sale shall be granted to veterans over other purchasers for such period as the Administrator may determine and in the following order:

"1. A veteran who occupies a unit in the dwelling structure to be sold and who intends to continue to occupy such unit;

"2. A nonveteran who occupies a unit in the dwelling structure to be sold and who intends to continue to occupy such unit;

"3. A veteran who intends to occupy a unit in the dwelling structure to be sold."

Subsection (c) of the present law grants first preference to groups of veterans organized on a mutual ownership or cooperative basis, etc., where a housing project is to be disposed of.

3. No such preferences are contained in section 901.

4. Section 901 would open wide the door for the elimination of veterans' preference in the disposal of permanent war housing.

5. It has been the experience of American Legion representatives that many officials of the Housing and Home Finance Agency have absolutely no regard for veterans.

6. While we have confidence in the present Administrator of the Housing and Home Finance Agency, there are too many employed in that Agency who feel that preference in the sale of surplus housing to veterans should be eliminated, and we fear those who would actually be responsible for the administration of the law would use this authority to gain their personal desires to deprive veterans of their rights to purchase surplus war housing.

7. We contend that veterans' preference has never hindered the sale of these properties, or worked a hardship on the Housing Agency.

8. Stripped of its legal phraseology, section 901 is nothing more or less than a bold attempt to knock out veterans' preference in the purchase of defense housing.

9. Current economic conditions do not warrant a weakening of the preference laws granted veterans in the field of housing.

10. Section 901 abridges the principle of veterans' preference and should be stricken from the bill, H. R. 7839.

Mr. Chairman, I believe that every veterans' group in the country is supporting these amendments.

Mr. Chairman, the fundamental, Christian, humane objective of public housing is to give our low- and middle-income groups the chance and opportunity to live and bring up their families in decent homes in healthful surroundings.

We are all agreed that slum areas, as proven breeding places of crime, disease, and juvenile delinquency must be eliminated but that cannot be done without the assistance of a Federal housing program. While many States and local communities are trying within their means to handle the problem, they have most generally proved unable to accomplish the full job alone. Meanwhile the entire country is exposed to national welfare sabotage by creeping crime, corruption and social rebellion that find such devilish inspiration in slum areas. The history of public housing demonstrates these cancers can be successfully halted. Families generally try to live up to their better surroundings. Usually they are carefully selected for such projects. But even in those occasional emergencies when they have been provided better dwelling without selection, very frequently persons of dubious background have responded to their new environment with changed living habits. Public housing is of course the vital adjunct to slum clearance and redevelopment. It is absolutely essential in providing the relocation of families moved out of slum areas. It seems therefore but simple commonsense to continue, and I hope expand, a housing program proven so beneficial to so many American families at so comparatively little cost, especially when measured against the foreign aid financial subsidies so generously granted. Let us then strike a real blow against the danger of any American acceptance of subtle Communist propaganda by giving our own citizens who vitally need it, a fair chance to bring up their families in godly cleanliness, healthful happiness and patriotic loyalty by voting for the continuation of an adequate public housing program.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. PATMAN].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. WOLCOTT), there were—ayes 141, nays 68.

So the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk proceeded to read title III.

Mr. WOLCOTT (interrupting the reading of the bill). Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that title III be considered as read and open to amendment at any point.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Title III is as follows:

TITLE III—FEDERAL NATIONAL MORTGAGE ASSOCIATION

SEC. 301. Title III of the National Housing Act, as amended, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"TITLE III—FEDERAL NATIONAL MORTGAGE ASSOCIATION

"Purposes

"SEC. 301. The Congress hereby declares that the purposes of this title are to establish in the Federal Government a secondary market facility for home mortgages, to provide that the operations of such facility shall be financed by private capital to the maximum extent feasible, and to authorize such facility to—

"(a) provide supplementary assistance to the secondary market for home mortgages by providing a degree of liquidity for mortgage investments, thereby improving the distribution of investment capital available for home mortgage financing;

"(b) provide special assistance (when, and to the extent that, the President has determined that it is in the public interest) for the financing of (1) selected types of home mortgages (pending the establishment of their marketability) originated under special housing programs designed to provide housing of acceptable standards at full economic costs for segments of the national population which are unable to obtain adequate housing under established home financing programs, and (2) home mortgages generally as a means of retarding or stopping a decline in mortgage lending and home building activities which threatens materially the stability of a high level national economy; and

"(c) manage and liquidate the existing mortgage portfolio of the Federal National Mortgage Association in an orderly manner, with a minimum of adverse effect upon the home mortgage market and minimum loss to the Federal Government.

"Creation of Association

"SEC. 302. (a) There is hereby created a body corporate to be known as the 'Federal National Mortgage Association' (hereinafter referred to as the 'Association'), which shall be a constituent agency of the Housing and Home Finance Agency. The Association shall have succession until dissolved by act of Congress. It shall maintain its principal office in the District of Columbia and shall be deemed, for purposes of venue in civil actions, to be a resident thereof. Agencies or offices may be established by the Association in such other place or places as it may deem necessary or appropriate in the conduct of its business.

"(b) For the purposes set forth in section 301 and subject to the limitations and restrictions of this title, the Association is authorized to make commitments to purchase, and to purchase, service, or sell, any residential or home mortgages (or participa-tions therein) which are insured under this act, as amended, or which are insured or guaranteed under the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944, as amended: Provided, That (1) no mortgage may be purchased at a price exceeding 100 percent of the unpaid principal amount thereof at the time of purchase, with adjustments for interest and any comparable items; and (2) the Association may not purchase any mortgage if (1) it is offered by, or covers property held by, a Federal, State, territorial, or municipal instrumentality or (2) the original principal obligation thereof exceeds or exceeded $15,000 for each family residence or dwelling unit covered by the mortgage.

"Capitalization

"SEC. 303. (a) The Association shall have nonvoting capital stock, to which the Secretary of the Treasury initially shall subscribe as provided in subsections (d) and (e) of this section. The stock of the Association shall have a par value of $100 per share, and shall not be transferable except on the books of the Association. At the option of the Association such stock shall be retirable at par value at any time, except that retirements of stock (other than stock held by the Secretary of the Treasury) shall not be made if, as a consequence thereof, the amount remaining outstanding would be less than $100,000,000. With respect to such stock held by him, the Secretary of the Treasury shall be entitled to cumulative dividends for each fiscal year or portion thereof, from the date or dates the capital represented by such stock is initially utilized, until such stock is retired, at rates determined by him at the beginning of each such fiscal year, taking into consideration the current average interest rate on outstanding marketable obligations of the United States as of the last day of the preceding fiscal year. The Secretary of the Treasury shall permit the retirement of the stock held by him in the manner provided in this section. Funds of the capital surplus and the general surplus accounts of the Association shall be available to retire the capital stock held by the Secretary of the Treasury as rapidly as the Association shall deem feasible.

"(b) The Association shall accumulate funds for its capital surplus account from private sources by requiring each mortgage seller to make payments of nonrefundable capital contributions equal to not less than 3 percent of the unpaid principal amount of mortgages therein involved in purchases or contracts for purchases between such seller and the Association, or such greater percentage as may from time to time be determined by the Association. In addition, the Association may impose charges or fees for its services with the objective that all costs and expenses of its operations should be within its income derived from such operations and that such operations should be fully self-supporting. All earnings from the operations of the Association shall annually be transferred to its general surplus account. At any time, funds of the general surplus account may, in the discretion of the board of directors, be transferred to reserves. All dividends shall be charged against the general surplus account. This subsection (b) shall not apply to the special assistance functions of the Association under section 305 of this title or to the management and liquidating functions of the Association under section 306 of this title.

"(c) Until such time as all of the stock held by the Secretary of the Treasury has been retired and the Secretary of the Treasury does not hold any of the obligations of the Association purchased under section 304 (c) of this title the Association shall issue, from time to time, to each mortgage seller its convertible certificates (only in denominations of $100 or multiples thereof) evidencing any capital contributions made by such seller pursuant to subsection (b) of this section, which certificates shall not be transferable except on the books of the Association. Subject to such terms and conditions as may be prescribed by the board of directors, such certificates shall be convertible into capital stock of the Association having an equal par value, but no such conversion shall be permitted or made until such time as all of the outstanding capital stock of the Association held by the Secretary of the Treasury has been retired and the Secretary of the Treasury does not hold any of the obligations of the Association purchased under section 304 (c) of this title. Thereafter, the Association may effect the direct issuance of stock in lieu of and in the same manner as is provided in this subsection for the issuance of convertible certificates. Such dividends as may be declared by the board of directors in its discretion shall be paid by the Association to its stockholders, but in any one fiscal year the general surplus account of the Association shall not be reduced through the payment of dividends (other than to the Secretary of the Treasury) which exceed in the aggregate 5 percent of the par value of the outstanding stock of the Association.

"(d) Within 90 days following the effective date of the Housing Act of 1954, as of the day following a cutoff date to be determined by the Association, the Association is authorized and directed to issue and deliver to the Secretary of the Treasury, and the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to accept, capital stock of the Association having an aggregate par value equal to the sum of (1) the amount of $21,000,000 (being the amount of the original subscription for capital stock of $20,000,000 and paid-in surplus of $1,000,000 of the Association) and (2) an amount equal to the Association's surplus, surplus reserves, and undistributed earnings, computed as of the close of the cutoff date.

"(e) The capital stock of the Association delivered to the Secretary of the Treasury pursuant to subsection (d) of this section shall be in exchange for (1) the note or notes evidencing the aforesaid original $21,000,000 (upon which the accrued interest shall have been paid through the cutoff date referred to in subsection (d) of this section), and (2) the release to the Association of any and all rights or claims which the United States might otherwise have or claim in and to the Association's capital, surplus, surplus reserves, and undistributed earnings, computed as of the close of the aforesaid cutoff date.

"(f) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, any institution, including a national bank or State member bank of the Federal Reserve System, trust company, or other banking organization, organized under any law of the United States, including the laws relating to the District of Columbia, shall be authorized to make payments to the Association of the nonrefundable capital contributions referred to in subsection (b) of this section, to receive stock or convertible certificates of the Association evidencing such capital contributions, and to hold or dispose of such stock or certificates, subject to the provisions of this title.

"(g) As promptly as practicable after all of the capital stock of the Association held by the Secretary of the Treasury has been retired, the Housing and Home Finance Administrator shall transmit to the President for submission to the Congress recommendations for such legislation as may be necessary or desirable to make appropriate provisions to transfer to the owners of the outstanding capital stock of the Association the assets and liabilities of the Association in connection with, and the control and management of, the secondary market operations of the Association under section 304 of this title in order that such operations may thereafter be carried out by a privately owned and privately financed corporation.

"Secondary market operations

"SEC. 304. (a) To carry out the purposes set forth in paragraph (a) of section 301, the operations of the Association under this section shall be confined, so far as practicable, to mortgages which are deemed by the Association to be of such quality, type, and class as to meet, generally, the purchase standards imposed by private institutional mortgage investors, and the Association shall not purchase any mortgage insured or guaranteed prior to the effective date of the Housing Act of 1954. In the interest of assuring sound operation, the prices to be paid by the Association for mortgages purchased in its secondary market operations under this section, should be established, from time to time, at the market price for the particular class of mortgages involved, as determined by the Association. The volume of the Association's purchases and sales, and the establishment of the purchase prices, sale prices, and charges or fees, in its secondary market operations under this section, should be determined by the Association from time to time, and such determinations should be consistent with the objectives that such purchases and sales should be effected only at such prices and on such terms as will reasonably prevent excessive use of the Association's facilities, and that the operations of the Association under this section should be within its income derived from such operations and that such operations should be fully self-supporting.

"(b) For the purposes of this section, the Association is authorized to issue, upon the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, and have outstanding at any one time obligations having such maturities and bearing such rate or rates of interest as may be determined by the Association with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, to be redeemable at the option of the Association before maturity in such manner as may be stipulated in such obligations; but the aggregate amount of obligations of the Association under this subsection outstanding at any one time shall not exceed 10 times the sum of its capital, capital surplus, general surplus, reserves, and undistributed earnings, and in no event shall any such obligations be issued if, at the time of such proposed issuance, and as a consequence thereof, the resulting aggregate amount of its outstanding obligations under this subsection would exceed the amount of the Association's ownership pursuant to this section, free from any liens or encumbrances, of cash, mortgages, and bonds or other obligations of, or bonds or other obligations guaranteed as to principal and interest by, the United States. The Association shall insert appropriate language in all of its obligations issued under this subsection clearly indicating that such obligations, together with the interest thereon, are not guaranteed by the United States and do not constitute a debt or obligation of the United States or of any agency or instrumentality thereof other than the Association. The Association is authorized to purchase in the open market any of its obligations outstanding under this subsection at any time and at any price.

"(c) The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized in his discretion to purchase any obligations issued pursuant to subsection (b) of this section, as now or hereafter in force, and for such purpose the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to use as a public debt transaction the proceeds of the sale of any securities hereafter issued under the Second Liberty Bond Act, as now or hereafter in force, and the purposes for which securities may be issued under the Second Liberty Bond Act, as now or hereafter in force, are extended to include such purchases. The Secretary of the Treasury shall not at any time purchase any obligations under this subsection if (1) all of the capital stock of the Association held by the Secretary of the Treasury has been retired, or (2) such purchase would increase the aggregate principal amount of his then outstanding holdings of such obligations under this subsection to an amount greater than $500 million plus an amount equal to the total of such reductions in the maximum dollar amount prescribed by section 306 (c) as have theretofore been effected pursuant to that section: Provided, That such aggregate principal amount under this subsection (c) shall in no event exceed $1 billion. Each purchase of obligations by the Secretary of the Treasury under this subsection shall be upon such terms and conditions as to yield a return at a rate determined by the Secretary of the Treasury, taking into consideration the current average rate on outstanding marketable obligations of the United States as of the last day of the month preceding the making of such purchase. The Secretary of the Treasury may, at any time, sell, upon such terms and conditions and at such price or prices as he shall determine, any of the obligations acquired by him under this subsection. All redemptions, purchases, and sales by the Secretary of the Treasury of such obligations under this subsection shall be treated as public debt transactions of the United States.

"(d) The Association may not purchase participations or make any advance contracts or commitments to purchase mortgages for its operations under this section, except that the Association may, in the discretion of its board of directors, issue a purchase contract (which shall not be assignable or transferable except with the consent of the Association) in an amount not exceeding the amount of the sale of mortgages purchased from the Association, entitling the holder thereof to sell to the Association mortgages in the amount of the contract, upon such terms and conditions as the Association may prescribe.

"Special-assistance functions

"SEC. 305. (a) To carry out the purposes set forth in paragraph (b) of section 301, the President, after taking into account (1) the conditions in the building industry and the national economy and (2) conditions affecting the home-mortgage investment market, generally, or affecting various types or classifications of home mortgages, or both, and after determining that such action is in the public interest, may under this section authorize the Association, for such period of time and to such extent as he shall prescribe, to exercise its powers to make commitments to purchase and to purchase such types, classes, or categories of home mortgages (including participations therein) as he shall determine.

"(b) The operations of the Association under this section shall be confined, so far as practicable, to mortgages (including participations) which are deemed by the Association to be of such quality as to meet, substantially and generally, the purchase standards imposed by private institutional mortgage investors but which, at the time of submission of the mortgages to the Association for purchase, are not necessarily readily acceptable to such investors. Subject to the provisions of this section, the prices to be paid by the Association for mortgages purchased in its operations under this section shall be established from time to time by the Association. The Association shall impose charges or fees for its services under this section with the objective that all costs and expenses of its operations under this section should be within its income derived from such operations and that such operations should be fully self-supporting.

"(c) The total amount of purchases and commitments authorized by the President pursuant to subsection (a) of this section shall not exceed $200 million outstanding at any one time: Provided, That, notwithstanding such limitation, the President pursuant to subsection (a) of this section may also authorize the Association to exercise its powers to enter into commitments to purchase immediate participations and to make related, deferred participation agreements as hereinafter in this subsection provided, but only to the extent that the total amount of such immediate participation commitments and purchases thereto (but not including the amount of any related deferred participation agreements or purchases pursuant thereto) shall not in any event exceed $100 million outstanding at any one time, and any such deferred participation agreements shall be made by the Association only on the basis of a commitment by it to purchase an immediate participation of a 20 percent undivided interest in each mortgage and a related deferred participation agreement by the Association to purchase the remaining outstanding interest in such mortgage conditional upon the occurrence of such a default as gives rise to the rights to foreclose.

"(d) The Association may issue to the Secretary of the Treasury its obligations in an amount outstanding at any one time sufficient to enable the Association to carry out its functions under this section, such obligation to mature not more than 5 years from their respective dates of issue, to be redeemable at the option of the Association before maturity in such manner as may be stipulated in such obligations. Each such obligation shall bear interest at a rate determined by the Secretary of the Treasury, taking into consideration the current average rate on outstanding marketable obligations of the United States as of the last day of the month preceding the issuance of the obligation of the Association. The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to purchase any obligations of the Association to be issued under this section, and for such purpose the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to use as a public debt transaction the proceeds from the sale of any securities issued under the Second Liberty Bond Act, as now or hereafter in force, and the purposes for which securities may be issued under the Second Liberty Bond Act, as now or hereafter in force, are extended to include any purchases of the Association's obligations hereunder.

"Management and liquidating functions"

"Sec. 306. (a) To carry out the purposes set forth in paragraph (c) of section 301, the Association is authorized and directed, as of the close of the cutoff date determined by the Association pursuant to section 303 (d) of this title, to establish separate accountability for all of its assets and liabilities (exclusive of capital, surplus, surplus reserves, and undistributed earnings to be evidenced by capital stock as provided in section 303 (d) hereof, but inclusive of all rights and obligations under any outstanding contracts), and to maintain such separate accountability for the management and orderly liquidation of such assets and liabilities as provided in this section.

"(b) For the purposes of this section and to assure that, to the maximum extent, and as rapidly as possible, private financing will be substituted for Treasury borrowings otherwise required to carry mortgages held under the aforesaid separate accountability, the Association is authorized to issue, upon the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, and have outstanding at any one time obligations having such maturities and bearing such rate or rates of interest as may be determined by the Association with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, to be redeemable at the option of the Association before maturity in such manner as may be stipulated in such obligations; but in no event shall any such obligations be issued if, at the time of such proposed issuance, and as a consequence thereof, the resulting aggregate amount of its outstanding obligations under this subsection would exceed the amount of the Association's ownership under the aforesaid separate accountability, free from any liens or encumbrances, of cash, mortgages, and bonds or other obligations of, or bonds or other obligations guaranteed as to principal and interest by, the United States. The proceeds of any private financing effected under this subsection shall be paid to the Secretary of the Treasury in reduction of the indebtedness of the Association to the Secretary of the Treasury under the aforesaid separate accountability. The Association shall insert appropriate language in all of its obligations issued under this subsection clearly indicating that such obligations, together with the interest thereon, are not guaranteed by the United States and do not constitute a debt or obligation of the United States or of any agency or instrumentality thereof other than the Association. The Association is authorized to purchase in the open market any of its obligations outstanding under this subsection at any time and at any price.

"(c) No mortgage shall be purchased by the Association in its operations under this section except pursuant to and in accordance with the terms of a contract or commitment to purchase the same made prior to the cutoff date provided for in section 303 (d), which contract or commitment became a part of the aforesaid separate accountability, and the total amount of mortgages and commitments held by the Association under this section shall not, in any event, exceed $3,350,000,000: Provided, That such maximum amount shall be progressively reduced by the amount of cash realizations on account of principal of mortgages held under the aforesaid separate accountability and by cancellation of any commitments to purchase mortgages thereunder, as reflected by the books of the Association, with the objective that the entire aforesaid maximum amount shall be eliminated with the orderly liquidation of all mortgages held under the aforesaid separate accountability: And provided further, That nothing in this subsection shall preclude the Association from granting such usual and customary increases in the amounts of outstanding commitments (resulting from increased costs or otherwise) as have theretofore been covered by like increases in commitments granted by the agencies of the Federal Government insuring or guaranteeing the mortgages. There shall be excluded from the total amounts set forth in this subsection and subsection (e) of this section the amounts of any mortgages otherwise transferred by law to the Association and held under the aforesaid separate accountability.

"(d) The Association may issue to the Secretary of the Treasury its obligations in an amount outstanding at any one time sufficient to enable the Association to carry out its functions under this section, such obligations to mature not more than 5 years from their respective dates of issue, to be redeemable at the option of the Association before maturity in such manner as may be stipulated in such obligations. Each such obligation shall bear interest at a rate determined by the Secretary of the Treasury, taking into consideration the current average rate on outstanding marketable obligations of the United States as of the last day of the month preceding the issuance of the obligation of the Association. The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to purchase any obligations of the Association to be issued under this section, and for such purpose the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to use as a public debt transaction the proceeds from the sale of any securities issued under the Second Liberty Bond Act, as now or hereafter in force, and the purposes for which securities may be issued under the Second Liberty Bond Act, as now or hereafter in force, are extended to include any purchases of the Association's obligations hereunder.

"(c) All of the benefits and burdens incident to the administration of the functions and operations of the Association under sections 305 and 306, respectively, of this title, after allowance for related obligations of the Association, its prorated expenses, and the like, including amounts required for the establishment of such reserves as the board of directors of the Association shall deem appropriate, shall inure solely to the Secretary of the Treasury, and such related earnings or other amounts as become available shall be paid annually by the Association to the Secretary of the Treasury for covering into miscellaneous receipts.

The board of directors shall meet at the call of its chairman, who shall require it to meet not less often than once each month. Within the limitations of law, the board shall determine the general policies which shall govern the operations of the Association. The chairman of the board shall select and effect the appointment of qualified persons to fill the offices of president and vice president, and such other offices as may be provided for in the bylaws, with such executive functions, powers, and duties as may be prescribed by the bylaws or by the board of directors, and such persons shall be the executive officers of the Association and shall discharge all such executive functions, powers, and duties. The basic rate of compensation of the position of president of the Association shall be the same as the basic rate of compensation established for the heads of the constituent agencies of the Housing and Home Finance Agency. The members of the board, as such, shall not receive compensation for their services.

"General powers"

"Sec. 309. (a) The Association shall have power to adopt, alter, and use a corporate seal, which shall be judicially noticed; by its board of directors, to adopt, amend, and repeal bylaws governing the performance of the powers and duties granted to or imposed upon it by law; to enter into and perform contracts, leases, cooperative agreements, or other transactions, on such terms as it may deem appropriate, with any agency or instrumentality of the United States, or with any State, Territory, or possession, or with any political subdivision thereof, or with any person, firm, association, or corporation; to execute, in accordance with its bylaws, all instruments necessary or appropriate in the exercise of any of its powers; in its corporate name, to sue and to be sued, and to complain and to defend, in any court of competent jurisdiction, State or Federal, but no attachment, injunction, or other similar process, mesne or final, shall be issued against the property of the Association or against the Association with respect to its property; to conduct its business in any State of the United States, including the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, and the Territories and possessions of the United States; to lease, purchase, or acquire any property, real, personal, or mixed, or any interest therein, to hold, rent, maintain, modernize, renovate, improve, use, and operate such property, and to sell, for cash or credit, lease, or otherwise dispose of the same, at such time and in such manner as and to the extent that the Association may deem necessary or appropriate; to prescribe, repeal, and amend or modify, rules, regulations, or requirements governing the manner in which its general business may be conducted; to accept gifts or donations of services, or of property, real, personal, or mixed, tangible, or intangible, in aid of any of the purposes of the Association; and to do all things as are necessary or incidental to the proper management of its affairs and the proper conduct of its business.

"(b) Except as may be otherwise provided in this title, in the Government Corporation Control Act, or in other laws specifically applicable to Government corporations, the Association shall determine the necessity for and the character and amount of its obligations and expenditures and the manner in which they shall be incurred, allowed, paid, and accounted for.

"(c) The Association, including its franchise, capital, reserves, surplus, mortgages, and income shall be exempt from all taxation now or hereafter imposed by the United States, by any Territory, dependency, or possession thereof, or by any State, county, municipality, or local taxing authority, except that (1) any real property of the Association shall be subject to State, Territorial, county, municipal, or local taxation to the same extent according to its value as other real property is taxed, and (2) the Association shall, with respect to its secondary market operations under section 304 after the cutoff date referred to in section 303 (d) of this title, pay annually to the Secretary of the Treasury, for covering into miscellaneous receipts, an amount equivalent to the amount of Federal income taxes for which it would be subject if it were not exempt from such taxes with respect to such secondary market operations.

"(d) The Chairman of the Board shall have power to select and appoint or employ such officers, attorneys, employees, and agents, to vest them with such powers and duties, and to fix and to cause the Association to pay such compensation to them for their services, as he may determine, subject to the civil service and classification laws. Bonds may be required for the faithful performance of their duties, and the Association may pay the premiums therefor. With the consent of any Government corporation or Federal Reserve bank, or of any board, commission, independent establishment, or executive department of the Government, the Association may avail itself on a reimbursable basis of the use of information, services, facilities, officers, and employees thereof, including any field service thereof, in carrying out the provisions of this title.

"(e) No individual, association, partnership, or corporation, except the body corporate created by section 302 of this title, shall hereafter use the words 'Federal National Mortgage Association' or any combination of such words, as the name or a part thereof under which he or it shall do business. Every individual, partnership, association, or corporation violating this prohibition shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be punished by a fine of not exceeding $100 or imprisonment not exceeding 30 days, or both, for each day during which such violation is committed or repeated.

"(f) In order that the Association may be supplied with such forms of obligations or certificates as it may need for issuance under this title, the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized, upon request of the Association, to prepare such forms as shall be suitable and approved by the Association, to be held in the Treasury subject to delivery, upon order of the Association. The engraved plates, dies, bed pieces, and other material executed in connection therewith shall remain in the custody of the Secretary of the Treasury. The Association shall reimburse the Secretary of the Treasury for any expenses incurred in the preparation, custody, and delivery of such forms.

"(g) The Federal Reserve banks are authorized and directed to act as depositories, custodians, and fiscal agents for the Association in the general performance of its powers, and the Association shall reimburse such Federal Reserve banks for such services in such manner as may be agreed upon.

"Investment of funds"

"SEC. 311. All obligations issued by the Association shall be lawful investments, and may be accepted as security for all fiduciary, trust, and public funds, the investment or deposit of which shall be under the authority and control of the United States or any officer or officers thereof.

"Short title"

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. WOLCOTT: On page 158, line 17, after the word "System", insert "or any member of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation."

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I might say that was clearly an oversight, and I hope the amendment will be adopted. There are some banks that are not members of the Federal Reserve System which are insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

Mr. SPENCE. We have no objection to the amendment, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. RAINS. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. RAINS: Page 152, strike out line 3 and all that follows down through page 179, line 7, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"SEC. 301. Section 302 of the National Housing Act, as amended, is hereby amended by striking '$3,650,000,000' and inserting '$4,150,000,000'."

Mr. RAINS. Mr. Chairman, in my opinion, this amendment is the heart of the bill. In my judgment, this amendment will say whether you are going to have any mortgage money available for veterans' loans and others or whether you will not. All of the language in title III, and it covers many pages; I say this in all kindness, is just so much pretty high-sounding language.

The present bill provides a brand new, entirely new, untried, and, according to the testimony of most of the witnesses who appeared before the committee, is admittedly an unworkable Federal National Mortgage Association provision.

What I seek to do by this amendment is to go back to the FNMA as of now and put some money into the Federal National Mortgage Association so that there will be mortgage money available for the loans which are sought.

I listened with a great deal of interest to the debate on the amendment offered by my friend from Texas having to do with veterans and I supported it very vigorously, but I tell you frankly if you leave this section in the bill as is, the veterans in the sections of this Nation away from the great financial centers will not get the money—they are not getting it now—no matter what rate of interest you put in the bill. You must have a workable secondary market, not this type of market, which provides for volunteer meetings of groups, which provides that private lenders shall eventually own this corporation into which the Government has placed $70 million, and as to which the private lenders do nothing except sell their mortgages to it and buy a little stock. It will not work. It will not make the mortgage money available and the housing program will bog down in areas away from the great financial sections.

Mr. BROWN of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAINS. I yield.

Mr. BROWN of Georgia. I am supporting the gentleman's amendment because I realize that we must have a secondary mortgage market, and without the amendment I do not see how we will have a secondary mortgage market.

Mr. RAINS. I appreciate the gentleman's remarks. I do not stand alone on my view on this because, if you will go back and read the hearings, you will find none who say the secondary market provision will work. The National Home Builders, they want business. What did they say about whether or not this is workable? Listen to what Dick Hughes, of Texas, president of the NAHB, an organization of men engaged in doing the building that you hope to get under this bill. Mr. Hughes said:

The provisions of title III will prove unworkable and possibly do more to depress than to assist the mortgage market. Its terms go far beyond those reasonably necessary to prevent excessive use and, in effect, amount to complete denial of the facility to the very users for whom it is intended.

Truly, I think I should make the frank statement that the proponents of this section of the bill, and I hope the chairman will listen to this, doubt the workability of this section. They have nothing on which to hinge any high hope. It has never been tried. So I say that you are moving into a great adventure, and that you have no assurance it will bring success to what may otherwise be a fair bill when we get through with it. The Federal National Mortgage Association, as it now exists, is not something that has cost the Government of the United States money. It is an agency which has made a profit for the Government of the United States. Therefore, I plead for those who need the secondary market provided by FNMA, and I ask, by this amendment, to put the necessary funds in FNMA in order that veterans may be able to build some houses under this bill. This bill is a lenders FNMA, and they are finally going to own it. I cannot put my finger on one single element in this section of the bill that appears to me to be anything more than a great untried experiment.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAINS. I yield.

Mr. McCORMACK. I notice in the report of the minority members, the president of the National Association of Home Builders testified that on a $12,000 loan, for example, this formula referring to this section would result in a cost of permanent mortgage financing of about $750 to $850.

Mr. RAINS. Yes, and that, of course, is in addition to the interest which the veteran would otherwise have to pay.

Mr. McCORMACK. And that is in addition to all other charges, is it not?

Mr. RAINS. In addition to all other charges, yes, and if my amendment is adopted, it will save that amount for every person who uses the secondary market.

Mr. McCORMACK. A veteran would save a great portion of it because that is actually cost that is added to the loan that the veteran makes.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. DEANE. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman may proceed for 3 additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. DEANE]?

There was no objection.

Mr. DEANE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAINS. I yield.

Mr. DEANE. Is it not true that this particular provision departs markedly from the President's Advisory Commission?

Mr. RAINS. I must say that I am not too thoroughly familiar with all the President's Advisory Commission provisions because it is my understanding that it departs markedly from the view of practically every witness who appeared before our committee.

Mr. YATES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAINS. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. YATES. Is it possible under the new set-up for FNMA mortgages to be sold at a discount to the new organization?

Mr. RAINS. I am quite sure that under the proposed FNMA the practice of tremendous discounts which we have been facing in the immediate past will be accentuated instead of stopped, in addition to the interest rates.

Mr. YOUNGER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAINS. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. YOUNGER. Just as a matter of clearing the record, the gentleman stated a while ago that the veterans in out-of-the-way places would not be able to get loans.

Mr. RAINS. Yes, sir.

Mr. YOUNGER. The gentleman appreciates the fact that he is the one who is entitled to a direct loan, and we just increased that amount by $100 million.

Mr. RAINS. I appreciate that, yes; and, having served as chairman of a committee which went over the country to look into this problem, I can name one place, for instance in the great State of Florida, where there is a city which has one bank. The banker will not make any loans to veterans under the veterans' loan but because there is a banking facility, the veterans there are not eligible for direct loans. So it does not answer the question. In my State of Alabama there are credit facilities available but not always veterans home loans are available. You heard the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. AYRES] answer that by saying a banker in Cleveland told his committee, "We are just not interested in these VA loans." Unless you have a real secondary market the veteran will not get his home which he needs and to which he is entitled.

Mr. YATES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAINS. I yield.

Mr. YATES. Are not 80 percent of the FNMA mortgages now Veterans' Administration mortgages?

Mr. RAINS. About 80 percent were Veterans' Administration mortgages. This is really the way to get back to a system which has worked. Why depart from a tried, true, and proven friend off into the realm of hopeful uncertainty?

Mr. McDONOUGH. Mr. Chairman, man, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAINS. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. McDONOUGH. Do I understand your amendment to say that you leave FNMA as it is now operated, without this proposed new organization in the bill, and you add $500 million to its present authority?

Mr. RAINS. That is correct.

Mr. McDONOUGH. In the belief that FNMA has heretofore operated at a profit?

Mr. RAINS. I say it has operated at a profit and satisfactorily. That is correct.

Mr. YATES. That is correct. It is in the hearings.

Mr. RAINS. Mr. Chairman, in accordance with permission granted this morning by the House I attach herewith a summary of an estimate of the housing needs by the National Housing Conference:

AMERICAN HOUSING NEEDS, 1955-1970

Housing construction has reached record levels during the 8 years since the end of World War II. During the last 4 of these years we have built an average of 1.2 million homes a year, an achievement far exceeding previous 4-year construction levels. On the other hand, construction volume for the last 3 years has been 20 percent below the peak of 1.4 million units built in 1950. We clearly have a capacity to build from 1.5 to 2 million homes each year. Real progress has been made in overcoming the great shortages of housing which accumulated during the war years. But little progress has been made toward eliminating the slums and substandard homes inhabited by millions of American families. We must reexamine our needs for housing in the light of these accomplishments and these deficiencies and in the light of our vastly expanded capacity for production.

Future housing requirements must be estimated upon the assumption that the Nation will maintain full employment, will continue to expand its economy, and that our population will grow in keeping with these conditions. It is further assumed that defense expenditures will not increase; that Federal aids for housing will continue and expand; and that the Nation will desire and be able to achieve our national goal of a decent home in a suitable living environment for every American family.

The 1950 census reveals that we have 15 million substandard homes. These homes do not measure up to reasonable American standards of living because they are dilapidated, are located in slum areas, or lack interior plumbing facilities. Ten million of these homes must be cleared and replaced. More than 4.6 million substandard units may be brought up to standard by rehabilitation and modernization. These needs are summarized in millions of units, as follows:

	Total substandard	To be replaced	To be rehabilitated
Urban.....	8.9	6.9	2.0
Rural nonfarm.....	3.0	1.7	1.2
Farm.....	3.4	1.5	1.4
Total.....	15.3	10.2	4.6

1 500,000 additional farm units to be abandoned.

Other housing needs arise from the formation of new families, undoubling of families who now lack separate homes, the migration of 3 million families each year, and the desire of many single persons for separate dwellings. In addition we must replace homes which are demolished by fire or other disaster, or are cleared in highway and other construction programs. Finally, many hundreds of thousands of units reach obsolescence each year. These must be replaced or our housing condition deteriorates. The sum of these annual requirements may range from 1.3 million to 2.4 million units per year. If we replace the homes which were substandard in 1950 during the next 20 years and at the same time meet our annual new needs, we must build from 2 million to 2.4 million new homes per year as follows:

	1955-60	1960-65	1965-70
For additional households and vacancies.....	1.43	1.65	1.74
Replacement of substandard.....	.50	.50	.50
Replacement of annual losses.....	.10	.13	.16
Total new units needed each year.....	2.03	2.28	2.40

If we do not achieve this level of new construction, we will never be able to clear slums and eliminate substandard housing. Indeed at present levels of construction our present substandard units will never be replaced, and we will have more substandard housing in 1970 than we had in 1950. Even if we build 2 million units a year and rehabilitate 400,000 additional units each year, 5 million American families will still be using homes which were substandard in 1950 when 1970 arrives.

New construction per year	Substandard units remaining
	1955	1960	1965	1970
1.2 to 1.4 million.....	15	14	15	17
1.4 to 1.6 million.....	15	13	13	14
1.6 to 1.8 million.....	15	12	10	9
2.0 to 2.4 million.....	15	10	7	5

These requirements arise because the number of new families being formed each year will rise sharply after 1960. Reasonable progress toward slum elimination requires construction of 2 million new homes per year from 1955 to 1960, with increases to 2.4 million by 1965-70. Lower rates of new construction imply a deterioration of our housing standards, or such low rates of replacement that slums will not be cleared during the next two generations.

With the rapid increases in gross national production which have occurred in recent years, the production of 2 million to 2.4 million homes a year is an economically feasible goal. If national output continues to grow at the rate of the last 25 years, we can achieve our housing goals even though we spend no more of our national income for housing than we have in the past. A decreasing proportion of our output could achieve these goals. Indeed, unless we can achieve and maintain a higher level of housing production, we will be unable to maintain full employment and an expanding economy.

Recent housing production has been built to serve predominantly those families in the upper income groups. Rapid increases in family incomes have made possible the continued sales of homes to these families. In the future, however, we must increasingly produce homes for middle- and lower-income groups. If we are to sustain a high level of housing construction, we must produce homes in the broad price-classes suggested below:

Rents or monthly purchase prices:	Nonfarm homes per year
0 to $30.....	520,000
$30 to $50.....	380,000
$50 to $75.....	300,000
$75 and over.....	560,000

This suggests that 1 million to 1.2 million homes can be sold or rented each year under the systems of financing and Federal aids now available. About 600,000 additional units of private housing should be produced and financed annually to meet the needs of middle- and lower-income families who are not now able to afford new homes. An additional 200,000 units of public housing are needed to meet the needs of low-income families. In addition, more than 200,000 units per year are needed by farm families to replace substandard units.

[Mr. ROGERS of Texas addressed the Committee. His remarks will appear hereafter in the Appendix.]

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment close in 10 minutes.

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, will not the gentleman make it 15 minutes?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I modify my request and ask unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment and all amendments thereto close in 15 minutes, the last 5 to be reserved to the committee.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York [Mr. MULTER] is recognized.

(Mr. YATES asked and was given permission to yield his time to Mr. MULTER.)

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Chairman, the amendment to strike this title from the bill is one of the very important amendments being offered to improve the bill and to make the law workable, not only for the veterans concerned but for everybody concerned—to make it a successful, usable program. Therefore, we want this section entirely eliminated.

All of my "advisers"—using the word that was used by certain Members yesterday when they suggested that I consult with my advisers—have suggested not only the other amendments that have been rejected, but have strongly urged upon our committee in their testimony before our committee that this title is very bad.

I said the veterans do not like it. The lenders do not like it. The builders do not like it.

I have in my hand telegrams from the Home Builders' Association of Schenectady; the Rockland County Builders' Association; the Home Builders' Association of Syracuse; the past president of the National Association of Home Builders, who happens to be doing a lot of building in New Jersey, and has done much building in Pennsylvania; Mr. John Reilly, president of the American Bankers' Association; Mr. Shanks, president of the Prudential Life Insurance Co.—he came before our committee representing all of the insurance companies who lend billions of dollars; Mr. Hughes, president of the National Association of Home Builders; and any number of others have all said that this program as in this bill is a bad one and should come out of the bill.

Let me tell you, not in my language but in the language of Mr. Coogan, a man who is president of an association today that is buying and selling these mortgages throughout the country—this is what he says:

The entire FNMA set up as outlined in this bill is unworkable and an impediment to housing rather than an assist. FNMA has been the backbone of the housing operation for FHA and VA and should not be disturbed except for unquestioned improvement. Buying under the market would cost three more points. The mortgagees cannot afford to leave their capital tied up in such certificates, so they will pass the charge on to the builder. This means 5 or 6 points to the builder before he pays origination fees, and construction financing another 2½ points, to a total of 8 to 10 points depending on his location. The builder cannot afford such charges, and neither can the Government, whose function is to help, impose such charges.

Here is the point I have in mind. Under this new FNMA setup, if you permit this title to remain in the bill you are going to raise the price to the veterans and to the prospective home purchaser by this additional charge that he and he alone must pay.

The way to take it out is to support the Rains amendment. The mortgagee is not going to take the loss. Ask your subcommittee of the Veterans' Affairs Committee of the House and they will tell you they found that the discount racket was one of the things that contributed most to increased cost to veterans, because the buyer of the house must pay the charges.

The only way to stop that racket is to continue the present FNMA under proper administration. You can do that by supporting the Rains amendment now before you.

(Mr. EBERHARTER asked and was given permission to extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD.)

TRICKLE-DOWN HOUSING

Mr. EBERHARTER. Mr. Chairman, this housing bill is another in the long and monotonous parade of measures coming before this Congress to buttress trickle-down economic theories.

Prosperity from the top down, as practiced by this administration, has meant recession from the bottom up. Now we have a housing bill which proposes a gravy train for the mortgage bankers on the theory that this will get a lot of new money into the housing field and thus lead to the construction of a lot of new housing.

But it just does not work that way. If people cannot afford new homes because of excessively high interest rates, they do not buy; if they do not buy, builders do not build. It makes no difference how attractive the investment is to bankers, if houses are not built and sold, mortgages cannot very well be written on them.

What this bill proposes, among other things, is a brand new secondary mortgage market system which would eventually become banker owned and banker directed. The mortgage bankers would be charged a 3-percent fee for the use of facilities. They would pass that fee along to the builder and in turn to the purchaser, who would eventually pay all of those fees. But the banker would get a certificate of credit for the fee he has paid, and eventually he could cash those certificates in for stock in the corporation. Isn't that a sweet set-up?

Suppose we had that same set-up, or an equivalent one, on excise taxes. The excise taxes are in some instances assessed at the manufacturer's level, who pass it on to their customers. But suppose—after the customer has paid the taxes in full—the manufacturer could then count all of those taxes against his own income taxes?

That's what the Banking and Currency Committee is proposing here for the mortgage lenders—a free ride into not only the control but the ownership of the secondary mortgage corporation on the strength of fees paid by purchasers of homes.

Once the mortgage bankers get control of that operation, the home builders will be at their mercy and the housing policies of this country will be made in Wall Street instead of in Washington and Main Street.

The home builders know it, too. From what I hear, they are very disappointed—rather, furious—over the actions of the first Republican administration to come to power since all those banks and building-and-loans went bankrupt, when no outfit was doing any business in the mortgage field until the start of the Home Owners Loan Corporation, and the only building was the construction of barbed-wire fences and barricades to keep out the unemployed.

This bill will be very helpful to the Democratic Party, just like the housing bill in the Republican 80th Congress.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BOLLING].

(By unanimous consent, the time allotted Mr. McCARTHY was given to Mr. BOLLING.)

Mr. BOLLING. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the Rains amendment. I make no pretense to being an expert on FNMA and the secondary mortgage market; however, I have given some study to this particular matter. This amendment fits in to the pattern of an attempt on the part of the House to work its will on a piece of legislation which badly needs improvement if it is to achieve its avowed purposes.

One of the most depressing of my experiences as a Member of this body were the hearings on the present piece of legislation. I had the opportunity of questioning the Administrator of the Housing and Home Finance Agency at considerable length during the hearings. I have never been so much discouraged by the answers of a responsible official as I was by his. I do not mean to infer that I feel that Mr. Cole is failing to do an honest, honorable job by his own rights. What I do mean to say is that he constantly used the word "experiment."

He said over and over again that this section or that section was frankly an experiment. I think what we need to do is to understand that in this piece of legislation, while Mr. Cole and other members of the Banking and Currency Committee may think they are experimenting with methods of financing housing or methods of providing housing, that they are, in fact, experimenting with people. This title which the Rains amendment seeks to strike is one of these experiments with people. The Federal National Mortgage Association has worked to provide a secondary mortgage market. In some areas of this country very little housing would have been built unless there were such a secondary market. At a time in the Nation's history when we are unsure of our economic future, when there is argument as to what the condition of the economy will be in a few months, why now experiment by substituting for proved programs, programs about which we know very little and about which even its proponents say they are not sure how it will work?

In dealing with another section, the section which has been highly touted as that which will supply housing for those people displaced in urban renewal programs, Mr. Cole left with me the impression that he would be willing to experiment indefinitely. I am not. I want action now. The time has come for us to recognize that we have a responsibility to the low-income and the middle-income people as well as to those in the upper brackets in regard to housing. The Rains amendment could help people in the low and middle-income brackets.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WOLCOTT].

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, the amendment should be defeated overwhelmingly. I do not think the sponsors of the amendment have in mind that this amendment would terminate the so-called one-for-one program which has been used extensively in remote regions of rural America. I have been one means of rural America in the remote regions getting any benefit from FNMA. It would also destroy any hope that we could carry on a liquidation program of the $3.3 billion of mortgages which might be held in the FNMA portfolio, and returning this $3.3 billion to the United States Treasury. It would also make it impossible to make prior commitments, especially in respect to the new section 220 programs and the new section 221 programs. These programs would authorize, in the large city areas, low-cost housing in connection with slum clearance and urban renewal projects with special emphasis upon replaced families. As a matter of fact, there is a provision in this bill under which FNMA can act as a secondary market for the financing of mortgages up to $7,600 or $8,600, as the case may be, with an amortization of 40 years and with no downpayment. The amendment would make impossible those low-cost housing programs. I might say also that it probably will mean that you will eliminate all probability of there being written into this act any additional public housing units. I think in that respect I should be in favor of the amendment.

Mr. RAINS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOLCOTT. I yield.

Mr. RAINS. May I ask a simple question—why?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Because there will be on secondary market. Of course, you would not expect any financing concern, any insurance company, to take a mortgage, with no downpayment, no equity, running for 40 years, without a strong secondary market that can bail them out. The $500 million which you provided here could be eaten up just like that, under the gentleman's amendment, without providing any assistance for the 220 and 221 programs. There would not be available sufficient secondary market money for these programs. The gentleman will remember that some years ago we had to let FNMA die down to almost nothing at all to prevent FNMA from bailing out many financial institutions. They had gotten their portfolios filled with paper of questionable marketability and were ready to dump all of that paper onto FNMA when we stopped it. The gentleman's amendment would just reopen that dangerous practice.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WOLCOTT] has expired. All time has expired.

The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. RAINS].

The question was taken; and the Chair being in doubt, the Committee divided, and there were—ayes 91, noes 105.

Mr. RAINS. Mr. Chairman, I demand tellers.

Tellers were ordered, and the Chairman appointed as tellers Mr. RAINS and Mr. WOLCOTT.

The Committee again divided; and the tellers reported that there were—ayes 139, noes 149.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. ROGERS of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. ROGERS of Texas: On page 163, line 12, after "Association" insert "including mortgages purchased out of the portfolio of the Association which is subject to management and liquidation under section 306 hereof."

[Mr. ROGERS of Texas addressed the Committee. His remarks will appear hereafter in the Appendix.]

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the pending amendment.

Mr. Chairman, the amendment, I am afraid, has not been explained, but, as we understand it, the amendment would authorize the taking of the present portfolio which would ordinarily be in the management and liquidation section—306—and using it in the secondary market.

We have set up a well-balanced program in that respect. If the gentleman intends by his amendment to take it from liquidation then, of course, it would freeze a comparable amount in FNMA and would prevent it from exercising its true secondary market functions. We do not know how much they will indulge in that practice. It will run into the hundreds of millions of dollars that FNMA would have to hold instead of liquidating its assets. I do not think we want to do that without knowing where we are going.

Mr. EDMONDSON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I do not believe anywhere in the country we have held hearings on behalf of the Veterans' Affairs Committee and we have talked to builders who have not said it is essential that we have a secondary market for mortgages. I do not believe anywhere in the country they have talked to us on this point that the builders have not failed to emphasize the importance of this 1-for-1 plan under which it has been possible to get advance commitments that made possible the vast housing programs that have gone on in the past years.

There is no point in the world in putting this plan into operation and having a 1-year gap or a 1-year period in which there is no basis available for advance commitments or for purchase contracts. It may be that after 1 year it is advisable to carry out the policy as proposed in the bill. But what is going to happen in that period of 1 year if we do not have some basis on which to make these purchase contracts that are provided for in the bill?

May I quote to you from testimony before this committee given by Mr. R. G. Hughes, president, National Association of Home Builders, who told this committee exactly what will happen if this goes into effect as provided in the bill. He stated:

Under the bill as written, the 1-for-1 plan can be used only with respect to the prospective portfolio to be accumulated under the new secondary mortgage-market function. But there will be no new portfolio accumulated in FNMA's hands for at least a year to form a base for a new 1-for-1 operation. During that time construction would cease.

I want you to hear these words now from the man who heads the National Association of Home Builders:

During that time construction would cease in those many areas which presently depend on 1-for-1 as their sole source for the advance commitments which are essential to home building. Our suggestion would bridge the gap until the effect of the new legislation could be felt.

That is what is proposed by the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. ROGERS]. It provides a bridge there for that 1-year period. At the end of that 1-year period there is no reason why the mortgages that are in the liquidation portfolio today cannot thereafter be liquidated. We are going to delay for a period of time the liquidation period, but at the same time we are going to provide a basis for the purchase contracts that will make possible an effective advance commitment from the Government to enable us to carry on our building program. Certainly this is a thing that has sanity to it. It is a proposition with commonsense behind it, it is a proposition that does not mean any net loss to the Government, no net loss whatsoever. It does insure a continuation of an adequate building program.

Mr. Chairman, I hope that the House will vote for the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. ROGERS].

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. ROGERS].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. ROGERS of Texas) there were—ayes 79, noes 89.

Mr. ROGERS of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I demand tellers.

Tellers were ordered, and the Chairman appointed as tellers Mr. WOLCOTT and Mr. ROGERS of Texas.

The Committee again divided; and the tellers reported that there were—ayes 129, noes 128.

The CHAIRMAN. On this vote the Chair votes "no"; therefore the ayes being 129 and the noes 129, the amendment is not agreed to.

Mr. McDONOUGH. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, there has been some question in the minds of some of us that the bill does not provide for the financing of homes and the purchasing of mortgages under title III in outlying sections such as Guam, Alaska, and Hawaii. There is a section in the bill that provides that the President has the authority to use up to $200 million for the purchase of these mortgages wherever in his opinion that is necessary and where the economy of the Nation is affected by lack of such finances. Therefore, in order to assure the Delegate from Alaska, who has been concerned about this, and others, may I ask the chairman of the committee if that is not the situation, that this section of the bill does provide that authority?

Mr. WOLCOTT. As I understand the gentleman's inquiry, it provides for that authority.

Mr. McDONOUGH. The chairman of the committee has assured me that that section of the bill does do that.

Mr. BARTLETT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McDONOUGH. I yield to the gentleman from Alaska.

Mr. BARTLETT. May I inquire of the distinguished chairman of the committee if in his opinion the special assistance provision can perform the same functions or service as subsection (b) of section 2 of the Alaska Housing Act, which is sought to be repealed in section 305, page 178, of the bill?

Mr. WOLCOTT. The special assistance provision of the bill will take care of Alaska, with the exception of the loan authority. That is provided for in other legislation.

Mr. BARTLETT. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. McDONOUGH. The situation in Guam is that there are a large number of civilian employees identified with the Government and housing is necessary. We want to provide some means to finance that kind of housing. According to the interpretation of this section of the bill, it will provide that means. I wanted to get that point in the Record.

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MULTER: On page 178, strike out everything in lines 23 and 24.

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Chairman, this amendment seeks to strike section 306 from this title. It appears on page 178 of the bill. Section 306 seeks to repeal Public Law 243 of the 82d Congress, approved October 30, 1951. That section is the one which permits advance commitments by FHA for cooperative housing which has been used in the main by minority groups. Without this kind of commitment, minority groups cannot build any cooperative housing.

The difficulty up to now has been that the lenders have had an ample market for their funds. They stayed away from the minority-group housing. Now that money is becoming easier, they are looking for new fields, and they are just beginning to go into the field of minority cooperative group housing. Without this advance commitment, they cannot participate in that program.

It is, therefore, essential that this section be deleted from the bill so that cooperative housing for minority groups can be carried on. With this repealer, as it stands in the bill, that minority group housing will come to an end even before it gets underway.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MULTER. I yield.

Mr. McCORMACK. For the record, will the gentleman state what he has in mind by the expression "minority groups"?

Mr. MULTER. I mean our colored people and especially those who cannot move into houses because of segregation rules. Today they are trying to build multifamily houses and some single-family houses in large groups. They have not been able to get the financing. There is nothing in this bill to compel any community to mix the groups. This will, however, permit them to go where they are able to buy the land and put up housing on their own, which they can buy and own. Up to now, they could not get financing for it. It applies in the main to the colored groups.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MULTER. I yield.

Mr. JAVITS. Is it not a fact that these express groups in view of their nature, and of their being put together, could not possibly have any section 213 housing projects unless they could get this prior commitment?

Mr. MULTER. The gentleman is right. If you cannot get a prior commitment, which means an agreement to give you a mortgage, you cannot get temporary financing and you cannot put up the building.

Mr. JAVITS. Is it not a fact that the two groups who are finding it most difficult to get housing and are being displaced by these urban redevelopment projects are these very minorities?

Mr. MULTER. By both the urban redevelopment and the rural redevelopment projects.

Mr. JAVITS. I hope very much that the gentleman's amendment will be adopted.

Mr. MULTER. I appreciate the gentleman's support.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word and rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I think attention should be drawn to the fact that this applies only to so-called cooperative housing and the reason why the provision is repealed is that the authority for assisting minority housing is found in the special assistance functions. I call the gentleman's attention to the language on page 164, line 10, which refers to mortgages which are not necessarily readily acceptable to such investors. There is ample authority there to make the projects available to minority groups under these special assistance functions. That is all it amounts to anyway.

Mr. MULTER. Is it not true that there is no assurance as to that?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Well, there is no assurance under section 215 that it will be for minority groups.

Mr. MULTER. The point I am making is that it will come to an end even before it gets started.

Mr. WOLCOTT. There is a reasonable assurance under the language, which I mentioned here, that they will be taken care of, but there is no assurance at the present time under the situation that the gentleman proposes that they will be taken care of.

Mr. MULTER. But they have not been able to get the money. What objection can there be to this?

Mr. WOLCOTT. I heard the gentleman's colloquy which indicates that there has not been any trouble with FNMA and there has not been any trouble with the FHA, and there has not been any trouble with the primary lenders.

Mr. MULTER. Why not give them an opportunity to operate?

Mr. WOLCOTT. We have.

Mr. MULTER. What objection can there be to letting section 306 stay in the law?

Mr. WOLCOTT. There is no reason why you should put the two provisions in and foul it all up.

Mr. MULTER. But the other one is working now.

Mr. WOLCOTT. It is not working as satisfactorily as it is expected to work under the proposed language.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York.

The amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

TITLE IV—SLUM CLEARANCE AND URBAN RENEWAL

SEC. 401. The heading of title I of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended, is hereby amended to read "Title I—Slum Clearance and Urban Renewal."

undertake such of the aforesaid activities or other feasible community activities as may be suitably employed to achieve the objectives of such a program, and (2) on the basis of his review of such program, the Administrator determines that such program meets the requirements of this subsection and certifies to the constituent agencies affected that the Federal assistance may be made available in such community: Provided, That this sentence shall not apply to the insurance of, or commitment to insure, a mortgage under section 221 of the National Housing Act, as amended, if the mortgaged property is in a community referred to in clause (2) of section 221 (a).

"(d) The Administrator is authorized to establish facilities (1) for furnishing to communities, at their request, an urban renewal service to assist them in the preparation of a workable program as referred to in the preceding subsection and to provide them with technical and professional assistance for planning and developing local urban renewal programs, and (2) for the assembly, analysis and reporting of information pertaining to such programs."

The contract for any such advance of funds shall be made upon the condition that such advance of funds shall be repaid, with interest at not less than the applicable going Federal rate, out of any moneys which become available to the local public agency for the undertaking of the project involved."

SEC. 405. Subsection (a) of section 103 of said act, as amended, is hereby amended to read as follows:

The aggregate of such capital grants with respect to all the projects of a local public agency on which contracts for capital grants have been made under this title shall not exceed two-thirds of the aggregate of the net project costs of such projects, and the capital grant with respect to any individual project shall not exceed the difference between the net project cost and the local grants-in-aid actually made with respect to the project."

SEC. 406. Section 104 of said act, as amended, is hereby amended by striking "section 110 (f) of land" and inserting "section 110 (f) of the property".

SEC. 409. Section 107 of said act, as amended, is hereby amended by striking out the words "redevelopment plan" and inserting "urban renewal plan."

SEC. 410. Section 109 of said act as amended, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"(b) the provisions of title 18, United States Code, section 874, and of title 40, United States Code, section 276c, shall apply to work financed in whole or in part with funds made available for the development of a project pursuant to this title."

SEC. 411. Section 110 of said act, as amended, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 110. The following terms shall have the meanings, respectively, ascribed to them below, and, unless the context clearly indicates otherwise, shall include the plural as well as the singular number:

"(a) 'Urban renewal area' means an urban area that (1) the governing body of the locality determines to be blighted, deteriorated, or deteriorating and designates as appropriate for an urban renewal project, and (2) the Administrator approves as appropriate for a project under this title.

"(b) 'Urban renewal plan' means a plan, as it exists from time to time, for an urban renewal project, which plan (1) shall conform to the general plan of the locality as a whole and to the workable program referred to in section 101 hereof; (2) shall be sufficiently complete to indicate such land acquisition, demolition and removal of structures, redevelopment, improvements, and rehabilitation as may be proposed to be carried out in the urban renewal area, zoning and planning changes, if any, land uses, maximum densities, building requirements, and the plan's relationship to definite local objectives respecting appropriate land uses, improved traffic, public transportation, public utilities, recreational and community facilities, and other public improvements; and (3) shall include, for any part of the urban renewal area proposed to be acquired and redeveloped in accordance with clause (1) of the second sentence of subsection (c) of this section, a redevelopment plan approved by the governing body of the locality.

"(c) 'Urban renewal project' or 'project' may include undertakings and activities of a local public agency in an urban renewal area for the elimination and for the prevention of the development or spread of slums and blight, in accordance with an urban renewal plan to achieve sound community objectives for the establishment and preservation of well-planned residential neighborhoods of decent homes and suitable living environment for adequate family life, and may involve slum clearance and redevelopment in an urban renewal area, or rehabilitation or conservation in an urban renewal area, or any combination or part thereof, in accordance with such urban renewal plan. For the purposes of this subsection, 'slum clearance and redevelopment' may include (1) acquisition of (i) a slum area or a deteriorated or deteriorating area, or (ii) land which is either open or predominantly open and which because of obsolete platting, diversity of ownership, deterioration of structures or of site improvements, or otherwise, substantially impairs or arrests the sound growth of the community, or (iii) open land necessary for sound community growth which is to be developed for predominantly residential uses: Provided, That the requirement in paragraph (a) of this section that the area be blighted, deteriorated, or deteriorating shall not be applicable in the case of an open land project; (2) demolition and removal of buildings and improvements; (3) installation, construction, or reconstruction of streets, utilities, parks, playgrounds, and other improvements necessary for carrying out in the area the urban renewal objectives of this title in accordance with the urban renewal plan; and (4) making the land available for development or redevelopment by private enterprise or public agencies (including sale, initial leasing, or retention by the local public agency itself) at its fair value for uses in accordance with the urban renewal plan. For the purposes of this subsection, 'rehabilitation' or 'conservation' may include the restoration and renewal of a blighted, deteriorated, or deteriorating area by (1) carrying out plans for a program of voluntary repair and rehabilitation of buildings or other improvements in accordance with the urban renewal plan; (2) acquisition of real property and demolition or removal of buildings and improvements thereon where necessary to eliminate unhealthful, insanitary or unsafe conditions, lessen density, eliminate obsolete or other uses detrimental to the public welfare, or to otherwise remove or prevent the spread of blight or deterioration, or to provide land for needed public facilities; (3) installation, construction, or reconstruction, of such improvements as are described in clause (3) of the preceding sentence; and (4) the disposition of any property acquired in such urban renewal area (including sale, initial leasing, or retention by the local public agency itself) at its fair value for uses in accordance with the urban renewal plan.

"For the purposes of this title, the term 'project' shall not include the construction or improvement of any building, and the term 'redevelopment' and derivatives thereof shall mean development as well as redevelopment. For any of the purposes of section 109 hereof, the term 'project' shall not include any donations or provisions made as local grants-in-aid and eligible as such pursuant to clauses (2) and (3) of section 110 (d) hereof.

"(d) 'Local grants-in-aid' shall mean assistance by a State, municipality, or other public body, or (in the case of cash grants or donations of land or other real property) any other entity, in connection with any project on which a contract for capital grant has been made under this title, in the form of (1) cash grants; (2) donations, at cash value, of land or other real property (exclusive of land in streets, alleys, and other public rights-of-way which may be vacated in connection with the project) in the urban renewal area, and demolition, removal, or other work or improvements in the urban renewal area, at the cost thereof, of the types described in clause (2) and clause (3) of either the second or third sentence of section 110 (c); and (3) the provision, at their cost, of public buildings or other public facilities (other than publicly owned housing, and revenue-producing public utilities the capital cost of which is financed by service charges or special assessments) which are necessary for carrying out in the area the urban renewal objectives of this title in accordance with the urban renewal plan: Pro- vided. That in any case where, in the determination of the Administrator, any park, playground, public building, or other public facility is of direct benefit both to the urban renewal area and to other areas, and the approximate degree of the benefit to such other areas is estimated by the Administrator at 20 percent or more of the total benefits, the Administrator shall provide that, for the purpose of computing the amount of the local grants-in-aid for the project, there shall be included only such portion of the cost of such facility as the Administrator estimates to be proportionate to the approximate degree of the benefit of such facility to the urban renewal area: And provided further, That for the purpose of computing the amount of local grants-in-aid under this section 110 (d), the estimated cost (as determined by the Administrator) of parks, playgrounds, public buildings, or other public facilities may be deemed to be the actual cost thereof if (i) the construction or provision thereof is not completed at the time of final disposition of land in the project to be acquired and disposed of under the urban renewal plan, and (ii) the Administrator has received assurances satisfactory to him that such park, playground, public building, or other public facility will be constructed or completed when needed and within a time prescribed by him. With respect to any demolition or removal work, improvement, or facility for which a State, municipality, or other public body has received or has contracted to receive any grant or subsidy from the United States, or any agency or instrumentality thereof, the portion of the cost thereof defrayed or estimated by the Administrator to be defrayed with such subsidy or grant shall not be eligible for inclusion as a local grant-in-aid.

"(e) 'Gross project cost' shall comprise (1) the amount of the expenditures by the local public agency with respect to any and all undertakings necessary to carry out the project (including the payment of carrying charges, but not beyond the point where the project is completed), and (2) the amount of such local grants-in-aid as are furnished in forms other than cash.

"(f) 'Net project cost' shall mean the difference between the gross project cost and the aggregate of (1) the total sales prices of all land or other property sold, and (2) the total capital values (i) imputed, on a basis approved by the Administrator, to all land or other property leased, and (ii) used as a basis for determining the amounts to be transferred to the project from other funds of the local public agency to compensate for any land or other property retained by it for use in accordance with the urban renewal plan.

"(g) 'Going Federal rate' means (with respect to any contract for a loan or advance entered into after the first annual rate has been specified as provided in this sentence) the annual rate of interest which the Secretary of the Treasury shall specify as applicable to the 6-month period (beginning with the 6-month period ending December 31, 1953) during which the contract for loan or advance is made, which applicable rate for each 6-month period shall be determined by the Secretary of the Treasury by estimating the average yield to maturity, on the basis of daily closing market bid quotations or prices during the month of May or the month of November, as the case may be, next preceding such 6-month period, on all outstanding marketable obligations of the United States having a maturity date of 15 or more years from the first day of such month of May or November, and by adjusting such estimated average annual yield to the nearest one-eighth of 1 percent. Any contract for loan made may be revised or superseded by a later contract, so that the going Federal rate, on the basis of which the interest rate on the loan is fixed, shall mean the going

Federal rate, as herein defined, on the date that such contract is revised or superseded by such later contract.

"(h) 'Local public agency' means any State, county, municipality, or other governmental entity or public body, or two or more such entities or bodies, authorized to undertake the project for which assistance is sought. 'State' includes the several States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, and the Territories and possessions of the United States.

"(i) 'Land means any real property, including improved or unimproved land, structures, improvements, easements, incorporeal hereditaments, estates, and other rights in land, legal or equitable.

"(j) 'Administrator' means the Housing and Home Finance Administrator."

SEC. 412. Notwithstanding the amendments in this title to title I of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended, the Administrator, with respect to any project covered by any Federal aid contract executed, or prior approval granted, by him under said title I before the effective date of this act, upon request of the local public agency, shall continue to extend financial assistance for the completion of such project in accordance with the provisions of said title I in force immediately prior to the effective date of this act.

SEC. 413. The provisos with respect to the appropriation for capital grants for slum clearance and urban redevelopment contained in title I of the First Independent Offices Appropriation Act, 1954 (Public Law 176, 83d Cong.) are hereby repealed.

SEC. 414. The Housing and Home Finance Administrator is authorized to make grants, subject to such terms and conditions as he shall prescribe, to public bodies, including cities and other political subdivisions, to assist them in developing, testing, and reporting methods and techniques, and carrying out demonstrations and other activities for the prevention and the elimination of slums and urban blight. No such grant shall exceed two-thirds of the cost, as determined or estimated by said Administrator, of such activities or undertakings. In administering this section, said Administrator shall give preference to those undertakings which in his judgment can reasonably be expected to (1) contribute most significantly to the improvement of methods and techniques for the elimination and prevention of slums and blight, and (2) best serve to guide renewal programs in other communities. Said Administrator may make advance of progress payments on account of any grant contracted to be made pursuant to this section, notwithstanding the provisions of section 3648 of the Revised Statutes, as amended. The aggregate amount of grants made under this section shall not exceed $5 million and shall be payable from the capital grant funds provided under and authorized by section 103 (b) of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended.

SEC. 415. Section 19 of the District of Columbia Redevelopment Act of 1945, as amended, is hereby amended by striking "$2,000" in subsection (a) and subsection (b) and inserting in each instance "$3,000 unless insured as provided in title I of the National Housing Act, as amended."

SEC. 416. Section 20 of the District of Columbia Redevelopment Act of 1945, as amended, is hereby amended—

(1) by striking "1949" wherever it appears in said section and inserting "1949, as amended": Provided, That this clause (1) shall not limit or restrict any authority under said section 20; and

(2) by adding the following new subsections at the end of said section:

"(1) In addition to its authority under any other provision of this act, the Agency is hereby authorized to plan and undertake urban renewal projects (as such projects are defined in title I of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended), and in connection therewith the Agency, the District Commissioners, and the other appropriate agencies operating within the District of Columbia shall have all of the rights and powers which they have with respect to a project or projects financed in accordance with the preceding subsections of this section: Provided, That for the purpose of this subsection the word 'redevelopment' wherever found in this act (except in section 3 (n)) shall mean 'urban renewal,' and the references in section 6 to the acquisition, disposition, or assembly of real property for a project shall mean the undertaking of an urban renewal project.

"(j) The District Commissioners are hereby authorized to direct the Agency to prepare a workable program (such workable program to be approved by the said Commissioners) as prescribed by section 101 (c) of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended, and are also authorized to direct the Agency to request the necessary funds for the preparation by the Agency of said workable program. The District Commissioners are hereby authorized, with or without reimbursement, to assist the Agency in carrying out urban renewal projects and to utilize for that purpose the facilities and personnel of the District of Columbia under agreement with the Agency."

Mr. WOLCOTT (interrupting the reading). Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the remainder of title IV be considered as read, and that it shall be open to amend at any point. That carries down through line 14 on page 199.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment which is at the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. WOLCOTT: Page 182, in line 6, insert after the word "mortgage" the following: "under section 220 of the National Housing Act, as amended, if the mortgaged property is in an area referred to in clause (2) of section 220 (a), or."

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, we accept the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Wolcott].

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

TITLE V—LOW RENT PUBLIC HOUSING

SEC. 501. The United States Housing Act of 1937, as amended, is hereby amended—

(1) by striking the words following the first colon up to and including the words "such families" in subsection 10 (g) and inserting the following: "First, to families which are to be displaced by any low-rent housing project or by any public slum-clearance, redevelopment or urban renewal project, or through action of a public body or court, either through the enforcement of housing standards or through the demolition, closing, or improvement of dwelling units, or which were so displaced within 3 years prior to making application to such public housing agency for admission to any low-rent housing: Provided, That as among such projects or actions the public housing agency may from time to time extend a prior preference or preferences: And provided further, That, as among families within any such preference group"; and

(2) by striking the words "or was to be displaced by another low-rent housing project or by a public slum-clearance or redevelopment project" in clause (ii) of subsection 15 (8) (b) and inserting the following: "or was to be displaced by any low-rent housing project or by any public slum-clearance, redevelopment or urban renewal project, or through action of a public body or court, either through the enforcement of housing standards or through the demolition, closing, or improvement of a dwelling unit or units."

SEC. 502. Subsection 10 (h) of said act, as amended, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"(h) Every contract made pursuant to this act for annual contributions for any low-rent housing project initiated after March 1, 1949, shall provide that no annual contributions by the Authority shall be made available for such project unless such project is exempt from all real and personal property taxes levied or imposed by the State, city, county, or other political subdivisions, but such contract shall require the public housing agency to make payments in lieu of taxes equal to 10 percent of the annual shelter rents charged in such project or such lesser amount as (i) is prescribed by State law, or (ii) is agreed to by the local governing body in its agreement for local cooperation with the public housing agency required under subsection 15 (7) (b) (i) of this act, or (iii) is due to failure of a local public body or bodies other than the public housing agency to perform any obligation under such agreement: Provided, That, if at the time such agreement for local cooperation is entered into it appears that such 10 percent payments in lieu of taxes will not result in a contribution to the project through tax exemption by the State, city, county, or other political subdivisions in which the project is situated of at least 20 percent of the annual contributions to be paid by the Authority, the amounts of such payments in lieu of taxes shall be limited by the agreement to amounts, if any, which would not reduce the local contribution below such 20 percent: Provided further, That, with respect to any such project which is not exempt from all real and personal property taxes levied or imposed by the State, city, county, or other political subdivisions, such contract shall provide, in lieu of the requirements for tax exemption and payments in lieu of taxes, that no annual contributions by the Authority shall be made available for such project unless and until the State, city, county, or other political subdivisions in which such project is situated shall contribute, in the form of cash or tax remission, an amount equal to the greater of (i) the amount by which the taxes paid with respect to the project exceeds 10 percent of the annual shelter rents charged in such project or (ii) 20 percent of the annual contributions paid by the Authority (but not in excess of the taxes levied): And provided further, That, prior to execution of the contract for annual contributions the public housing agency shall, in the case of a tax-exempt project, notify the governing body of the locality of its estimate of the annual amount of such payments in lieu of taxes and of the amount of taxes which would be levied if the property were privately owned, or, in the case where the project is taxed, its estimate of the annual amount of the local cash contribution, and shall thereafter include the actual amounts in its annual reports. Contracts for annual contributions entered into prior to the effective date of the Housing Act of 1954 may be amended in accordance with the first sentence of this subsection."

SEC. 503. Section 10 of said act, as amended, is hereby amended by adding the following new subsection:

"(1) Every contract made pursuant to this act for annual contributions for any low-rent housing project for which no such contract has been entered into prior to the enactment of the Housing Act of 1954 shall provide that—

"(1) after payment in full of all obligations of the public housing agency in connection with the project for which any annual contributions are pledged, and until the total amount of annual contributions paid by the Authority in respect to such project has been repaid pursuant to the provisions of this subsection, (a) all receipts in connection with the project in excess of expenditures necessary for management, operation, maintenance, or financing, and for reasonable reserves therefor, shall be paid annually to the Authority and to local public bodies which have contributed to the project in the form of tax exemption or otherwise, in proportion to the aggregate contribution which the Authority and such local public bodies have made to the project, and (b) no debt in respect to the project, except for necessary expenditures for the project, shall be incurred by the public housing agency;

"(2) if, at any time, the project or any part thereof is sold, such sale shall be to the highest responsible bidder after advertising, or at fair market value, and the proceeds of such sale together with any reserves, after application to any outstanding debt of the public housing agency in respect to such project, shall be paid to the Authority and local public bodies as provided in clause 1 (a) of this subsection: Provided, That the amounts to be paid to the Authority and the local public bodies shall not exceed their respective total contribution to the project."

SEC. 504. Paragraph (6) of section 16 of said act, as amended, is hereby repealed.

Mr. WOLCOTT (interrupting the reading). I ask unanimous consent, Mr. Chairman, that the remainder of title V be considered as read, and that it be open to amendment at any point.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Mr. WIDNALL. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment which is at the desk.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I was on my feet and I have an amendment at the desk.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. WIDNALL] likewise has an amendment. The gentleman from Kentucky rose before the unanimous-consent agreement had been reached. Both gentlemen were on their feet. Both gentlemen are members of the committee. The Chair felt it was within his discretion to recognize the gentleman from New Jersey.

The Clerk will report the amendment offered by the gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Chairman, a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MULTER. I most respectfully submit, Mr. Chairman, that the Chair is not acting properly in the exercise of his discretion. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. SPENCE] was on his feet asking for recognition before the Chair recognized the gentleman from New Jersey.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair has been a Member of this body for some few years. The Chair is satisfied he is acting in accordance with precedent.

The Clerk will report the amendment offered by the gentleman from New Jersey.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. WIDNALL: On page 199, after line 15, insert the following new section:

"SEC. 502. Section 10 of the United States Housing Act of 1937, as amended, is hereby amended by adding the following new subsection:

"(J) Notwithstanding the provisions of any other law, the Public Housing Administration may, with respect to low-rent housing projects initiated after March 1, 1949, enter into new contracts, agreements, or other arrangements during the fiscal year 1955 for loans and annual contributions pursuant to the United States Housing Act of 1937, as amended, with respect to not exceeding 35,000 additional units: Provided, That no such new contract, agreement, or other arrangement shall be made except with respect to low-rent housing projects to be undertaken in a community in which there is being carried out a slum clearance and urban redevelopment project, or a slum clearance and urban renewal project, assisted under title I of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended, and the local public agency undertaking such slum clearance and urban redevelopment project, or slum clearance and urban renewal project, certifies that such low-rent housing project is necessary to assist in meeting the relocation requirements of section 105 (c) of title I of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended: And provided further, That the total number of dwelling units in low-rent housing projects covered by such new contracts, agreements, or other arrangements shall not exceed the total number of such dwelling units which the Administrator determines to be needed for the relocation of families to be displaced as a result of governmental action in such community."

And renumber appropriately the succeeding sections of title V.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment at the Clerk's desk that I would like to be considered as an amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr. WIDNALL. Mr. Chairman, I have not yielded to the gentleman.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kentucky can offer his amendment immediately after the gentleman from New Jersey has concluded his 5 minutes, unless the gentleman from New Jersey desires sooner to yield for that purpose.

Mr. SPENCE. If I am recognized for that purpose.

Mr. WIDNALL. I do not yield at this time.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair has to protect the rights of the gentleman from New Jersey.

The gentleman from New Jersey is recognized.

Mr. WIDNALL. Mr. Chairman, one of the most controversial issues constantly being presented for consideration by the Congress is that of public housing. There are earnest and sincere advocates both for and against.

There is certainly one fact acknowledged by both sides. Slums are a blot on America. They are existing to the disgrace of our people. Too often in the past there has been an unholy alliance between the slum owner and municipal authorities. Slums have festered and grown because of the failure to enact or enforce adequate sanitary, building, health, or fire codes. Communities within our country are at last awake to the wisdom of making slums unprofitable.

I would like to read at this time part of an editorial recently published in the New York Times, entitled "Congress and Public Housing":

To those who have seen at firsthand the fine accomplishments wrought in our large cities by slum-clearance public housing it is discouraging to see the opposition, even to the point of animus, voiced against such housing in Congress, and especially in the House. One would expect House Members, being close to the people, to be aware of the importance of clean, decent housing in strengthening our democracy, in creating more wholesome conditions in which to rear children, in improving the moral climate. One would expect the House membership to be more sympathetic toward people of low income struggling to live with some dignity.

The large cities, and especially New York, are a special problem in housing. High land costs and other handicaps make home ownership out of the question for thousands of families. The House won't be helping these families in Manhattan, Brooklyn, and the Bronx, by encouraging private enterprise on a $7,000 house. Nor can these families build little cottages for themselves after supper and on weekends, as so many do-it-yourself families do, all over the country, and more power to them.

As originally created public housing was sold on the basis of slum clearance.

In this bill there will be found the means for slum clearance and urban renewal under a broad new program.

As of December 31, 1953, there were 146 slum clearance and redevelopment projects in the final planning of loan and grant stage. These projects would result in the displacement of 40,000 families who would become eligible under this program. The final planning of loan and grant stage is that period in the program at which information on displaced families becomes available.

This amendment would permit the Public Housing Administration to enter into new contracts during the fiscal year 1955 for 35,000 additional low-rent public housing units. In other words, it would permit putting into the pipelines an additional 35,000 units which may be necessary to meet the problem of relocating low-income families who are to be displaced from their present place of living due to demolition of slum areas or other governmental action.

In the bill now before you is a broadened slum clearance, and urban redevelopment, conservation, and rehabilitation program designed to not only assist existing slum and blighted areas, but also affording a means of conserving neighborhoods and prevent them from becoming the slums of tomorrow. It is an overall integrated program. Communities, before qualifying for assistance, must show that they themselves are willing to take the necessary steps to preserve their communities by adopting and enforcing the proper health, sanitation, and housing codes and ordinances.

This amendment can play an important part in that program. Low-income families displaced as a result of governmental action in connection with slum clearance and urban redevelopment or urban renewal projects, whose income is not sufficient to enable them to pay an economic rent in other available housing accommodations, will be assured of housing accommodations. The amendment will assist in carrying out the original purposes of the public-housing act, as I understand it, which is to provide adequate housing accommodations for low-income families displaced from slum and blighted areas and who must be relocated.

The units contracted for under this amendment would be available in those communities which either now have a slum clearance or urban redevelopment program or hereafter are eligible for assistance under the urban renewal provisions of the Housing Act of 1949.

The amendment would provide for contracts to be entered into during the fiscal year 1955 which under existing law could be started during the fiscal year 1956. By its action this week the House has already authorized the 35,000 units now in the pipeline to be started during the fiscal year 1955.

I would like to further call your attention to the fact that the new FHA section 221 program is limited in its application to those families displaced as a result of governmental action in communities receiving slum clearance assistance under title I of the Housing Act of 1949. It is hoped that both the new FHA sections 220 and 221 will provide a means of rehousing many of these displaced families and thus decreasing the future need for public housing.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New Jersey has expired.

(On request of Mr. CANFIELD, and by unanimous consent, Mr. WIDNALL was allowed to proceed for 5 additional minutes.)

Mr. DEANE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WIDNALL. I yield to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. DEANE. May I say to the gentleman from New Jersey that I have served as a member of the minority with him and I admire his work on the committee. Having served with him on investigations, I am appreciative of his sincere interest in all phases of public housing wherever it is located and I commend the gentleman for offering this particular amendment.

Mr. WIDNALL. I thank the gentleman.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WIDNALL. I yield to the gentlewoman from Massachusetts.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. I, too, would like to commend the gentleman for his action. In my own city of Lowell, Mass., people were displaced and cannot get housing.

Mr. WIDNALL. I thank the gentlewoman from Massachusetts.

Mr. CANFIELD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WIDNALL. I yield to the gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr. CANFIELD. Mr. Chairman, I desire to congratulate the gentleman from New Jersey and to assure him of my support of his amendment.

Mr. WIDNALL. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. GAVIN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WIDNALL. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. GAVIN. Can the gentleman give us some idea of the estimated cost of this proposal he is presenting?

Mr. WIDNALL. I cannot give the gentleman an estimated cost at this time.

Mr. GAVIN. Approximately what does the gentleman think it would cost?

Mr. WIDNALL. I will obtain the figures and submit them to the gentleman.

Mr. GAVIN. I think we ought to first know approximately what this proposal is going to cost if we are going to give it consideration. I believe it is important that some member of the committee be here to give us the desired information. Can the gentleman assure us within the next several minutes that he can give us that information?

Mr. WIDNALL. I can give the gentleman that further assurance. I would like to say at this time that this is in line with the President's program. The costs would vary according to where the projects are to be located, according to local taxes, and the amount involved in the construction.

Mr. GAVIN. Like Mr. Rich, I am concerned as to where we are going to get the money.

Mr. KERSTEN of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WIDNALL. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. KERSTEN of Wisconsin. I would like to compliment the gentleman for this amendment. In Milwaukee we have a slum-clearance project on which operations are commencing, and I particularly appreciate the accent on slum clearance. We would like to clean out our slums, and that is the primary object of this amendment, as I understand.

Mr. WIDNALL. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. YATES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WIDNALL. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. YATES. According to the testimony submitted to our Committee on Appropriations, the cost of constructing a unit was approximately $12,000. I do not know whether that answers his question or not. This is the construction cost. What the sum total of annual contributions will be, I do not know. But the cost of constructing these projects is only a fraction of the total cost necessary to take care of these blighted areas—the delinquency problem and the police protection made necessary by maintaining these slums.

Mr. OAKMAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WIDNALL. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. OAKMAN. I understand the amendment is to provide not to exceed 35,000 public housing units for fiscal 1955.

Mr. WIDNALL. That is correct.

Mr. OAKMAN. To be built only in areas cleared of slums; to be replacement units; is that correct?

Mr. WIDNALL. And to relocate families displaced as the result of slum clearance, urban redevelopment, or through renewal programs.

Mr. OAKMAN. Not only to be cleared but are now cleared slum projects and that are being built around the periphery of the cities?

Mr. WIDNALL. Yes.

Mr. OAKMAN. And that is only for fiscal 1955?

Mr. WIDNALL. Yes.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment in the nature of a substitute.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. SPENCE as a substitute to the amendment offered by Mr. WIDNALL: On page 199 after line 15 insert the following new section:

"Sec. 501. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, Public Housing Administration, with respect to low-rent housing projects under the United States Housing Act of 1937 initiated after March 1, 1949, may authorize the commencement of construction of not to exceed 35,000 dwelling units during the fiscal year 1955, and not to exceed 35,000 additional units during each of the fiscal years 1956, 1957, and 1958 and may enter into such agreements, contracts, and other arrangements for the construction of such dwelling units as may be necessary."

And renumber the four succeeding sections accordingly.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, this substitute is offered to make this bill conform to the wishes of the President as expressed in his housing message of January 25 this year. He stated that the program set out in the bill has not been tried, and its success has not been established. Therefore he recommended that public housing be maintained at a reasonable level, and he suggested that it be continued for the next 4 years, 140,000 new units, with 35,000 to be constructed each year.

Mr. HOLIFIELD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SPENCE. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. HOLIFIELD. The gentleman is, of course, giving the exact content, in a sense, of the President's message to Congress on January 25; and if he will yield further to me, I will read the President's words.

Mr. SPENCE. I yield.

Mr. HOLIFIELD. I am reading from page 4 of the President's message, House Document No. 306, the last paragraph:

Until these new programs have been fully tested and by actual performance have shown their success, we should continue at a reasonable level the public housing program authorized by the Housing Act of 1949. I recommend, therefore, that the Congress authorize construction during the next 4 years of 140,000 units of new public housing to be built in annual increments of 35,000 units. Special preference among eligible families should be given to those who must be relocated because of slum clearance, neighborhood rehabilitation, or similar public actions. The continuance of this program will be reviewed before the end of the 4-year period, when adequate evidence exists to determine the success of the other measures I have recommended.

So the gentleman is advocating the very program which President Eisenhower sent up to the Congress on January 25.

Mr. SPENCE. The President has very wisely said that this program we are now considering is an experiment, and it would be folly not to continue public housing until we can discover whether or not the program we are now considering will be a success.

This amendment carries out to the letter the program of the President. I judge that the President has made sufficient investigation to know just what that program will cost and what its advantages will be.

I congratulate the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. WIDNALL] on taking the stand he did today in bringing in his amendment, and I congratulate the Members of the majority party in acknowledging the usefulness and necessity of low-rent public housing.

The President has asked for it, and you have now recognized it as a principle that low-rent public housing should be continued.

Mr. OLIVER P. BOLTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. SPENCE. I yield.

Mr. OLIVER P. BOLTON. Did I understand that the gentleman's amendment carried a provision specifically requiring that there be a preference for those who are moving from slum-clearance projects?

Mr. SPENCE. It merely continues the existing program for 4 years.

Mr. OLIVER P. BOLTON. In other words, the gentleman's amendment actually does not contain the recommendations in the President's program?

Mr. SPENCE. It contains the essential things that the President has asked for. The fundamental thing which the President speaks of is that we are trying to clean up the slums, to eliminate and prevent slums. That is one of the main objectives of this bill. The President wants to see that carried out. He realizes the weakness of this bill. He realizes that we have gone into fields we have never been in before. He realizes that we do not know what the results will be, and he asks us to continue the program that has formerly worked very well in eliminating the slums and blighted areas.

The program has accomplished it. There is no doubt about that. They may abuse it. They may call it socialistic. They may say it is unconstitutional, but they could not say that with much force, because the courts have upheld it. But with all that, it has accomplished the purpose that was sought to be achieved and has been a very effective means of removing the people from blighted areas and furnishing them a decent place in which to live.

I have seen the result of public housing in the town where I live and the towns nearby, where slums have actually been cleaned up and where the whole aspect of the city is different. The people have a new self-respect, a new courage, a new confidence, because of these slum clearance projects.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

(Mr. SPENCE asked and was given permission to proceed for 5 additional minutes.)

Mr. SPENCE. I judge now that you have acknowledged the necessity of these public-housing projects, that you have adopted it as one of the policies of your party, you will not be influenced by the arguments that have heretofore been made against it as being socialistic and un-American. Nothing is un-American that helps a large segment of our people. The Government was established by "we, the people," and the people are the strength of the Government and the hope of the future. Unless you do something to help the underprivileged, you are not doing your full duty as their representatives. You say you are going to do it by this bill. I doubt if you will ever clear up any slums by this bill.

I say it is good policy to have the public-housing law on the statute books as a standby law in case the present experiment fails. I hope that you will vote this amendment up and give us a chance again to see what can be done with this bill while it is on trial. This amendment will afford a means to cure the deficiencies which may be found on trial.

Mr. HALLECK. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the Widnall amendment and in opposition to the Spence substitute.

May I say at the outset that some of you who seek to continue this program for a while might be just a little careful about supporting the Spence substitute against the original amendment. We have not heard so much about public housing since the debate on the rule, and that was all in good humor. A lot of my good friends over here—and when I say "friends" I mean it—with whom I have served have had a lot of fun needling me. Undoubtedly many of them thought, "I wonder what old Charlie is going to say about that."

I want to review just a little history, but first of all I want to say this: I have spoken of the Eisenhower administration's program overall. I think it is a good one. I think it is one that is devised to be in the best interests of the country and of all the people. It is a program that we should support. I must say that even today I have watched my good friends on the Democratic side of the aisle line up solidly, whether you were from the South or the North, to vote down that aisle against us as we have been amending this bill. I sometimes wonder just who is for what, but there has been no question about my position.

I also recognize that there is no one of us who agrees in every way with every part of the program. It would be impossible to have that kind of agreement. I want to say again, as I have said before, that this program was hammered out in a series of conferences that began even before the President was inaugurated, continued on through the first session and into the conferences that were held before we opened this session, and later in conferences after this session got underway.

It is a program in which people have had their say. Having had their say, of course, they are free to support all of it or parts of it, but in any event that is the way the program has been devised. By and large, I say it is a good program.

Going back to some of the things which were said here in the debate on the rule. I well recall that memorable occasion in 1939 when there was an effort to greatly expand or develop or initiate a public-housing program. I took my stand against it then. I recall it as though it were yesterday when a great speech was made here in opposition to that bill by a former Member of this House who is now a Member of the other body. After that time, we had the Wagner-Ellender-Taft bill for which there was much urging, but on which no action was had. Then, in the 80th Congress, it became the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill. It was passed in the other body but was never adopted in the House of Representatives because, I think, it would have been defeated by from 75 to 100 votes at that time. After we Republicans were defeated in 1948, we came into the Democratic 81st Congress. Again a public-housing bill was passed in the other body. I checked the record and there were only 13 votes against it in the other body at that time. Among those who voted in favor of it were people whom I respected then and respect now—but they did vote for it. Subsequently, that measure came to this body. It is true that I again opposed the bill. But, it was adopted here by a close vote and it became the law of the land. It provided for the construction of 135,000 units over a period of 6 years. Subsequently, by action of the Committee on Appropriations, confirmed by the House and by the other body, and in conference, that figure was cut back to 35,000 units per year as the limit, and we proceeded under that program. Under the 1949 Public Housing Act, some 210,000 units have been built. So we do have, and we have had for several years now, a public housing program. What is the issue, therefore, that confronts us today? It is not whether you are voting for or against public housing—because we do have public housing. The issue is when shall public housing, as a Federal operation, be terminated. That is the only issue. By action of the Committee on Appropriations, termination dates have been dealt with. The other day a situation developed which I think makes it manifestly clear that in the coming fiscal year upwards of 33,000 public housing units will be built. What does the Widnall amendment do? It says that we will postpone for a year at least the termination of this program that we already have. That is all that it says. It says that the pipeline can be filled up in the next fiscal year, if communities qualify, if the demand is there, and then in the following fiscal year, those starts or constructions may be made. It also, of course, necessarily recognizes that at the end of that time, the Congress can then again take a look at the program and particularly take a look at it in the light of this new overall housing program, which I say is a good one developed by some of the best brains in the country, and then determine what further we should do. The gentleman from Kentucky refers to public housing as an experiment. If he properly refers to it, and I believe he does, if it is an experiment, it is not to be considered as an all-time, permanent ad infinitum policy of the Federal Government.

With respect to the President's position in that regard, let me point out to you that what he said to us in the messages indicates that he does not consider it a permanent program but rather a temporary program subject to reexamination.

In the state of the Union message he carefully pointed out, "and until alternative programs prove more effective, continuation of the public-housing program established in the Housing Act of 1949."

Then in the housing message itself:

Until these new programs have been fully tested and by actual performance have shown their success, we should continue at a reasonable level the public-housing program authorized by the Housing Act of 1949.

Mr. SPENCE. Will the gentleman read further?

Mr. HALLECK. I yield.

Mr. SPENCE. I say the gentleman did not read specifically his recommendation.

Mr. HALLECK. Of course, he did go ahead and talk about 140,000. Now I will address myself to that at this point, but before I do that—

Mr. SPENCE. I do not think the gentleman should apologize for his recommendation.

Mr. HALLECK. Oh, may I say to the gentleman from Kentucky, if I were to cast again the votes that I cast when this program was initiated, I would go back and do the very same thing. Let us understand that.

Now I want to discuss just a moment more this matter of extension rather than a vote on the fundamental issue that is involved, because I think that is clearly indicated by the President's message. Further, as to the President's attitude, he expressed in a press conference last Wednesday, and it was reported in the press, his satisfaction with the arrangement for the coming fiscal year by which we shall build those units for which we are contractually obligated. Then he spoke of a suggestion that had come to him of 35,000 additional to run over into the pipeline for the following year, and expressed his satisfaction with that.

I say to you on my responsibility here in my position, that the program as announced by the Widnall amendment for the 35,000 for 1 year is satisfactory to the administration.

Mr. YATES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HALLECK. I would like to proceed for a moment, please, and then I will yield.

Again, some of my friends over here got on me rather roughly the other day, but I recall when we had that tax-exemption matter before us the other day, which I thought was a matter of fundamental principle, there were only nine over here who voted with us. In the 80th Republican Congress we had proposals for steam plants in the TVA. I opposed them. Of course they did not pass in the 80th Congress. But in the 81st Congress they did pass. Yesterday there was a proposal to build a steam plant in Memphis, Tenn., on the Mississippi River, not the Tennessee River. You might as well have put the Federal Government in the business of building a steam plant at Indianapolis, Ind. But again my friends over here, who castigate me on the way we are going down the aisle, voted for that steam plant over in Memphis.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HALLECK. Yes; I yield.

Mr. SPENCE. I did not mean to castigate the gentleman. I have a very high regard for him, but did the President repudiate what he said in his housing message?

Mr. HALLECK. I will answer that. I am sure the gentleman meant that question in all sincerity, and not facetiously. I do not think it involves any repudiation of any position. If you want to say that it involves repudiation—that is a rather harsh word—but if it involves a willingness to meet halfway some other idea that somebody else might have, then I say thank God we have got a President who is willing to meet them halfway, and not insist on every line and every paragraph of every proposal he has made.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Indiana has expired.

Mr. HALLECK. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 3 additional minutes.

Mr. SPENCE. I did not mean to use the word "repudiation" in any harsh way, but I thought possibly the policy squad went down to see him and persuaded him to change his views. Is that what happened?

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

Mr. YATES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HALLECK. I yield.

Mr. YATES. Will members of the gentleman's party meet the President halfway?

Mr. HALLECK. That is up to them.

Mr. McDONOUGH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HALLECK. I yield.

Mr. McDONOUGH. I appreciate the position the gentleman has taken, but if the amendment offered by the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. WIDNALL] is adopted, becomes part of the bill, will the gentleman support an amendment that will protect cities and municipalities that do not want public housing in their desire not to have it if they decide by referendum they do not want it? I have such an amendment I would like to offer.

Mr. JAVITS. If the gentleman will yield, that is in the law now.

Mr. McDONOUGH. It is not permanent legislation; it is in an appropriation bill.

Mr. HALLECK. I think that any city and municipality ought to have the right to refuse a program if they do not want it. As far as I am concerned no one should be able to force it upon a city or county. It was in a bill, but was stricken out on the point of order made by the gentleman from New York [Mr. MULTER]. I was very unhappy to have him make that point of order, because a lot of things went out that should have stayed in that bill. That should be in this bill. It could have been corrected here, but it has not been.

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HALLECK. I have made my position clear; now if I may just proceed for a moment without interruption.

Mr. MULTER. The gentleman referred to my name; will he not yield?

Mr. HALLECK. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. MULTER. The matter mentioned by the gentleman from California which the gentleman from Indiana says was struck out on my point of order in the appropriation bill is in the law today; that point is there, that you cannot force public housing on a community.

Mr. McDONOUGH. That is not so.

Mr. HALLECK. If it is not in there, it should be.

Mr. McDONOUGH. It is not in the Public Housing Act; it is in an appropriation bill.

Mr. HALLECK. As I have watched some of the actions here in recent months of some of my good friends here, I am reminded of a story Lindsay Warren told one time. He told of the fellow down south who was chopping cotton. The sun was beating him down, beating him down. Finally, he looked up at the sun and said: "Sun, where were you last winter when I needed you so bad?"

Again, let me just say that the issue here is not whether you are for or against public housing; the issue is when shall it be terminated? How shall it be tapered off? How shall it be fitted in with this new program?

Those are the things that are important. Let me say also in view of some of the statements that were made by some of my friends on this side of the aisle indicating that everybody had gone to the dogs and that we were folding up again, the President of the United States wants to build a stronger, peaceful, more prosperous America; and he has a program for this purpose. As far as I am concerned, I am going to try to help him build it. I do not think that in this request there is anything unreasonable. It does not run counter to my convictions as I view it.

I therefore earnestly ask that the substitute be voted down and that the Widenall amendment be adopted.

Mr. COLMER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. COLMER: On page 199, after the Spence amendment, insert the following:

"Within 90 days after the effective date of this act the Housing Commissioner is authorized and directed to tender to each of the tenants in public-housing units a deed in fee simple for the units so occupied; and shall forthwith evict all tenants who refuse to accept such deeds. The same procedure shall be pursued as to all future units until they are disposed of.

"No subsidy, contribution, expense, or gratuity shall be paid directly or indirectly for the account of any such unit after the date of deeding such units to the respective tenants."

Mr. COLMER. Mr. Chairman, in taking the position that I do here today in opposition to public housing as such I am merely following out a position that I have consistently entertained from the very beginning of this program. In fact, I have voted and worked consistently each year against the continuation of the program which in my judgment is inimicable to the very existence of the Government under which we live. Frankly, out of the new Fair Deal program, there have been some good and bad features. For instance, I think that the rural electrification program is the best of that whole setup and has been a great boon to the rural peoples of this country and has contributed to the preservation of this glorious young Republic. It has done a job that private enterprise refused to do. But, out of all of this New and Fair Deal program, it is my considered judgment that this so-called public housing is the most inimicable to the continuation of the Republic. It strikes at the very bulwark of the Republic. It is un-American. It is socialistic in the truest sense of the word. It would destroy if permitted to continue to grow, the principle of individual home ownership, which after all is one of the basic principles upon which our Government is founded. It eats at the foundation of free and private enterprise. It destroys the initiative of the individual citizen and in the end if its proponents should prevail in their ambitious plans could end only in a socialistic state, or even worse, a dictatorship. This country is builded upon and has grown to its status of world leadership upon the American principle of home ownership. This housing program would lead to something entirely different. For instance, one has only to point out that communism is foreign and repugnant to home owners. We cannot continue this program without endangering the very foundation and the basic principles upon which the Government is founded.

Therefore I have proposed here by this amendment that if this program must be followed, if this House is to reverse itself by renewing this iniquitous program after only last year killing it by a vote of approximately 2 to 1, then it would be better for our common country from every angle considered to give these houses to the occupants thereof. While I naturally will be charged, possibly with some justification, of being facetious in offering this amendment, I believe that, if it must be done, that it is better to do it this way. It would be to the best interest of all concerned if the Federal Government should make a straight-out gift to the proposed occupants, and in that I am very serious.

In the first place, we would thereby make homeowners out of these proposed tenants. Having the responsibility of home ownership, they would naturally be more interested in their Government. They would no longer be under the compulsion to remain in the low-income class in order to have a place to live. Thus their initiative would be restored. They would no longer be subjected to governmental regimentation. For I am sure that those who have studied this program will bear me out in the assertion that in these large public housing subdivisions these tenants are often required to vote according to the dictates of the prevailing governmental authorities under threat of eviction.

On the other hand, under my proposal the Government, that is to say the taxpayers, would no longer be required to subsidize the housing project. In fact, as I pointed out in a colloquy with the distinguished gentleman from Texas [Mr. FISHER], on yesterday that if this ambitious program as originally proposed were carried out that the Government would save in excess of $14 billion by deeding the property over to the tenants as soon as the houses were constructed. In other words, under the basic law governing the public housing, the Treasury of the United States is required to subsidize the rental operations of these houses. Taking as a basis $11,000 as the cost of each unit, the subsidy over the 40-year period would be $8,800 per unit. This $8,800 per unit, representing the subsidy from the United States Treasury, would be saved to the taxpayers if the houses were given away in the first place. But, as a matter of fact, the latest figures that I have been able to obtain are to the effect that these units are costing now more than $14,000. Therefore, the cost to the Government is that much greater. All that one has to do, therefore, is to multiply this $8,800 or $10,000, or whatever it figures out to be under the latest figures, by the number of units to be built and one can see just how much this program is costing the taxpayers.

Mr. Chairman, I come back to the proposition that aside from the cost that the program is un-American and could in the end only destroy our system of Government. For instance, in my effort to analyze the situation, I have often thought of two men who worked side-by-side in a given industry. One is frugal, sober-minded, industrious and possessed of a keen desire to own his own home and go forward on his own initiative. He works regularly. Down in my country, when his 8 hours of work are over, he goes home and with his own hands and often with the assistance of his wife, builds himself a modest home out of his savings. He becomes a homeowner and a good citizen with initiative unlimited for advancement. His companion is not of a sober, industrious disposition. He works only when he feels like it and wastes his earnings in beer shops and otherwise. Therefore, his income is lower. Under this housing program the Government builds the not-so-industrious, ambitious worker an $11,000 or $14,000 house to live in at whatever rental he was able to pay. While at the same time the sober, industrious fellow worker who has built his own home would be taxed to furnish the other fellow a better place in which to live than he himself could afford.

Mr. Chairman, I opposed this program as I stated before under both of my Democratic Presidents, Roosevelt and Truman, because I thought it was wrong. Certainly if it were wrong under Presidents Roosevelt and Truman, it is wrong under President Eisenhower. Last year, this House, I repeat, by a vote of approximately 2 to 1, wrote finis to this program. It killed it and it is dead today unless revived here by this House. And, I might point out to my Republican colleagues, that in that vote there were only 23 out of over 200 Republicans who voted against killing it. Now I have sympathy with a true liberal or New Dealer who believes in this kind of a program. We have many here over on our side. But to me it is unbelievable that any substantial number of our Republican friends on the other side of the aisle who have voted consistently against this program will about-face and vote for it.

Mr. Chairman, I have offered this amendment to point up the seriousness of the situation since I do not feel that the Federal Government owes it to any minority group of normal people to furnish them housing. I shall no doubt at the proper time ask permission to withdraw my amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Mississippi has expired.

(Mr. COLMER asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DIES. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word and ask unanimous consent to proceed for 5 additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

Mr. GAVIN. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, I have no objection to the gentleman taking 5 or 15 minutes, but I do not want to see this debate run along here for about a half or three-quarters of an hour and suddenly be shut off, and those that do want to speak are not given the opportunity to speak. So, if the Chairman will advise us whether he will permit debate to continue, I will not object.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Maybe we can clean the situation up right now if the gentleman will yield for that purpose.

Mr. DIES. I yield.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on the Widnall amendment, the substitute, and all amendments thereto close in 30 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. I object, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on the Widnall amendment, the substitute, and all amendments thereto close in 40 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

Mr. WHEELER. I object, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on the Widnall amendment, the substitute, and all amendments thereto close in 45 minutes.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. PRICE) there were—ayes 125, noes 39.

So the motion was agreed to.

Mr. GREEN. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. GREEN. My parliamentary inquiry is for the purpose of clearing up the situation. Is the gentleman from Texas' request to proceed for 5 additional minutes included in the 45 minutes?

The CHAIRMAN. No. This is the situation, as the Chair understands it. The gentleman moved to strike out the last word and propound a unanimous-consent request that has not been acceded to. Pending the request, he yielded to the gentleman from Michigan for a specific purpose. The Chair feels that the gentleman from Texas is recognized for 5 minutes at the present time.

Mr. DIES. Well, the Chair put the question, and no one objected to it.

Mr. GAVIN. I objected to it with reservations.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair had not yet propounded the question. The gentleman from Texas is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. GAVIN. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DIES] to proceed for an additional 5 minutes?

Mr. HAYS of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, I should like to know, if this request is granted, how long are we going to go on these amendments? Does it mean we shall proceed for 45 minutes in addition to the 10 minutes granted to the gentleman from Texas, or 45 minutes including the time taken by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DIES]?

The CHAIRMAN. The additional 5 minutes requested by the gentleman from Texas would be included within the 45 minutes agreed upon.

Mr. HAYS of Ohio. I withdraw my reservation of objection, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DIES]?

Mr. BOLLING. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, will the Chair state how the time will be allocated beyond that time taken by the gentleman from Texas, and to whom?

The CHAIRMAN. The time will be allocated after the gentleman from Texas has concluded.

Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

Mr. GREEN. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, I am only trying to get the situation clear in my own mind. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. DIES] was recognized for 5 minutes and propounded a unanimous-consent request to speak for an additional 5 minutes. That was not objected to.

Mr. GAVIN. Mr. Chairman, that was objected to.

Mr. GREEN. Mr. Chairman, that was not objected to. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GAVIN] rose and made some remarks, but he did not object to the request. So there was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair wishes to state that the unanimous-consent request had not been agreed to and the gentleman from Texas yielded to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WOLCOTT], who then made his motion.

Mr. GREEN. Mr. Chairman, I think the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WOLCOTT] can clear this situation up.

Regular order was demanded.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DIES] to proceed for an additional 5 minutes?

There was no objection.

Mr. GAVIN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIES. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. GAVIN. In a spirit of fair play, in view of the fact that there are perhaps 15 Members who desire to speak, may I suggest that the gentleman take 7 minutes and yield back the remainder of his time?

Mr. DIES. I shall consider that.

Mr. Chairman, I can find no objection to the attitude of the sincere proponents of public housing. I know that there are men in this Congress who have consistently advocated that program for many years. They believe, as they have a right to believe, that this is a worthwhile program. They subscribe to the political philosophy that there is great virtue in big government. They believe that the end justifies the means. They think that in order to accomplish praiseworthy and desirable ends, you may adopt any questionable means. And certainly this is a questionable means.

At a time when the Government of the United States owes more money than all of the rest of the world put together; at a time when we operate annually on deficit financing, with no end in sight; at a time when our credit is in jeopardy, it seems to me that no one could find sound justification to continue this program.

However, I find no objection to the man who sincerely believes in paternalistic government, who has the idea that by building a great bureaucratic state and making the people the wards of the state, he can accomplish some great and desirable end. But the ones with whom I disagree are the Members of Congress who have consistently opposed this scheme and today are about to reverse their position on a fundamental question.

Mr. Chairman, I can understand that in politics there are times when officeholders find it expedient to play a little politics. As one politician once said, there are times when every statesman must rise above principle. I can appreciate the attitude of my lovable friend, the majority leader, but I recall so distinctly during the New Deal days, when some of us found it necessary to disagree with the leadership on fundamental questions and we took the floor of this House and opposed some measure contrary to the wishes of the leadership, and the President, jeopardizing our political existence and future in order to do so, that the Members of Congress on the Republican side praised us in the most lavish terms and came to us and shook our hands and said, "It is wonderful that you put country above party."

I know what the situation is with most of my Republican friends. You are really against this. You could not be for it. You have been talking about private enterprise all over the United States. The people elected you because they believed that you believed in private enterprise. Make no mistake about it. How in the name of goodness can you justify a program that keeps the Government in the housing business, that builds up an expensive and wasteful bureaucracy, when you know that the facts and the figures show it will be cheaper to do what the gentleman from Mississippi wants done, give them the houses and stop the program, than it will to continue under the present program. You know that.

You have told your constituents the same thing I have told my constituents, that you are opposed to stateism. You have denounced this idea that the Federal Government should do for the people what they should do for themselves or through their local and State governments. We have all told our people that. But now the President of the United States has recommended public housing and you are confronted with a very, very unpleasant situation, and I can appreciate it.

I know what pressure is applied to the tender portions of your political anatomy. I know, Mr. Chairman, what it is when the leader of the party comes to you, and you are a member of the Rules Committee—HOWARD SMITH and I remember quite well when we opposed the blanket authority which President Roosevelt wanted, and all the pressure that was applied upon us. I remember one night I could not sleep, I just broke out in sweat. I know what it means to oppose your administration when it is in power. You are compelled to pay a high price for it. But if it had not been for men in this Congress who were willing to pay that price, where would America be today?

I recognize the value of party government, and I do not blame our leaders, Mr. McCORMACK, Mr. RAYBURN, and Mr. HALLECK, for trying to preserve party regularity. You have to have a party. But I despise intolerance disguised as partisanship. I despise the man, be he a leader or member, who tries to justify the sacrifice of honest convictions on fundamental questions by the specious and flimsy excuse that he is a loyal party member. There is no form of dishonesty more reprehensible than intellectual dishonesty. There is a specie of bribery which is not punishable but which is sometimes more heinous than the acceptance of money. I refer to the politician who sells his votes for political preferment or advancement. The consciousness of duty well done and one's self-respect are more important than public office or political honors. The applause of one's conscience is sweeter and more gratifying to a decent man than the applause of the multitude.

I despise the selfishness which proclaims itself patriotic by following blindly party leadership. Actually, we are not being honest with ourselves when we follow party leadership because it means advancement or patronage or some sort of political future. We must expect an occasional lapse of political virtue, but no decent person wants to become a professional. When I was a young man, my father said to me, "If you have to go into politics, and you probably will, you are going to have to play some politics, but just remember one thing. Have some conviction that you will not sacrifice. Maybe it is not a lot of things, but just one or two important things at least, which to you is more sacred and more important than any political office on earth." And I would not submerge my convictions on any fundamental issue to occupy any position in the land. You know it is a great feeling sometimes as you get past middle age and you have grandchildren, to look back on the course of your life. You know you have made a lot of mistakes. But, if you can sincerely say to yourself, "Well, I did have a little courage. There were times that I was willing to put my political future in jeopardy in order to serve the welfare of the next generation and my children and grandchildren"—if you have that consolation when you leave Congress you will be richly rewarded for whatever slights and whatever disappointments may have been heaped upon you. I know—I have been all down that road and I want to pay tribute to the men in this House who never receive tribute, to the men who have the courage of their convictions. They are on the liberal side and they are on the conservative side. I make no distinction. I respect a liberal if he is honest and sincere and if he believes in stateism—but I just do not believe in it. I came up to understand that socialism is unworkable in any country, and I think it will lead to a dictatorship.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GAVIN].

Mr. GAVIN. Mr. Chairman, I listened with interest to the great speech of my good friend from Texas [Mr. DIES], although I am of the opinion the gentleman from Texas is a bit premature in his remarks as he is in no position to determine what action we on the Republican side may take on public housing legislation. It would be better if he would wait until the votes are taken. Back in times of 1949, Mr. Chairman, I had this to say about public housing and other programs.

I thought we were pretty well cleaned up with this type of program and that we were getting down to sound, clear thinking. Back in the early days of the New Deal we had political and economic planners; then we had the NRA and the WPA and the PWA. And we had planned economy and planned scarcity and many other programs.

So, I might say to the gentleman from Texas, that he should not get too much concerned about our positions on this housing program today, because some of us were against these programs then and we are now. I am not in accord with this public housing program whatsoever, and I said it back in 1949 and I have not changed my mind. So let us try to get some information about this proposed public housing program in the 2 minutes I have available. We have the Widnall amendment and the Spence amendment. The Widnall amendment I understand is for a 1-year program on the basis of 35,000 units. The Spence amendment is 35,000 units a year for 4 years.

It is difficult to understand thoroughly the housing program in the 45 minutes allocated to these amendments today, and you have several billion dollars involved.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania has expired.

Mr. ABERNETHY. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that my 2 minutes be yielded to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection? There was no objection.

Mr. GAVIN. I thank the gentleman. The gentleman has interrupted me on many occasions, so it is very gracious of him to be so considerate. I am most grateful to my good friend.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GAVIN. I yield.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. It had been my purpose to apologize for the supporters of this housing proposition. I cannot do that in 2 minutes, so I ask unanimous consent to yield my time to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection? There was no objection.

Mr. GAVIN. This is overwhelming. This exhibition of consideration that has been demonstrated is most pleasing. I want you to know my good friends that I appreciate it.

Mr. GREEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GAVIN. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. GREEN. I do not think there is any Member of the House who is entitled to more consideration than the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. GAVIN. I thank my good friend very much.

Now, let us get into the housing matter as quickly as possible. I have not been able to secure much information at all about these proposed amendments. They say these units will cost about $12,000. Some say $12,000 and some say $14,000. That is without the land or anything—just the straight out-and-out cost of each unit. Therefore just the out-and-out cost under the Widnall amendment would be about $420 million for the first year. For the Spence amendment for the first year it would $420 million. Had this proposal come up when Bob Rich was here, he would be saying, "Where are you going to get the money?"

If you vote for the Spence amendment, you are involving $1,960,000,000 for 4 years as the Spence amendment is a 4-year program. That is a lot of money. That does not take in the cost of the land that is involved. That is just the straight construction cost.

Also, I might say, as has been pointed out today, that the difference between the cost of a unit and what the Government would actually receive for rental on the unit is a difference amounting to about $26.90 a unit per month. In other words, you are subsidizing the program to the extent of $5,800,000 a year outside of actual cost and the land cost. So to be consistent having voted against subsidizing TVA the other day I cannot stand by here today and support further subsidy programs.

Mr. ABERNETHY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GAVIN. I yield.

Mr. ABERNETHY. What the gentleman is referring to is something that was settled and decided last Tuesday and Wednesday.

Mr. GAVIN. I wanted to point out to my friend that I am trying to be consistent.

Mr. ABERNETHY. I do not want the gentleman to use it that way, you see.

Mr. GAVIN. I merely want to state to the gentleman that we cannot vote 1 day to overrule the subsidy program in 1 area and the next day come back and support a subsidized housing program in another area. It does not make sense. I also want to compliment the gentleman from Mississippi for his fine work here in the House. He has won the admiration of the membership on both sides of the aisle. He is a determined fighter for his district, which he so very ably represents.

The gentleman from Texas [Mr. DIES] said some very fine things here today however, I want him to know that some of us are consistent in our thinking.

Recently I reviewed my remarks made on June 28, 1949, when the housing bill was before the Congress.

I have not changed my opinion any from the statement I made that day, so the remarks I now make are merely excerpts—because time will not permit—of the statement I made at that time.

I said, in 1949, in any event, to keep the record straight so when I sit down somebody will not say, "How do you think he is going to vote?" let it be understood that I intend to vote against the bill.

Now the President comes out and states we must have a housing program. So, come what may, we are going to have a housing program, and that is that. And you will take it and like it. You might not like it, but you will take it.

Certainly these giveaway programs are popular. They are surefire vote-getters. But if you can tell me that it is fair and equitable to have 2 men working side by side, both earning the same pay, 1 is frugal and saving and is able to pay for his own home, and under this proposed housing bill the frugal and industrious worker not only will pay for his own house but will be forced to pay, in taxes, for the house of his fellow worker who may not have been as frugal and industrious as he might have been.

Back in 1949 I said the money the Federal Government will dole out under this housing program has to be repaid. It will have to be repaid in taxes from the earnings of all our people, and if not in direct levies, then the people pay it indirectly in their cost of living, no matter what wage bracket they may be in. There is no such thing as free money.

Acceptance of the administration's housing program, I said in 1949, means a definite change in the American way of life. Certainly if one group or segment of our people are entitled to low-cost housing, then all people in certain brackets should be entitled to low-cost housing.

So it can be readily seen that once this program is established and the Federal Government contracts to build a certain number of houses, under the demand of public pressure the program will be increased and it may run into many billions of dollars before you are through.

I also said, in 1949, that high taxes are a millstone around the necks of all our citizens. They stifle initiative. They are a drag upon production. They are a major factor in the cost of living because they enter into the cost of everything. And instead of reducing taxes we are concocting formulas to increase taxes.

Every Member of this House knows how the people back home feel about taxes and they can be reduced if these programs are held in abeyance. If taxes were reduced the Federal Government would function more efficiently by eliminating waste and extravagance. Rather than create new formulas for spending, let us clarify those we already have on the books.

The history of the past few years is one of constantly increasing taxation and spending and through this the constant destruction of savings and continuous discouragement of private venture—the one sure way of providing jobs under our American system.

Therefore, I feel, under the circumstances, that this program should be deferred and I will vote against it.

That was my statement back in 1949. I can see no reason to change my mind at this time. I trust both of these amendments will be voted down.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New York [Mr. GWINN].

Mr. GWINN. Mr. Chairman, I am opposed to taking by force of Government 35,000 houses from one side of the street and giving them to 35,000 families tax-exempt on the other side. On top of that provide them with 85 percent of the cost of municipal services and cost of educating their children for 40 years besides. It will total about $1,670,000,000, according to figures supplied by the Housing Agency.

Mr. Chairman, Republicans and conservative Democrats are just naturally too timid to win at such a rough, tough game for votes. To show you how high we would have to bid to get their votes listen to their testimony:

First, the National Association of Public Housing Officials demanded 5 million; second, Political Action Committee, 200,000 in 10 years; and, third, Mr. Shiskin, 600,000 new houses. By their words and faces they showed a contempt for the measly token of 35,000 houses offered them. And how they spurned the party that has such weak convictions. So there are no votes for us in that direction.

While 35,000 houses are not many and certainly not enough to win any Socialist votes they are enough to violate again a fundamental principle that loses the conservative vote. That principle is that individuals exercising all their natural rights and powers are the only true source of houses, food, power—the source of all moral improvement with God's help—and that Government must be strictly limited in its functions to the protection of that source.

Either we believe that with all our hearts or we believe the exact opposite with all our hearts, that Government is the source, the instrument of force over men by which it gets or takes from them houses, food, power, and so forth. Surely we are not going to fall down and worship again that old satanic concept that by the use of political power and compulsion we can bring about the good life for our people. Let us reject it utterly as the concept was rejected nearly 2,000 years ago.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. YATES].

Mr. YATES. Mr. Chairman, I do not know where the gentleman from New York gets his figures of the cost of the program. The fact remains that the estimate of the cost of public housing under the 1949 program with 810,000 units of public housing which it was proposed to build, the cost of that program was put at $300 million a year at the outside. So I do not know where he gets his figure of 35,000 units costing $1,600,000,000 over 40 years.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the Spence substitute amendment.

The public housing issue provokes a perennial dispute. It is time we recognized the needs of low-income families displaced from slum areas.

Last year a halt was called to the public-housing program while the Congress reexamined it. At that time there were approximately 62,000 units under firm contract between the United States and various public-housing authorities throughout the country. I say firm contract because the Comptroller General of the United States had ruled that the Government of the United States had entered into solemn and binding agreements to construct this number of units. And so last year there was no authorization given toward a further expansion of the program. It was decided that 20,000 of the 62,000 units would be built and in the appropriations bill the Director of the Housing and Home Finance Agency, former Congressman Albert Cole, whose views in opposition to public housing are well known to the Members of this House, was directed to make a complete analysis and study of the low-rent public-housing program and to transmit on or before February 1, 1954, to the Appropriations Committees of the House and Senate, recommendations with respect to the program.

Apparently this was the predecessor of the New Look policy. Apparently proponents of the compromise were able to persuade the President of the United States, who had indicated previously his personal support for a program to build 35,000 public housing units, to retreat from that position and to accept the compromise.

Well—Administrator Cole has reported to the Appropriations Committee and he recommended a continuation of the public housing program by constructing 140,000 units over a 4-year period on an annual basis of 35,000 units. This is what he said:

It has become a national objective to make it possible for all American families to have good homes in good neighborhoods and that a vital part of reaching that objective is a broader, more integrated attack on the whole problem of urban blight and the processes of slum formation, with the Federal Government providing encouragement and financial assistance, but with the main burden resting as it must rest on local governments and private enterprise.

That is a very fine objective. That same objective was expressed once before in the Housing Act of 1949 wherein it was stated that every American family is entitled to good housing in a decent neighborhood in which to raise their children.

How many times does this Congress have to declare its adherence to such an objective before it takes action to achieve that objective? How long can we delay our attack on the problem of urban decay before the consequences of the delay become so far reaching as to be irreparable?

And yet what did the Appropriations Committee do? When it began our hearings this year it found that there still remained approximately 33,000 units under firm contract. The lingering death to which it had committed the program last year was continued through a provision which would permit construction of the remaining 33,000 units over a period of 2 years, 20,000 this year and 13,000 next year. Even that provision was stricken from the bill on a point of order earlier this week.

That is what Cole said further:

Your committee—

The Appropriations Committee—has had very serious misgivings about the low-rent public housing program both as to its basic merits and as to its administration.

Speaking first to the merits, let me say this: If I could believe that there is a fair and feasible way to terminate the present program now, as to new construction, I would recommend it to the President and to you. I have not found it. Although I hesitate to speak for the whole membership of the Advisory Committee, I think it is fair to say that they began their work with a predisposition, perhaps a hope, that the low-rent program could be ended. Again, I think it is fair to say that the Advisory Committee recommended its continuation, not because they were or are promoters of public housing, but because they were honestly convinced that for at least the next few years it is a necessary program. They could not, in all honesty, conclude that they were prepared to offer workable proposals which would reasonably seem to make it unnecessary.

The basic problem can be stated very simply. Everyone—literally, I think, everyone—agrees that it has become a national necessity to do something about clearing out existing slums and stopping the formation of new slums. It makes no difference whether the question is approached from the point of view of human considerations, cold economics, practical politics, or any combination of these, the answer is the same. But in order to do what must be done, families must be moved out of slums and out of overcrowded and declining neighborhoods. Some, indeed many, of these families have very low incomes. We believe we can go a considerable way toward enabling private enterprise to meet the problems of families of lower income than is the case now. We propose to do that. But these steps, while they will shrink the problem, will not make it disappear.

So we come back, it seems to me, to the conclusion that for the time being, if we are to have a workable, across-the-board attack on urban slums and blight, we must continue a moderate program of federally supported low-rent public housing. I do not mean indefinitely. Successful experience with the new programs recommended by the President will, I believe, reduce greatly the problem we confront. Beyond that, I not only hope but believe that a better method of meeting the needs of the lowest families can and will be found. I do not propose to drop the exploration of such methods.

It is obvious that the Administrator had a struggle to come to the conclusion that he did. If there were any possible way in which he could have recommended abandonment of the public housing program he would have done so. Yet he was honest enough to come before the committee and to state that he had engaged in a very comprehensive study of the housing needs of the country, and that based upon his study he recommended the continuation of the public housing program.

The Administrator was not the only one. In December 1953 the President's Advisory Committee on Government Housing Policies and Programs issued its report. It, too, recommended that the public housing program be continued. These are hardheaded businessmen who make this recommendation—not the so-called do-gooders whom some have associated with programs of this type in the past. Twenty-two people including executives of savings and loan associations, life-insurance companies, the National Association of Home Builders, trust companies, title-guaranty companies, savings banks, architects, and there were 2 members from labor unions and 1 from a housing authority—and of all of these there was only 1 dissent from the conclusion that remedial measures to protect the cities from further housing deterioration required public housing as one part of the necessary program.

I urge you not to have a closed mind on this subject, to look at facts, to appraise the necessity for taking immediate action, and if necessary, to change your mind just as many have already done with respect to this program. Let me show you what happened in the city of Chicago. I have in my hand a document entitled "The Housing Action Report of 1954 Addressed to Mayor Martin H. Kennelly by the Citizens Committee To Fight Slums." And Mr. Chairman, whom do we find on this committee? Listen to these names? Gen. Robert Wood, chairman of Sears, Roebuck & Co.; Graham Aldis, past president of the Chicago Real Estate Board; Laird Bell, trustee of the University of Chicago and chairman of the Weyerhaeuser Lumber Co.; Carl Birdsall, president of the Continental Illinois National Bank & Trust Co.; James P. Carey, Jr., past president of the Chicago Bar Association; Charles X. Clancy, of the Cook County Council of Insurance Savings Associations; Willis Gale, chairman of the Commonwealth Edison Co.; Rev. Daniel Cantwell, president of the Housing Conference of Chicago; Mrs. Walter Berner, vice president of the Illinois Congress of Parents and Teachers; Porter M. Jarvis, executive vice president of Swift & Co.; William V. Kahler, president of the Illinois Bell Telephone Co.; John Womer, of the Chicago Mortgage Bankers' Association; Robert Taylor, general manager and secretary of the Illinois Federal Savings & Loan Association. These are people who are now on the mayor's committee to fight slums, whom you would expect to be opposed to what some Members condemn as socialistic housing as though neat opprobrium might by itself eradicate the need for it. This is what the report says:

The Citizens Committee To Fight Slums was formed in July 1953 as a result of growing concern on the part of the public with slum conditions in the city and an apparent breakdown in the enforcement of the minimum standards for health and safety of housing provided by local ordinances. Its membership was recruited from business, labor, professional, and civic leaders representing a wide divergency of viewpoint and interest. The objective of the committee was to make an overall appraisal of Chicago's housing situation and offer constructive recommendations for further action in this field.

In 1947 a similar group, the mayor's housing action committee, developed a program that became the basis of the city's subsequent policy. Since that time there has been no comprehensive review of the city's needs in the light of changed conditions and the experience gained. At the time of its formation, the mayor indicated that the executive committee of the citizens committee to fight slums would be considered as his citizens' advisory body in the housing field. During the past 7 months the committee has endeavored, through eight subcommittees, to investigate the major aspects of Chicago's housing problem with a view toward developing information and recommendations which would constitute a comprehensive and realistic approach to the prevention of the further growth of slums and the elimination of blight. The recommendations which follow represent either the unanimous or the largely preponderant viewpoint of the committee members. Each member does not necessarily agree fully with each recommendation, nor was this to be expected in a subject so controversial.

This is what the report also says:

The housing problem is a foremost challenge to our civic leadership and probably the most difficult problem faced by our local government today. Its solution will require a far greater recognition on the part of both public officials and the citizenry as a whole of its scope, gravity, and the results of inadequate action. Chicago's press has already taken the lead in highlighting the need for bold leadership and corrective action. The long-range cost of inaction will far exceed the cost of determined constructive action, great as that may be.

Slums have consequences that extend far beyond their physical boundaries. Their social costs in terms of crime, delinquency, and disease are so well known as to require no further recital. The economic costs of slums are just as serious and perhaps even more dangerous to the continued prosperity of the city. Slums are parasitic growths that devour tax expenditures and city services, yet produce but meager amounts of tax revenue. Chicago's 23 square miles of blighted areas and its 56 square miles of threatened middle-aged residential neighborhoods represent an actual and potential drain on our tax base which, if uncorrected, could extend far beyond the ability of the rest of the city to bear. The fight against slums thus becomes not only a fight to keep Chicago an attractive and desirable place in which to live but a fight for civic and economic solvency as well.

This is one of the committee's recommendations:

Residential redevelopment which follows slum clearance replaces slum dwellings with standard construction, and thus increases the supply of standard housing, even though the total number of housing units may be decreased. As some 16,000 local families must be relocated before redevelopment sites now approved can be cleared, and as private capital is not presently furnishing a full solution to this problem, it is evident that some public housing will continue to be required. If we wish to see the successful completion of such public improvements as are represented by 3 land-clearance commission projects, the Congress and Northwest Superhighways, the Chicago Medical Center, 2 Chicago Dwellings Association rental projects, and the pending programs of the Chicago Park District, Illinois Institute of Technology and Michael Reese Hospital, there seems to be no feasible present alternative to some additional publicly aided relocation housing. It does not appear to the committee that the ultimate aggregate supply of publicly aided housing in Chicago should ever represent more than a very small percentage of the whole housing supply. Currently the Chicago Housing Authority operates only about 10,400 housing units in Chicago, with a slightly fewer number of additional units under construction or in the design stage. This compares with an estimated total number of living units of 1,200,000 in Chicago. Hence the committee recommends that—

5. The city administration should continue to seek allocations to Chicago of relocation public housing, as a necessary means of increasing the available supply of standard housing available to families which qualify and which cannot otherwise be accommodated.

The committee concludes with this statement:

After 3 months of intensive study, the President's Advisory Committee on Government Housing Policies and Programs handed its report to President Eisenhower on December 15, 1953. If the President and Congress adopt this advisory committee report, or a major portion of it, the realization of the objectives of the Chicago Housing Action Report of 1954 will be much easier of accomplishment. * * * The committee therefore urges that the mayor, his housing and redevelopment coordinator and the leaders of the city council promptly urge support of such legislation by all Illinois Congressmen, while analyzing the points of greatest benefit to Chicago so that it may obtain maximum aid under the broad new program.

In February President Eisenhower recommended the adoption of the public-housing program in his message to Congress. He called for construction of 140,000 units over a 4-year period and when I offered the amendment in the Appropriations Committee which incorporated his program, it was defeated by a vote of 26 to 10, with only 2 members of the President's own party voting for it.

As a Democrat, I would have preferred to see a larger program—the program envisioned and authorized by the Housing Act of 1949, because this is warranted by the rapidity with which the blighted areas are increasing. The President's program, as Mr. Cole has stated, is only a minimum and yet apparently his own party refuses to accept that minimum.

I think it would be well to point out, too, that there can be no question but that the President has taken this position.

Last year when I dared to argue that the program for the construction of 35,000 units had the approval of the Eisenhower administration, the majority leader, Mr. HALLECK, stated that the Eisenhower administration was taking no position with respect to this program. At that time I wondered why Mr. Cole had been apparently excommunicated from the Eisenhower family because he certainly told us that his program had the President's approval. Lest there be any misunderstanding this year, however, let me say that I interrogated Mr. Cole closely on this point and asked him specifically to state whether he had the President's approval. He replied that he had—that he had taken the matter up with the President personally and that his recommendation was the one that was being submitted.

Mr. Chairman, this is a matter of vital urgency. Apart from the question of the amount of crime that is centered in slum areas, the amount of sickness, the amount of human degradation, the facts shows that slums and the blighted areas are sucking out the wealth of the cities. Good properties are being compelled more and more to bear a disproportionate portion of the burden of local taxation because the services that a city must provide must go on. These have to be paid for and most cities use property taxation as the basis for obtaining revenue. With spreading blight, with increasing slum areas, there is a reduction in the number of good properties and these bear an ever increasing valuation and tax. And Mr. Cole stated that in his judgment it would be harmful if we did not attack the problem at once, but continued to delay and delay as we have done in the past.

We must take action now.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New York [Mr. JAVITS].

Mr. DORN of New York. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JAVITS. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. DORN of New York. I want to say to the gentleman that I heartily congratulate him on his continuous support of public housing and I want to state definitely that I shall go along with him in support of public housing. I am supporting the 35,000 new housing units as recommended in President Eisenhower's program. We have voted assistance to farmers in the care of their livestock. It is much more important that human beings receive assistance for adequate housing.

(By unanimous consent, the time allotted Mr. DORN of New York was given to Mr. JAVITS.)

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. Chairman, I think only a few more points need to be made.

The fundamental difference between the gentleman from Texas and people like myself is that I believe that the direct road to statism is when the government ceases to be responsive to such of the needs of its people that only it can help to fill, and many governments have fallen exactly upon that ground. This is a fundamental proposition which he and I shall possibly never agree upon, but I am just as sincere about it as he is. I feel I am at least as devoted a friend of public enterprise when I seek to make the Government recognize those problems in which it must help if it is going to continue to be responsible for a fundamental private-initiative society.

I think we have a very practical problem here. There is an amendment offered by the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. SPENCE] to authorize 140,000 Federal public-housing units in 4 years, which is the President's program, which I am for. It is the President's program and the President said—and let us make no mistake about it—that after examining all the alternatives we need a 4-year program of 35,000 units a year if we are going to do a job on housing throughout the country; not just public housing—a balanced housing program. We have a very strong factual basis for that because there are over 124,000 units in a preliminary loan-contract status alone, which means that these projects are actually, indeed, being worked on in many, many cities, in addition to applications for 500,000 units from 1,100 units when the books were closed; hence, if you are going to go through with a balanced housing program, you will have to at least take care of the contracts upon which we have already put up money and which have already reached the advanced stage of planning and development. So the President's program is absolutely right. I am for it and I think the House ought to be for it.

I ask you, though, to bear this in mind: Do not fall between two stools here. The only way that this program is going to get enacted at all is through bipartisan support. There are not enough people on the Republican side and there are not enough people on the Democratic side to carry this program here. The way this vote is set up, we will have an opportunity to vote on the President's program first. I know that all people who are trying very hard to back the President in what he is trying to do will support this amendment of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. SPENCE]. But should it fail, I do believe that those who are for a public-housing program on the Democratic side should not then fall into the trap of being partisan on that just because the Widnall amendment comes from the other side. If we all cannot get what we want, we should not be dogs in the manger because then we are very likely to get nothing.

That is the most important thing I have to say to you and everybody knows I say it with deepest sincerity as one who is for this program, and has been since I first came to Congress in 1947, out of deep conviction, and also as one who knows something about what is going on on both sides of the aisle on this subject.

Now, one other thing to my Republican friends. The President has given us a program. The party wants to run on that program. Many will be asked to cast votes we do not like in aid of a complete program. The country says the program is moderate; the people are moderate. Why is it moderate? Because it is a program the conservatives want? Of course not. Because it is a program the liberals want? Of course not. It is moderate because it is an admixture of both liberal and conservative thinking. There is no question about that. But, it is just that it has a liberal ingredient which makes the President's program moderate.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I offer a preferential motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. SMITH of Virginia moves that the Committee do now rise and report the bill back to the House with the recommendation that the enacting clause be stricken.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I elect to use my other 2 minutes at the same time.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman is recognized for 7 minutes.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I have offered this motion to strike the enacting clause because I earnestly believe that this is the most important vote of this session of Congress in the principle that is involved. I do not want to engage in any recriminations, and I believe in all of the things that my good friend, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DIES] has said to you this afternoon. And, he said them to you so much better than I can that I am not going to be repetitious. But, I do think that you have got such a great and important principle here that it is better to strike out the enacting clause of this bill and enact nothing than to repudiate the solemn action of this same Congress, this same membership, a year ago, in which you repudiated public housing and repealed it.

Now, do not think that this is not putting you back into the field of public housing. Some may regard this as a minor lapse from virtue, as was expressed, but it is not, because last year you repealed public housing. If you adopt either one of these pending amendments, you restore public housing, and do not think that when you once restore it that you are going to be able to shed the garment again. Once you yield to it, you have the project back here currently on your hands, and I want that clearly understood.

Now, you understand from the other day, when the point of order was knocked out, that if there are, as it is claimed, 35,000 units that have been authorized before we repealed the law, that then that 35,000 is plus this 35,000 that is proposed today, so that it would be possible to build 70,000 of these houses this year.

I expect to see one of these amendments prevail. I do not think that we conservatives in the House can overcome the forces who are for socialized public housing, so that you are now setting out on a new program of public housing and, believe me, it is going to be a permanent program.

All this debate on this subject has been hurled around the question that we have got to do something to help slum clearance. Well, I do not want anybody to be under any misapprehension about slum clearance. This is distinctly separate from slum clearance. Slum clearance is provided for in the appropriation. It is provided for more liberally than it has ever been provided for before in the appropriation that just passed the House this week. So, do not let anybody fool you, when you vote for this hybrid animal here that comes from both sides of the aisle, into thinking that you are just voting for slum clearance. You are voting for the same old socialistic housing that you denounced so vociferously just 1 year ago and which you defeated with only 23 votes on the Republican side voting for it. With a total vote of the House on a rollover, public housing, just last year, was defeated and repealed; and the vote was nearly 2 to 1.

Now, you are up against the plain, serious question—and it is just a simple question—are you going to have public housing with all its socialized monstrosities, or are you not? The way you vote on this is going to determine that question today and it is going to determine it not for just 1 year.

My friend from Mississippi has introduced an amendment to give these houses to these people as they are built instead of renting them to them. I am in favor of that amendment because I have always joined up with my friends on the Republican side in voting for economy. You know my record. I have helped you out a good deal on your economy measures. The amendment of the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. COLMER] is an economy measure. The reason it is an economy measure is, if you give everybody a house as it is built and make him take a deed in fee simple for it, and if he will not take a deed, make him get out, then you will save the subsidy. The subsidy under this full program, under the authorization—it is shown in the bill itself; I have looked it up—is $363 million per year. It lasts for 40 years. So it will cost the taxpayers of the United States $14,520,000,000.

Now, if you are going to do this, is it worthwhile to save $14 billion of the taxpayers' money, because that is what the Colmer amendment does. Nobody can dispute it. It is as simple as the nose on your face, because you are just giving away $14 billion to subsidize the rent of certain people. In other words, for 40 years, under this program, you are going to rob taxpayer Peter to pay the house rent of Paul. That is what you are going to do, and do not make any mistake about it.

Mr. GROSS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I yield to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. GROSS. That is the reason why it is not public housing. That is just a euphonious, high-sounded phrase.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. It will furnish a house only to 1 out of 10 people who are demanding a house. To talk about having to build a $14,000 house, under public housing, in order to give a fellow a place to live while they are clearing up some slum, is just about as ridiculous as all the rest of the program. The whole program is ridiculous. As it has been described, it is monstrous, it is socialistic, it is uneconomical, it is purely political, and it is just about everything evil that it can be called. Merely by yielding in a minor way one time, if you provide for 35,000 houses, it will still be socialism and just as bad as if you build 350,000.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the preferential motion.

Mr. Chairman, this motion, as I understand it, is to strike out the enacting clause which, of course, would have the effect of defeating the bill in its entirety.

Public housing is only one, although an important part, but a relatively small part of this bill. I said in opening the debate, and let me repeat it, that this bill contains 99 percent of the President's program. The Advisory Committee which the President set up worked for months developing a program which was generally acceptable to the President. He embraced it largely as his program.

The House Committee on Banking and Currency for 3 weeks sat and listened to testimony. In addition 1 whole week was devoted to executive sessions in which we read every word of the bill, paragraph by paragraph, and much of it was read by title and then by paragraphs, so it was read over twice.

Without prejudice to anyone who might offer an amendment on the floor or support an amendment, when we finished it at 10 o'clock a week ago tonight it was a unanimous report, reserving to the Members the right to offer and support any amendments on the floor.

Do we want to wholly ignore the potentialities under this bill? It has been explained that we can refer to this as a 2-million-unit bill; that under it 1,400,000 new units can be built each year, and under it, because of the provisions in respect to the rehabilitation and modernization of old homes, it is estimated that another 600,000 or 700,000 can be reconditioned.

I believe this House wants to do its will and will do its will the same as we have on much other legislation in amending it so that it will be in compliance with our collective wish, and that does not necessarily mean that we have to destroy the whole bill if we are against certain provisions. We have all been here long enough to know that all legislation is a matter of compromise. That is why we have these debates, why we come in here as we have today under the 5-minute rule and offer amendments and debate them, trying to perfect the bill and get it as close to our own idea of things as we can, without, however, the thought that we are going to oppose the whole bill in its entirety merely because we happen to fail to get our wishes realized in one relatively minor particular.

There are a very few provisions of the bill about which I am not enthusiastic. I have been convinced, however, that the bill, generally speaking, will do a better job than has ever been done for home owners and home buyers in this country. It is a bill under which small-income people can for the first time acquire decent and respectable homes and have those homes financed. I think it would be a grave mistake, a mistake which we would rue in the future, if we were to strike out the enacting clause as the gentleman's motion would provide.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the preferential motion offered by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SMITH].

The motion was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. KEAN].

(Mr. KEAN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. KEAN. Mr. Chairman, I rise to support the amendment of the gentleman from New Jersey. It has always been my philosophy that the Federal Government should never enter into a field where private industry can do a job properly. But experience has shown and I am completely convinced that with present high building costs it is impossible for private industry to provide decent housing for the low-income group.

I have not the slightest criticism of the building industry for their failure to provide such housing. Circumstances are such that they just cannot do it.

So if we are going to clean up the slums, if we are going to provide a decent environment for our youth to grow up to be the good citizens which we hope they will be, Government must aid in some way.

Of course, it is true that 35,000 new starts annually only scratches the surface in areas such as that which I represent. However, some decent housing for those who formerly lived in overcrowded, substandard firetraps, does help improve the whole area in which the slums are situated and encourages others to eliminate the bad conditions existing in the neighborhood.

Statements have been made here on the floor that in certain areas there are vacancies in Government housing. This certainly is not the case in Newark, N. J. There, in a 5-month period ending last summer, 2 new housing projects, one of 630 family units and the other of 730 family units, were immediately completely filled.

A project in the course of construction there, NJ 2-12, the Reverend Hayes Homes, will provide additional units for 1,458 families. These family units are being filled as fast as the contractor gives the buildings to the Newark Housing Authority. To date, 673 units are completed and filled. An additional 785 units are under construction to complete the total of 1,458.

Now, at present, the Newark Housing Authority has 14,000 applicants for housing who have still not been placed. The Authority estimates that there are an additional 1,000 people who would be eligible for housing from figures on planned redevelopment and slum clearance submitted by the board of health. That means, less the 785 units which are under construction, approximately 14,- 215 still will remain on the backlog in Newark.

Of the 14,000 applicants, 4,000 have been determined to be eligible. Of the remaining 10,000, experience shows that about 90 percent will be found eligible. This is one reason why we need all the units which can be built.

The President's Committee on Government Housing says:

We are convinced that the program of public housing contained in the Housing Act of 1949 should be continued.

The President has recommended this public housing. It is part of the Republican program and I wholeheartedly support this amendment.

(Mr. MULTER asked and was given permission to extend his remarks at this point.)

PUBLIC HOUSING

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the Spence amendment to enact into law the President's program for 35,000 units of public housing for each of the next 4 years.

It is appropriate to call attention at this time to the fact that the Republicans to a man, on both the Appropriations Committee and the Banking and Currency Committee, voted against even one more unit.

The distinguished gentleman from Illinois [Mr. YATES] offered an amendment before the Appropriations Committee to enact the President's program and was blocked there.

I did the same in the Banking and Currency Committee on this housing bill that will produce little housing. My amendment was defeated.

In the early part of the debate on this bill, the Republicans in large numbers were urging that no more public housing was needed.

The most vigorous opponent of public housing, while in Congress, was the Honorable Albert M. Cole, now the Housing Administrator. He was also Chairman of the President's Advisory Committee on Housing. He testified before our committee that his and their investigations conclusively established the need for the President's program.

Our Republican friends may squirm and apologize ad infinitum, but the fact remains that the President's program can be enacted only if you adopt the Spence amendment.

In 1937 we enacted the first law calling for public housing. At that time our distinguished chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee said:

I believe the need for decent, respectable, and sanitary homes for the underprivileged of this Nation has been proven beyond any peradventure of a doubt. * * * I believe that a trip through the slum areas of any of our large cities demonstrates the need for demolition of such areas and the construction of safe and sanitary dwellings to replace them.

What was said then is even more true today. Of the 810,000 units originally authorized only 425,000 have been built or authorized.

In a country of about 38 million families, with 16 percent in need of this public housing, that is indeed a minimum program.

I would have supported a request for more than the 140,000 units called for by this amendment.

We can do with no less.

(By unanimous consent, the time allotted to Mr. MULTER was given to Mr. BOLLING.)

Mr. BOLLING. Mr. Chairman, I have asked for this time not to laugh at those Republicans who, I hope, will follow their President and their majority leader in voting for the 35,000 units of public housing. I see no reason to laugh at them, if they learn from the facts, and I hope they have, as the President has done and as the Commission has done. They have come to recognize, I hope, that it is essential, if there is to be an effective slum-clearance program, that there be some public housing. I frankly believe that the Commission is very wrong in many, many ways. I think this is an extraordinarily poor bill, but I think it will be a much better bill with the 35,000 units of public housing in it than it will be without it. I have asked for this time primarily because the chairman of the committee, for whom I have very great respect as to his capacity, his skill, and his intelligence, made a most extraordinary statement in his most recent statement on the floor. He said, if I heard him correctly—and I hope someone will call him into the Chamber, because I think this should be corrected—he said it was expected this bill would produce 1,400,000 units of new housing and that he further expected at least 500,000 or 600,000 additional units to become available through rehabilitation. I would like very much to find out what basis there is for such a statement. The Housing and Home Financing Administrator, Mr. Cole, in answer to my questions, made it clear that the goal of this bill, although he would not call it a goal, was roughly a million units, and in addition said—admitted—that the need of the country for housing was well in excess of a million, and the capacity of the home-building industry was well in excess of a million. I wonder—and I would like to know from the chairman, if possible—what responsible official of the administration has given us any estimate or any hope that from this program we will get the 2 million units that we need. I agree that is approximately the number we need. I cannot understand why, as we approach the latter stages of the consideration of this bill, there should be statements which might confuse the entire membership of this body as to what the contents of this bill are. This bill is so bad, in my judgment, that anybody who is in favor of an effective housing program for low and lower middle-income people would be entirely justified in voting against this legislation unless additional public housing is put into the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. O'HARA].

Mr. O'HARA of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I have a feeling of great humility, after serving on the Banking and Currency Committee and attending all the long and numerous meeting beginning in the early part of the month, being present until almost midnight when finally the bill was reported out. I, being the only member of that committee from the metropolitan area of the great city of Chicago, and because of that circumstance in contact with the people in Chicago who are interested in public housing, I repeat, Mr. Chairman, I have a feeling of humility if not one of understanding that at this most critical time in the debate I am accorded 2 minutes. Thank God it is not necessary for me to explain to the people of Chicago where I stand on the question of giving shelter to those who have no roof to stand between them and their children and the cold and the rains and the storms.

I have always believed there should be in every city streets with both sides that are lighted. There should not be a street where on one side there are no lights and children go to bed in hunger; while on the other side there is lighting in such excess as to be blinding and there is so much in unrequired and unused plenty that the children there starve for the want of evaluations of the things that give real contentment and value to human life.

I have lived my life by that philosophy. I would not have lived by any other philosophy. I have had but one ambition in life, and that ambition was to go to the end of the span of my earthly existence unafraid to speak up for the underdog. I have never sought the smiles of publicized respectability. It is so easy to feel superior to other human beings who may not have been as fortunate. It is so easy to say that because some have succeeded in acquiring their own homes by industry and by prudence and an enjoyment of the breaks there is no excuse for the others. Well, Mr. Chairman, I cannot take that easy way out. I cannot satisfy my conscience by any reasoning that a God who has given an opportunity to me to speak in behalf of the least of His creatures expects me to be complacent and to remain silent.

Five years ago this month of April, Bob Taft had no warning that his days on earth were numbered. He was in the vigorous prime of an active life. He was speaking in the other body. It was the greatest speech in the life and career of one who carried the proud name of Mr. Republican. On April 21, 1949, he said:

I do not believe that anyone who has studied the question is opposed to public housing. * * * I think the real-estate people should realize there is no competition involved in public housing.

Mr. Chairman, let me proceed, not with my words, but with those of Bob Taft, the Mr. Republican with whom in many matters of national policy I disagreed, but who on this April day of 1949 was speaking words which will live as long as Americans chart their course by the impulses of warm hearts and the teachings of their respective religions:

The general theory of subsidizing low-income groups is not a new theory in Anglo-Saxon political life or Anglo-Saxon economic life. It is accepted in every State of the Union, and it does not involve any departure in principle from that which we have pursued during the 150 years of the life of the Republic.

I think all of us acknowledge the duty of the community to take care of those who are unable to take care of themselves. We do have an interest, I think, in providing equal opportunity for all the children of families who are brought into being in the United States. I believe that a Federal policy of welfare service is justified to the point of assisting the States to see that that job is well and systematically done, and that the field is properly covered.

Mr. Chairman, I have a great respect and an affectionate regard for the distinguished gentleman from Texas [Mr. DIES]. I know how big is his heart, as big indeed as his brain is brilliant. I am sure that his philosophy as applied to the subject we have under consideration today is a matter of geography and not of heart. If his years had been passed in the great throbbing cities of the North, with their problems of poverty in congested areas, I am very sure that the powers of his moving eloquence would have been on the other side of the argument. The gentlemen spoke of one who was in need of public housing because of his own frailties. Bob Taft looked above the frailties of parents. He bespoke the responsibility of you and of me and of all in our America to provide equal opportunity for all the children who are brought into being in the United States. I am sure that the gentleman from Texas, of whom I am so genuinely fond, would not deny an equal opportunity to any American child because of the carelessness or the follies or the lack of ability of those who were the parents.

I hope that on this day of April when Bob Taft is no longer among us, those in this Chamber who loved him and who followed him will listen to and heed the words he spoke on another April day. This is one matter on which Taft and Eisenhower and Roosevelt and Truman are as the four blocks of granite.

Mr. Chairman, in closing I wish to call attention to a statement made yesterday by the gentleman from New York [Mr. GWINN] and which appears on page 4130 of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of April 1, 1954. The gentleman gave the vacancy rates in public housing projects in various cities. For Chicago he listed 108 vacancies in 1,027 units.

John W. Edelman, chairman of the CIO subcommittee on housing legislation, telephoned me to report that he had checked upon the matter as regards Chicago. These are not vacancies in the sense that there are no people waiting to move in. Plenty of people want apartments. The problem is that there are not enough large apartments, with enough bedrooms, for families with many children. Many units are being converted into apartments with more bedrooms to accommodate large families, and the apartments are necessarily vacant during the period of conversion.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Illinois has expired.

The Chair will state the time has been fixed.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. CANFIELD].

(Mr. CANFIELD asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. CANFIELD. Mr. Chairman, I hope the House will approve not less than 70,000 public housing units for the next 2 years. The President has this week indicated he wants no less.

I subscribe to the philosophy that it means something to our United States to spend for public housing half of what we spend for wildlife restoration.

It has been argued this is a costly program. Let us consider that. It does cost, of course, but the actual cost this last year was $40 million which is just 1 percent of what we are spending on foreign aid alone.

Are not the 1 million people living in public housing today worth the $40 a year we are spending on each of them? The taxpayer making $4,000 a year puts up 6 cents through income taxes to keep this program going.

Now, let us consider subsidies. We have many of them: mail service, $300 million; highways, $420 million; rivers and harbors, $234 million; commercial aviation, $115 million; reclamation and irrigation, $169 million; school-lunch program, $82 million; and $67 million for 450,000 Indians.

It is a proven fact that slum and blighted districts, comprising about 20 percent of our metropolitan residential areas, account for 33 percent of our population, 45 percent of major crimes, 55 percent of juvenile delinquency, 60 percent of tuberculosis victims, 50 percent of arrests, 35 percent of fires, 45 percent of city service costs, and 6 percent of real estate tax revenues. And it is also a proven fact that public housing results in a reduction of all these bad items. It pays in terms of human health and happiness.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. WHEELER].

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. Chairman, contrary to the opinion held by some of my colleagues, I am capable of changing my mind. Since this housing matter came up to the House this year I have desperately sought for a logical basis on which to change my position.

I have reexamined the matter. I note—this is a year ago—the majority leader quoted in the RECORD as defining this program as being socialistic and expressing himself as being opposed to it. In view of that I have looked further. I have tried to find some logical reason for supporting this vicious socialistic program. The only reason that I have been given, the only excuse that has been proposed from the well of this House to anyone for changing his mind in less than a year is that the President has proposed it, he has endorsed it. He is a fine person, friendly, affable, and all that sort of thing. But am I to excuse myself to my grandchildren for having cast a vote in favor of this socialistic program by telling them that I was blinded by the brass in the White House, that simply because the President of the United States asked for it I subverted my convictions and voted to impose this multibillion dollar socialistic program on generations yet unborn?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. OLIVER P. BOLTON].

Mr. OLIVER P. BOLTON. Mr. Chairman, I have taken this time only to ask the committee certain questions regarding the Widnall amendment. As I listened to and read the amendment, it was my understanding that it provides for 35,000 units to be built in the fiscal year 1955, provided that the units to be built are included within an urban redevelopment plan. Is that correct?

Mr. WIDNALL. Urban redevelopment, urban renewal, or slum clearance.

Mr. OLIVER P. BOLTON. And may I ask further whether in this housing, which would be part of a slum-clearance or urban-redevelopment plan, unemployed people or people of the lowest income who live in slum areas could be taken into the housing provided for in this amendment?

Mr. WIDNALL. Yes; and I would like to say that this is an authorization actually for 1955 to be constructed in 1956. Some people seem to be under the misapprehension that it would provide for 70,000 units this calendar year. The program adopted during the past week provided for 35,000.

Mr. OLIVER P. BOLTON. I understand that, but I want to be clear on the point because it is my understanding that under the present law no public housing of the type that we are talking about, which is public housing, is treated as built primarily for people of the middle- and lower-middle-income groups, and that people under the law governing regular public-housing units of the lowest income or who are unemployed would not be able to be taken into this housing. I want to be clear on that.

Mr. WIDNALL. There is a limitation in my amendment that I do not believe is in the Spence amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Texas [Mr. FISHER].

Mr. FISHER. Mr. Chairman, there is one thing that should be cleared up before we vote, and we are going to vote in just a minute: Let us be sure we know what is involved.

My good friend from Indiana [Mr. HALLECK] stated a few moments ago that you are not voting for or against public housing here today. He said you are voting on the question of when to terminate it.

With all due deference to my friend from Indiana that is not a correct statement of the facts.

Public housing terminated in Public Law 176 signed by the President on July 31, 1953. It is dead; it is gone; it is out; it is through.

The only public housing you have got, Mr. Chairman, is what is in the pipeline at the time that law was enacted. It is specific, it provides that thereafter, after that date, not one project can be authorized by the Public Housing Authority. It is dead. You are not voting on the question of termination; it was terminated last year. So the vote here at this time is on a new authorization. It has been fully discussed. I suppose everybody has his mind made up whether he is going to vote for or against this matter of making the tenants in public houses wards of the Government or whether you want to encourage home ownership in this free-enterprise country of ours.

The issue is clear: Do you want to go on record today in favor of a brandnew public-housing program? No termination is involved here. Let us face up to the issue. It is not a question of termination; it is a question of revival of a program that was completely killed last summer.

But above everything else, you are not voting on the question of when you are going to terminate. It has already terminated. It was terminated last year. Read the RECORD. Read the conference report. Read the public law.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GREEN].

Mr. GREEN. Mr. Chairman, it is a little confusing to me today to see our good friends on the other side of the House divorce themselves from the good friends they used to have on my side of the House. When I first came to Congress in 1945 there was a beautiful marriage in this House between the Republicans and some of my good friends on the Democratic side. I think the House is entitled to know what has happened. There seems now to be a divorce taking place.

We are glad to welcome the Republicans over to our point of view because we have been strong supporters of public housing. I told some of my friends on the Democratic side that some day these Republicans would leave them. It is a rather funny situation. I did not support President Eisenhower for President of the United States, but I am supporting the public housing bill as I always have. The Members who supported President Eisenhower on my side of the House are not supporting him and his public housing program. He has recommended 35,000 units a year for 4 years. That is his recommendation. His recommendation is not the Widnall amendment. It is the amendment presented by the distinguished ranking minority member of the Committee on Banking and Currency, the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. SPENCE].

I want to remind you that in the 80th Congress a lot of the Members on that side of the House were defeated because they sabotaged the public housing bill.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GREEN. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. McCORMACK. As long as this divorce is taking place, I hope my friend from Indiana will get back into the marriage of this bill and support the amendment offered by the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. GREEN. I agree with the gentleman. I sincerely hope the Spence amendment carries and we can come out of here with a half decent housing bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. CHUDOFF].

Mr. CHUDOFF. Mr. Chairman, we in Philadelphia have greatly profited by the Federal Government's public-housing program. We are proud of our projects and the great redevelopment of slums in the city so that some people with low incomes now have decent places to live. The congressional delegation from Philadelphia, I am sure, is for public housing to the man.

A lot has been said during the past week concerning vacancies and the lack of necessity for public housing. I believe the following editorial which appeared in the Philadelphia Daily News on Friday, April 2, 1954, tells the Philadelphia story. I do not feel that any Member of Congress will contest the value of public housing, as far as Philadelphia is concerned.

GOOD HOUSING BREEDS VIRTUES

With Philadelphia's public-housing program reaching such a high state of accomplishment, the need for completion is vital to the entire community, not only because of the fact that new dwelling places are being created for low-wage-bracket families, but also because entire neighborhoods are being reconstructed and revived.

This is no time for Congress to pull the financial rug from under the Philadelphia Housing Authority's activities and the city's congressional delegation has a positive duty to make certain that, in spite of the recent manipulations by public-housing foes, legislation will be enacted to insure the continuation of the work here.

Last year was the biggest in the authority's 15-year history from the standpoint of construction, and at the year's end, $48,950,000 total volume of construction was under way, building that must be completed. There was $13,286,000 of new buildings started and $17,381,000 worth of construction put in place.

During the last year, 1,776 families were placed in decent homes, 7,271 applications were filed, and more than 25,000 inquiries received by the authority. Five war housing developments were transferred to authority ownership by the Federal Government and 241 temporary veterans' dwellings were removed, exclusive of the 541 substandard dwellings razed on 3 sites.

The authority, of which P. Blair Lee is chairman and Walter E. Alessandrini is executive director, became one of Philadelphia's biggest taxpayers during the year with $551,543 paid and accrued to the city and the school district. A special study has found that the authority will pay more than $300,000 per year in lieu of taxes on 13 sites, or more than 3 times the amount paid by previous owners. These figures prove public housing in Philadelphia is a definite financial asset to the municipality.

Of the 4,509 new homes and apartments to be built on 11 approved sites, construction was started by last December 31 on 9 of the sites with 3,837 homes. Nearing completion are Wilson Park at 26th Street and Snyder Avenue and Raymond Rosen apartments at 22d and Diamond Streets.

A total of 672 homes will be started this year provided Congress follows the request of President Eisenhower for Federal funds to assist in this work, on which private enterprise in the construction field has benefited greatly.

From the social viewpoint, any cessation in this program would be a calamity for low-wage families unable to purchase homes or to rent those beyond their limited financial capacities. The right to a decent home is inherent in an American as a place in which to raise his family in healthful, comfortable circumstances. In the long run, the Nation and the world are the gainers for, as Benjamin Disraeli, Britain's great Prime Minister, once said:

"The best security for civilization is the dwelling, and upon proper and becoming dwellings depends more than anything else the improvement of mankind. Such dwellings are the nurseries of all domestic virtues, and without a becoming home the exercise of those virtues is impossible."

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. SIEMINSKI].

Mr. SIEMINSKI. Mr. Chairman, the fact that Christopher Columbus was sent back in chains did not prove there was no America.

The fact that labels are leveled to castigate people does not change their needs, needs for adequate housing, especially when private enterprise provides none within their ability to pay.

There are some who would defeat this measure on the grounds that it diminishes self-respect, causes decay. Others would hold this measure challenges our profit system, and must thus give way.

Is self-respect lost because we, as Members of Congress, pay no rent for office space? Has the President lost self-respect for occupying the White House free? Is our profit system furthered or destroyed by public schools, public roads, the post office, or the armed services?

What is the measuring rod in all this? At what point does private enterprise become public? By what standard?

With a mind free of the stigma of labels like those pasted on some here this afternoon, many god and proud people use our Government, like the servant it is meant to be, to help promote private profit.

Often, when our markets are flooded and our industries threatened, Congress is called upon to raise tariffs.

When a family with limited income or inadequate earnings calls upon the Congress for adequate shelter, is its plea to be denied, especially when private enterprise is disinterested?

When exports shrivel and manufacturers groan, the Export-Import Bank readily accommodates offshore customers with needed dollars.

In other fields, when still other needs arise, many quite distinguished and self-respecting people unblushingly call into play the resources of the International Monetary Fund, the World Bank for Reconstruction and Development, the Bank for International Settlements, the European Payments Union, each of which, in some measure, serves the convenience and profit of its user.

Is the user of a public housing unit void of self-respect? Is he a drain on the economy? the community? or the industry in which he is employed? Is that what those who would defeat this measure mean to say? In the late 1920's the Congress was like-minded about our soldiers.

We had the depression army then. There wasn't going to be any more wars. ROTC trainees had to thumb their way home from camp because the Congress cut off their funds. The soldier was a bum in uniform who couldn't get a job. How times have changed.

Must we call on Circe to wave her wand for humans to be turned to swine or cattle for them to qualify for needed public funds?

Last year, Congress responded magnificently with funds to beef up cattle in the grievously drought-stricken Southwest. Do emergencies for people exist only in wars and the threat of wars? And not in peaceful pursuits?

Is the profit system challenged only by a lack of honesty and self-respect? What of conditions over which some people and areas have no control, or do deeper causes assault our stand?

One would think by the way the lash of labels snaps and crackles over the heads of little people that they and we, their supporters, are in total blame, and not the conditions they and we try to surmount, if only in some small measure.

People, people. How easy it is to whip them, dog them, frighten and threaten them, and charge them with all sorts of names and failings. Some say Abraham Lincoln was great not because he was born in a log cabin, but because he had the hardihood to leave one. Should temporarily obsolete cities pull up stakes and go west? What then of our shorelines, of our ports?

Is the New York Port Authority the only authority to be blessed by the Congress because it rides herd for profit? Cannot the housing authority ride herd for people so that they, too, might profit by good shelter? What is the delineation between acceptable and unacceptable authorities? Profit for investment houses and tax-free holders and floaters of bonds?

If the sensibilities of people are of no account, Mr. Speaker, there would never be revolutions nor would there be talk of outlawing the isms, political, economic, social, strategic, or tactical, behind which man in his long trek from cold caves to cold wars has taken refuge. The conditions of man are often thrust on him by inheritance, society, or history.

Three forces, Mr. Chairman, within the last 100 years, appear to me to merit as much castigation as is given here to the lack of self-respect of those who promote or use public housing.

Each of these forces have shed their share of misery and wretchedness over the years. Every able-bodied man and woman has had to overcome conditions levied in the wake of these forces. They are, militarism, industrialism, and economic nationalism or sectionalism.

About 100 years ago, here, in the United States, economic sectionalism pitted North against South in one of the bloodiest, costliest, and saddest of man's wars.

Am I to understand from the gentlemen of the South, and Southwest, and others who might oppose this housing measure, that it was right for the North to give no aid through Federal funds to help feed, and clothe, and house, and rebuild the great Southland and its people? That attitude has kept alive sentiments against "Damn Yankeeism," has it not? Have we not learned by this? Is there a person in this Chamber who would today vote to sweat out the South as it was sweated out? I think not, Mr.

Chairman, there is no gain in the sweat-out, only hatred and smouldering embers.

Even now, there are some who, while they favor Federal funds to promote TVA, hesitate to reciprocate with Federal funds to help shelter the needy in the great consumer markets.

And out in the Far West, there are some who though their lands have become arable and their homes lighted and their factories and machines driven by water and power developed with Federal funds oppose the use of Federal funds for the needy in great cities and along great waterways. Self-respect is the cry. My goodness.

Look at the public debt. Over $275 billion. What percentage of this did public housing run up? What percentage of it did militarism, industrialism, and economic nationalism contribute?

Look at our gross national product. Over $300 billion. In 10 years it is estimated it will be well over $500 billion.

To what extent did charges of inefficiency in the administration of the Housing Authority slow down our gross national product or contribute to our debt?

People, people, little people, frighten them, threaten them, wave the flag. Hide a condition that needs attention. It is all in the game. The game of hurrah for me and the dickens with you. It is a great show, Mr. Chairman, great show.

In 1941, selective service was saved by one vote on the brink of a national disaster. I trust that in 1954 the Congress will vote the full housing provisions asked by the President. Private lives can be in crises in peace as in war. This measure will boost our economy. Profit our people. It should pass.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. HAND].

Mr. HAND. Mr. Chairman, reference was made awhile ago, as it has been made frequently during the course of this debate, to the late Senator Taft. The last time that I saw Senator Taft before he was stricken was at a public-housing conference here in the city of Washington. There he made that sound and reasoned speech for which he was always noted; that speech from the heart, and that honest speech, in favor of a moderate program of public housing.

Now, I am a conservative Republican, or at least I like to think so. My liberal friends call me a conservative. I do not represent a big-city district. The largest city in my area does not exceed 75,000; and yet I am 1 of those 23 to which reference has been made who has always supported public housing, and thus I am not under the very clever whiplash recently applied by our friend, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DIES]. And I enjoyed his speech. As a conservative Republican, I am not in the least ashamed or afraid to follow the leadership of the late Senator Taft and the leadership of President Eisenhower, and therefore I shall support the Widnall amendment to insert a public-housing program.

When these charges of socialism are rather carelessly hurled around the House, I do not see how you can distinguish between a program of this character, and the program where we pay artificially high prices for cotton that we do not need, which is raised in the district of my good friend from Mississippi [Mr. COLMER], in order to maintain the prosperity of his people.

There seems to be no objection to direct Government intervention, and cash from the Treasury, to support the growers of cotton and peanuts; but the beneficiaries of this program violently protest any help from Government for the housing needs of our low-income group in, for example, Atlantic City.

Let us be just a little consistent.

The CHAIRMAN. All time has expired.

The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. COLMER] to the Spence substitute.

Mr. COLMER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent, under the circumstances, that my amendment may be withdrawn.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the substitute offered by the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. SPENCE].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. SPENCE) there were—ayes 64, noes 180.

So the substitute amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. WIDNALL].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. WIDNALL) there were—ayes 89, noes 138.

Mr. HALLECK. Mr. Chairman, I demand tellers.

Tellers were ordered, and the Chairman appointed as tellers Mr. WIDNALL and Mr. WOLCOTT.

The Committee again divided; and the tellers reported that there were—ayes 72, noes 164.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may extend their remarks at this point.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

There was no objection.

Mr. PHILBIN. Mr. Chairman, I will not presume to analyze this bill in full detail since it covers a very broad field and it has been exhaustively and ably debated.

The general objective of improving the housing facilities of the Nation I strongly support. We have spent billions for bettering the living, social, and economic standards of millions of peoples overseas. Much of these funds have been beneficial, much more have not been constructively dispensed. Concrete results appear in some cases; little but cynical envy and hatred and ingratitude in others.

Within the shadow of this Capitol there are unsightly and unhealthy housing units that should be razed and replaced with modern facilities. In many urban centers throughout the Nation there are similar conditions which should be alleviated. There should be no slums in America. There should be no unclean, unsanitary, disease-ridden housing in this Nation. To eliminate these social evils, these breeders of delinquency, immorality, crime, and disease constitutes one of the greatest challenges to this Congress. Low-cost housing—modern, clean, adequate, wholesome in surroundings, is a great social need. It must be met.

I have always felt that in every possible instance Americans should own their own homes. Every encouragement and assistance toward that end must be extended, and the various sections of the Nation—urban, smaller towns and farm districts must all be embraced in any properly integrated plan.

Such a program should provide fullest and special consideration for veterans. It should insure reasonable interest rates. It should be adopted not only to the peculiar needs, but to the incomes, of the veterans, workers, farmers, and others who desire housing. It should protect the new owners against defective construction, fraud, and overreaching. It should set up and maintain a proper mechanism for fairly handling mortgages. It should facilitate widespread home ownership of solid, substantial, durable houses. It should discourage the building of cheap, makeshift, cramped-quarter shacks palmed off sometimes on the unsuspecting at times as houses by sharpsters, shysters, and rogues.

A well-rounded housing program will stimulate private enterprise and initiative. It will provide jobs for millions of Americans. It will bring prosperity to many lines of business. If Congress provides the proper climate and encouragement, our great business system will do the rest.

With full awareness of our social needs and orientation, with careful prudent planning, and with a courageous outlook, we can easily bring to early fulfillment the great ideal—a decent home and a fair chance for every American.

Mr. GARMATZ. Mr. Chairman, for several years Baltimore has enjoyed the reputation of being in the forefront of housing progress throughout the country. The city's integrated attack on the problem with public housing, redevelopment and law enforcement, is well organized and has many achievements to its credit. Each of the programs depends upon the other to achieve its greatest usefulness.

Failure of the House to approve new units of public housing for the next few years will seriously jeopardize the housing activities in Baltimore, and, I am sure, in many other areas.

It has been estimated that the slums in Baltimore are costing about $14 million a year in excess of the revenue they produce, and that more than one-third of the city's population lives in these areas.

The city is working hard to clean up the approximately 55,000 homes in the slum areas not suitable for decent living, but to do this, it must have assistance from the Government in the form of public-housing units.

In this connection I would like to call attention to a statement on the current housing situation in Baltimore, which was prepared by the Baltimore Industrial Union Council, largely from data issued by the Baltimore Housing Authority, and which I would like to insert in the RECORD at this point:

BALTIMORE, MD., REPORT ON HOUSING

(Submitted by Michael J. Brockmeyer, executive secretary, Baltimore Industrial Union Council, CIO)

The Baltimore Industrial Union Council, having evaluated the reports of the Housing Authority of Baltimore and other pertinent data, feels that private- and Government-sponsored programs have in the past 3 years shown their inadequacy to cope with a problem of increasing demands for new low-income-housing units in a city already overrun with substandard homes.

We urge action that will take into account the fact that in Baltimore a program is needed that will keep pace with the clearance and rehabilitation of slum areas which encompass one-third of our city's available dwelling units.

Until adequate steps are taken by Congress to correct or add incentive to correct, the conditions described in the attached material, we of Baltimore must face the added burden of the cost of unnecessary disease and crime, both in the adult and juvenile stages.

SUMMARY OF BALTIMORE'S BLIGHTED AREAS: HOUSING CONDITIONS AND FAMILY CHARACTERISTICS

Close to half (49.8 percent) of the 91,600 dwelling units in the blighted areas of Baltimore City were substandard, as of July 1949, according to a recently published Housing Authority study entitled "Baltimore's Blighted Areas: Housing Conditions and Family Characteristics, 1949." The report is based on a sample survey conducted by the United States Bureau of the Census in the summer and fall of 1949 under contract with the HABC. The survey was made of dwelling units in the 56 census tracts designated as blighted by the City Planning Commission, excluding dwelling units in public-housing projects, and special dwelling places, such as institutions, convents, dormitories, and the like.

A standard dwelling unit, as defined in this survey, is a dwelling unit which is not dilapidated, has an installed bathtub or shower and a flush toilet inside the structure for the exclusive use of the occupants and hot and cold running water inside the structure. All other dwelling units are defined substandard.

Approximately 303,000 persons, consisting of 80,000 families of two persons or more and 27,000 individuals, occupied about 88,000 dwelling units in the survey area in 1949. Nonwhite persons composed 51 percent of the population living in the blighted areas. Slightly more than half the families living in the area were white, while nonwhite individuals numbered about 15,000 and white individuals 12,000. About one-third of the families owned their own homes, while two-thirds rented. Almost 23,000 or 56 percent of the white families lived in tenant-occupied units, whereas more than 30,000 or 78 percent of the 39,000 nonwhite families were tenants.

Housing conditions

About 38.4 percent of all units occupied by white persons were substandard compared to 62.2 percent of all nonwhite-occupied units. A breakdown of the 43,550 occupied dwelling units in the survey area rated as substandard reveals (1) that 18,180 or 41.7 percent were occupied by whites and 25,370 or 58.3 percent by nonwhites, and (2) that owner-occupied units constituted 17.6 percent and tenant-occupied 82.4 percent of all substandard dwellings. About 17,900 or 20.3 percent of all units were dilapidated. Other deficiencies revealed are shown in table I on the following page.

There was a higher proportion of units lacking these facilities among tenant-occupied than among owner-occupied units and among those occupied by Negro than among those occupied by white families.

TABLE I.—Number and percent of occupied dwelling units lacking specified basic facilities: Blighted areas, Baltimore, Md., July 1949

Facility	Number	Percent
Total dwelling units	88,170	100.0
No hot water inside structure	25,834	29.3
No private inside toilet	24,070	27.3
No private bath	28,743	32.6
No central heating	39,412	44.7
No installed private stove or range for cooking	3,791	4.3
No private kitchen sink	2,557	2.9
No electric light	1,411	1.6

Family data

About 37 percent of all families were veterans' families. About 11,700, or almost 15 percent of all families, were doubled up. Eight percent of total families were overcrowded, according to the concept that an average of more than 1.5 persons per room denotes overcrowding. If 1.01 or more persons per room is used as the index of crowding then the percentage of families deemed overcrowded would be 22.5 percent.

Rents

The median contract rent for all tenant-occupied units was $31.80, an increase of 67 percent over the corresponding figure of $19.05 in 1940. The median contract rent for white-occupied and Negro-occupied units was $36.41 and $29.89, respectively. However, this racial disparity in rents disappeared when gross rents or contract rents plus utilities were compared. For both groups the median gross rent was about $38.50. The median contract and gross-rent figures for standard housing were $39.26 and $45, respectively; the comparable figures for substandard housing were considerably lower, $26.39 and $33.90.

Incomes

The median income for all families in the survey area was $2,696; for white families alone, it was $3,057; and for nonwhites, $2,445. Significant differences in family income were also obtained in breakdowns by tenure and quality of housing. The median income for families living in owner-occupied units was $3,156, almost $600, or 23.3 percent, above the corresponding figures of $2,559 for families in rented units. The median family income for residents of standard housing was $3,108, 29.3 percent above the $2,403 median income of occupants of substandard housing.

The median rent-income ratio for all principal tenant families surveyed was 17.8 percent. This ratio varied from 36.5 percent for families with incomes below $1,000 to 9.8 percent for those in the $5,000 and over class. Families in the $1,500-$1,999 group paid about 25 percent of their incomes for rent and utilities.

Financial characteristics of owner-occupied homes

About 27,000 or 30.7 percent of the 88,000 occupied units in the survey area were owner-occupied. Of 20,000 owner-occupied single-family homes, about two-thirds were found to be owned by whites and one-third by nonwhites. About 56 percent of the units reported no mortgage, 42 percent a first mortgage, and 2 percent a first and second mortgage. About 65 percent of white-occupied homes had no mortgage compared to 38 percent of nonwhite homes. The median market value of 8,200 single-family homes was $4,287, and the median outstanding mortgage indebtedness $1,826. (The median value was $4,772 for homes classified as standard and $2,926 for those that were substandard.) The median ratio of total indebtedness to value was about 46 percent.

The median monthly home expenditure for owner-occupied single-family homes was $34; for homes of white owner-occupants, this figure was $29.34 compared to $50 for nonwhites.

In addition to summarizing and interpreting the above and other data, the report attempts to evaluate changes that have occurred in housing conditions in the central-city area since 1940, discusses population trends, and compares the characteristics of families and individuals. A description of the survey procedure is given, and an appendix of 63 tables is included.

ANALYSIS OF RESIDENTIAL BUILDING TRENDS IN BALTIMORE IN 1953

Dwelling units authorized in Baltimore City and County in 1953 totaled 11,716, a moderate rise over the 1952 total of 10,167, but well below the 1950 peak of 14,662. Baltimore County alone, however, reached a new high of 7,010 dwelling units, an increase over the 1952 total of 6,250, and slightly above the 1950 figure of 6,891. The chart below shows the annual homebuilding total for Baltimore City and Baltimore County for the last 4 years.

New homes started in Baltimore City had dropped sharply from the 1950 figure of 7,771 to 5,863 in 1951 and again to 3,917 in 1952. The 1953 total of 4,706 represents an increase, but one due almost entirely to the start of construction on the 816 dwelling unit low-rent public-housing project, Lafayette Courts. The private housing total of 3,890 was slightly above the corresponding 1952 figure of 3,625 but well below the 1951 figure of 5,226 new private dwellings, and equal to only half the 1950 total of 7,771.

Very little apartment building has taken place in the Baltimore City-County area since the cessation of the FHA 608 program with its liberalized financing privileges in 1950 and 1951. In Baltimore City, the percentage of dwelling units authorized in structures containing more than two units has declined steadily from 1950 to 1952. In 1950 it was 27 percent, dropping to 12 percent in 1951 and to 8 percent in 1952, but rising to 21 percent in 1953. However, the bulk of the new multifamily rental units built in Baltimore in these 3 years came about through 3 low-rent public housing developments—Cherry Hill Extension, 637 units, permit issued in 1951; Claremont, 292 units, permit issued in 1952; and Lafayette Courts, 816 units, permit issued in 1953. Subtraction of these public housing projects from apartment dwellings authorized provides the following figures on number of new private apartment units built in Baltimore City since 1949: 1950—2,079; 1951—90; 1952—0; 1953—161.

If the extent of apartment building in Baltimore City since 1950 has been negligible, the amount of apartment construction in Baltimore County has been practically nonexistent. In 1950, 532 units or 8 percent of the County's total were in the multifamily rental category. Since that time the pittance of apartment units authorized has remained almost identical—16 units in 1951 and 1952, and 14 units in 1953—all less than 1 percent of total new homes started in those years.

These data—and the small number of 2-family units built for rental purposes—point up the alarming lack of new rental housing in the Baltimore area. Conversions have thus become the main source of additions to Baltimore's rental supply. While high turnover has been experienced in many private 608 rental projects, the lack of any substantial volume of new private rental construction and the continuing shift of formerly rented units to owner-occupancy may lead to a serious imbalance in Baltimore's housing market. These circumstances point up the importance to the city's low-income families of the public housing additions to the rental housing supply.

Mr. Chairman, I am confident these conditions are typical of those in many of the older cities and therefore I strongly urge the adoption of this amendment and the final approval of H. R. 7839.

NEW JERSEY NEEDS HOUSING

Mr. RODINO. Mr. Chairman, the overall housing situation in my State of New Jersey is critical. There is an absolute shortage of housing for practically all groups of citizens except those in the very top income bracket and there is a pressing and crying need for an extended public-housing program.

New Jersey alone could well use the entire number of public-housing units which the Eisenhower administration has recommended for the country as a whole.

Here are the basic facts about housing in New Jersey. My figures are largely derived from the housing census of 1950 which are substantially accurate as of today.

Total number of dwelling units in New Jersey	1,501,473
Total number of families in New Jersey	1,263,570
Total number of low rent public-housing units in New Jersey	22,000

It will be seen, therefore, that the proportion of public housing to the total housing supply is about 1½ percent.

There are today at least 250,000 dangerously dilapidated and/or unsanitary substandard dwelling units in my State. It is reliably estimated that at the very minimum 35,000 families are living in quarters which may be physically safe and actually unfit because of overcrowding.

Studies reveal that almost 100,000 couples without children or other dependents are now seeking houses of their own in New Jersey.

A careful analysis of current rental levels of new housing in New Jersey shows that a 1-bedroom apartment costs at least $85 per month while the average cost of a 3-bedroom apartment in a new building is $140 a month.

Let me emphasize the fact that only 6 percent of new housing includes three bedrooms.

A breakdown of 1950 census figures shows that 46.7 of those gainfully employed in New Jersey were earning $3,500 per year or less. What this means is that practically half the families in New Jersey, according to standards set forth in the report of the President's Advisory Commission on Housing, are unable to afford anything but low-rent public housing.

Current rate of population growth in New Jersey demonstrates that by 1960 we will have an additional 700,000 persons or a total of roughly 5½ million. There are around 45,000 marriages a year in New Jersey but new urban dwelling does not even keep up with the rate of family increase.

From every standpoint, New Jersey is failing to meet the housing needs of its people. The number of families living in slum housing does not decrease, possibly even increases somewhat. Overcrowding and doubling up becomes worse. Rental housing is out of the reach of any but a very small segment of our population. Almost no housing for sale is being built at prices that families in the middle income brackets—say from $3,500 to $5,000 per year can afford to buy. The public-housing program throughout the State has been at a virtual standstill as a direct result of the action of the Congress.

I submit, Mr. Chairman, that the few fundamental figures on the housing situation I have brought out here must show any fairminded person that there is a need for all types of housing in New Jersey, far beyond anything which could under the most sanguine expectations be realized by the measure now before this body. Especially, I call attention to the fact that even if 135,000 units of public housing were authorized each year for the next 4 years for the country as a whole, the proportionate allocation to New Jersey would not begin to make anything but the slightest dent in the slum conditions in the urban areas of our State. Actually, New Jersey could well absorb public housing at the rate which was contemplated in the 1949 Housing Act for the Nation as a whole.

Over and above the basic and urgent need for low-rent housing, we have the larger problem of overall shortages which can only be met by a program far more extensive and far more courageous than anything yet proposed by any committee of the Congress. On behalf of the people of New Jersey who need decent, safe, and sanitary housing at a cost within their means, I appeal to this great body to face up to this great unsolved social problem and help to relieve it to some degree by supporting President Eisenhower's request for 140,000 units—35,000 units over each of the next 4 years.

Mr. WATTS. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. WATTS: On page 200, strike out the word "and" in line 9 and strike out all of line 19 and insert in lieu thereof the following: "of a dwelling unit or units"; and (3) by striking the words "not later than 5 years after March 1, 1949," in subsection 15 (8) (b) and insert "not later than March 1, 1959."

Mr. WATTS. Mr. Chairman, this amendment does not seek to build any more houses. It does not seek to stop the building of any more houses. It does not raise interest rates. It does not lower interest rates. It does not cost the Government any money and neither does it save the Government any money. It deals with the occupancy of public housing. The 1937 public-housing law, as amended in 1949, provided 2 tests that a person who desired to occupy low-cost public housing must qualify under before he could get admitted as a tenant to such low-cost public housing. One of those provisos that he had to qualify under was that his income had to be under a certain amount depending on the number of members in his family. The second proviso required that he had to come from substandard housing before he would be permitted to become a tenant in public housing. The 1949 act further provided as to that second proviso that he had to come from substandard housing that that should be waived in behalf of veterans, or families of deceased veterans. The act of 1949 stated that that waiver should continue until March 1, 1954, on the 1st of March of this year, that preference to veterans expired. The purpose of this amendment is to place back in the law the continuation of that preference to veterans for a further period of 5 years until March 1, 1959.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WATTS. I yield.

Mr. SPENCE. As I understand the gentleman's amendment, it merely extends existing law which gives the veterans preference in obtaining housing accommodations in public-housing projects.

Mr. WATTS. The gentleman is absolutely right.

Mr. SPENCE. I think the gentleman's amendment is a meritorious one, and I am in favor of it.

Mr. WATTS. Mr. Chairman, the reason I offer this amendment and why I think it should be extended is as follows: Many veterans are just now returning from Korea. They have not had an opportunity to occupy low-cost public housing. Many of them have only recently been married and they have not up to now needed low-cost public housing. In many towns, public-housing units are only now being completed and the veterans in those communities have never had an opportunity to occupy them.

I will say to the committee that if there was any excuse for placing this proviso in the law in 1949, it is certainly in order to continue it at the present time.

I may say to the committee, although I know you will not be influenced by what the Senate does, this same matter was brought up in the Senate by Senator SPARKMAN. It was considered by the Senate Banking and Currency Committee and reported out and passed the Senate on March 1, 1954. I think it is a good amendment. I cannot see any real objection to giving the veterans who have not had a chance the same opportunity that was given to those up to 1949.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WATTS. I yield.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I think the substance of the gentleman's amendment is contained in a bill which is before the House Banking and Currency Committee, having been passed by the Senate, and comes over to us as a separate bill. I can see no objection to the gentleman's amendment. We did not put it in this bill because we thought we might act on the Senate bill prior to acting on this bill. But we can put it in this bill with understanding that if we get quicker action on the Senate bill it can be taken out.

So there is no objection.

(Mr. HAGEN of California asked and was given permission to extend his remarks at this point.)

Mr. HAGEN of California. Mr. Chairman, I am happy to join with my Democratic colleague in the amendment which has been offered to extend for an additional 5 years the waiver on behalf of veterans or servicemen or their families or the families of deceased veterans, of the requirement that a qualified applicant for admission to a low-rent housing project must be without housing or demonstrate residence in substandard housing.

I have discussed this amendment with the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. WATTS], who has a separate bill of identical effect, and had he not been prepared to offer the amendment in question I would have offered it for your consideration and passage.

The waiver in question is just as justifiable now as it was when it was first enacted by a Democratic Congress.

It is a recognition of the housing problems which face all veterans and servicemen in a situation which is compounded of a housing shortage and a large number of men in service and returning from service. There has been no substantial change from 1949 to date in the circumstance of the number of servicemen and returning veterans and the supply of housing which would justify abandonment of this preference. The same justifications exist for it today as existed in the past and the other body has already given recognition to this fact by providing for a more limited extension than we are considering here.

The waiver in question recognizes the fact that a man in service or returning from service is in a little different position with respect to procurement of housing than anyone else. In a sense he is a person displaced—involuntarily displaced and not in a position to make easy arrangements for reasonable, adequate housing.

Moreover this waiver is further recognition of the fact that the Congress in the past, and some of us today, recognize the special debt which we owe to our veterans and servicemen, a debt which entitles them to every consideration from the Government in the reestablishment of their lives without undue hardship occasioned by military service.

In passing I would like to say that I feel that the form in which this bill came from the committee to the floor of the House evidenced a disregard for the welfare of veterans. It did not contain the present amendment although its author pleaded for its inclusion in the bill. It wiped out the statutory safeguards of maximum interest rates on GI loans and indirectly sanctioned the undercutting of GI loans by making FHA loans, with which GI loans compete for risk capital, more attractive to the detriment of both the veteran and the prospective FHA buyer.

In addition this bill in effect wipes out the preference of veterans in the purchase of surplus Government housing.

All of these aspects of the bill have been severely criticized by the American Legion, an outstanding veterans' organization.

I trust that we here today will rectify all of the aspects of the legislation brought from the committee of which I have complained. If such rectification is made I will vote for its passage. Otherwise I will not. In voting for it under such circumstances I will not be expressing a belief in its overall virtue because I do not believe it has such virtue and can only hope that if the Senate is wise it will improve it or reject it. Basically its provisions favor the money lenders more than they favor the borrowers at a time when we are in a declining economic spiral. In this respect this is bad legislation.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. WATTS].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HIESTAND. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. HIESTAND: On page 204, after line 8, insert a new section, as follows:

"Sec. 505. Section 10 of said act, as amended, is hereby amended by adding the following new subsection:

"(j) In any community where the people of that community, by their duly elected representatives or by referendum, have indicated that they desire to liquidate a low-rent public housing project by the sale thereof to private ownership, such community shall negotiate with the Federal Government with respect to the sale of such low-rent public housing project and the Authority shall permit the sale of such project (after public advertisement to the highest bidder) upon agreement by such community (1) to pay and retire all outstanding obligations (together with any interest accrued thereon at the date of redemption and any premiums prescribed for the redemption of such obligations prior to maturity) issued by the local housing authority to finance the development of such project and (2) to pay, or to cause to be paid, any proceeds received from the sale of such project in excess of the amount required to comply with the requirements of the preceding clause numbered (1) to the Secretary of the Treasury and to the local government in proportion to the aggregate contribution which the Authority and such local government has made to the project, and the moneys so paid to the Secretary of the Treasury shall be covered into miscellaneous receipts."

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from California is recognized.

Mr. HIESTAND. Mr. Chairman, the proposed amendment may have little objection. It merely provides a formula which would result in Federal and local cooperation in the liquidation of any particular public housing project, once the local governing body or the voters by referendum decide to discontinue a project that is in active operation. It is not designed, nor can it be interpreted to bring about the wholesale liquidation of the 1,631 public housing projects which are today in operation or the 414 projects now under construction.

Under existing law the Federal Government is legally obligated to make contributions for 40 years in order to maintain the subsidized low-rent character of public housing. However, shifting of populations, as well as incomes, increased standards of living, and other changing circumstances in a community might conceivably bring about a situation that renders the continuation of a public housing project wholly impractical. For example, the hearings on the Independent Offices Appropriation Act in February contained references to several communities where the local housing authorities were actually advertising in press and radio for tenants. Unfortunately there is no provision in the law at present which would enable such communities to proceed toward liquidation. The only provision for liquidation suggested in this bill would not be operative until 40 years had elapsed.

Surely, it is reasonable to foresee a desire on the part of a community to liquidate a public housing project 10, 15, or 20 years after it has been instituted instead of waiting for 40 years.

Mr. YATES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HIESTAND. I yield.

Mr. YATES. How does the gentleman's proposal permit a liquidation of the bonds that have been issued to provide for the construction of a project?

Mr. HIESTAND. I thank the gentleman from Illinois for the inquiry. I shall explain it right now.

The amendment proposed herein would enable such a community to at least start the ball rolling toward liquidation. Here is how the amendment would work.

First, the local governing body or the people by referendum would have to vote for liquidation.

Second, if the local housing authority does not desire to comply with the wishes of the community, the legislature of the State would amend its enabling act to direct the local housing authority to exercise its option of redemption of the outstanding obligations.

Third, the local government is required to provide the necessary money to redeem the outstanding obligations, including penalties for redemption before maturity. The local housing authority in turn would convey full title of the project to the local government.

Fourth, the local government would then sell the project to private interests after advertising for bids.

Fifth, the proceeds of the sale would go to repay the local government for the advances made to the local authority to redeem the outstanding obligations of the local public housing authority. The balance would then go to the Secretary of the Treasury and the local government in proportion to their contribution to the project.

Critics of this proposal have suggested that there might not be sufficient moneys left over to repay any part of the local government's contribution. That may or may not be the case because it is impossible to predict accurately the market price of a public housing project at some future date. However, there is no way that this contribution could be repaid under existing law. Under this amendment, the continued contribution of the local government through tax exemption would cease, and after sale of the project to private owners, the project would go on the tax rolls for full local taxation.

What would be the savings to the Federal and local governments through this voluntary liquidation?

First. The tax loss to the Federal Government of $4.90 per unit per month for units constructed under the 1949 act would end.

Second. The $7.45 per month per unit tax loss to the local government would end.

Third. The annual contribution from the Federal Government which averages $26.90 per unit per month would end.

Public housing was enacted by the Congress to meet a need. This amendment merely provides a means for communities to liquidate a project where the need no longer exists. I strongly urge its adoption by the committee.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, this amendment in principle was discussed in the Committee on Banking and Currency in consequence of which an adjustment was made which the gentleman has incorporated in the amendment which he has offered. For that reason, I see no objection to it. I have just checked with the minority and I doubt whether there is any objection on that side.

Mr. SPENCE. I have no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. HIESTAND].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. GWINN. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. GWINN: On page 204, following line 6, insert a new section as follows:

"Section 15-7 of the United States Housing Act of 1937, as amended, is further amended by adding the following proviso: Provided, That no unit in a low-rent housing project shall be occupied by a person who is a member of an organization designated as subversive by the Attorney General of the United States."

Mr. GWINN. Mr. Chairman, this is the exact language that 2 years ago was agreed to in an appropriation bill by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. THOMAS], on behalf of the Appropriations Committee, and adopted by unanimous consent.

The reason for introducing it at this time is to make it a part of the permanent legislation regarding public housing so that it will not be subject to a point of order as it was this time when the appropriation bill came before us. The substantial reason for the amendment is that the public housing authorities have said over and over again, particularly in Pittsburgh, Detroit, and other places where the question has come up, that they are unable to get the Communists out of the public housing projects without some enabling legislation. They claim they have no authority by which they may proceed. They can put a tenant out for immoral conduct of various sorts, but they cannot put a tenant out because he or she is a Communist. Strangely enough, in every one of these big public housing projects where investigation has been made, right at the center or core of the tenancy is some very well acknowledged Communist or left winger tucked right into the setup.

For example, there is a Communist, William Allen, in the Herman Gardens in Detroit, correspondent for the Daily Worker, who pays $46 a month for a 2-bedroom apartment. The rent is actually $56.23. The taxpayers make up the difference because Allen's reported income from the Communist newspaper is only $55 a week.

There is in Pittsburgh another example, and I will stop with this.

Mr. OAKMAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GWINN. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. OAKMAN. With reference to the individual named in Detroit, he has since been convicted under the Smith Act in the Federal court for the eastern district of Michigan. He is now being charged with falsely stating that he was not a Communist. As a member of the Common Council of the City of Detroit several years ago, I introduced a resolution to expel him from the Herman Garden housing project. The housing people said there is nothing we can do. I want to rise to support the gentleman's amendment.

Mr. GWINN. I thank the gentleman very much.

Mrs. ST. GEORGE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GWINN. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mrs. ST. GEORGE. May I say that about a year or so ago I was in the city of Los Angeles with the distinguished chairman of the Government Operations Committee. We were looking into public housing there and were informed by the public-housing people themselves that they had absolutely no means of getting rid of Communists in public housing, that they hoped there would be some legislation very soon enacted that would strengthen their hands. I commend the gentleman for offering the amendment, and I certainly hope it will pass.

Mr. GWINN. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GWINN. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. WHEELER. Was my understanding correct a moment ago when the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. OAKMAN] said that a person had been taken from one of these low-cost public-housing units, convicted in a court, and sent to the Federal penitentiary?

Mr. GWINN. That is right.

Mr. WHEELER. Then am I right in assuming that he has essentially the same type of public housing but now does not even have to pay nominal rent?

Mr. GWINN. I thank the gentleman. I think that is a sound conclusion.

Mr. FISHER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GWINN. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. FISHER. The gentleman has offered a very commendable amendment. With reference to the problem they are having with these subversives in these public-housing projects, if the gentleman will yield, I should like to read very briefly a sentence from the Daily Mirror of New York City:

A Mirror survey revealed that a hard core of American Labor Party members, unswervingly devoted to the Moscow dictated line, has infiltrated virtually every one of the fifty-odd-housing projects under jurisdiction of the New York City Housing Authority and is busily engaged in stirring up dissension, discontent, and political bias in them.

Mr. GWINN. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, I offer a substitute for the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. GWINN].

The Clerk read as follows:

Substitute amendment offered by Mr. McCORMACK: On page 204 after line 8 add the following:

"SEC. —. (a) No Federal department or agency shall hereafter make, or contract to make, any loan, grant, annual contribution, advance, or other financial assistance available for or with respect to any housing unit or units, or guarantee or insure, or contract to guarantee or insure, any loan made for any housing unit or units unless the owner or owners thereof agrees (or, in the case of any loan which is guaranteed or insured, the lender agrees to require such owner or owners to agree) that (1) prior to the admission of any person to occupy any such housing unit or prior to the sale of any such housing unit for occupancy by the purchaser such owner or owners will obtain from the prospective occupant or purchaser a certificate (to which the provisions of section 1001 of title 18, United States Code, are hereby expressly made applicable) that he is not a member of any organization which, for purposes of this act, the Attorney General designates as subversive and, if the owner or owners occupies a housing unit or units, he will execute such certificate, and (2) such owner or owners will require any purchaser of any such housing unit or units to agree to comply with the requirements of clause (1) in the same manner as though the purchaser were the owner first subject thereto: Provided, That this act shall not affect the validity of, or the powers and obligations of any Federal department or agency of the United States under any contract with respect to the making of loans, grants, annual contributions, advances, or other financial assistance, or the guaranty or insurance of loans.

"(b) Each Federal department or agency is hereby authorized, with respect to any housing assisted by it, to issue such regulations and procedures as it shall deem advisable for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this section, including requirements with respect to the holding or filing of agreements and certificates made or executed pursuant to the preceding sentence; and, with respect to any housing owned by the United States, the Federal department or agency having jurisdiction thereof shall issue regulations or procedures requiring an occupant or purchaser of such housing to execute an agreement or certificate similar to the agreements or certificates which occupants or purchasers would execute under subsection 901 (a) of this act.

"As used in this section, the term 'Federal department or agency' shall mean any department, agency, corporation, or officer in the executive branch of the United States Government, including the Federal Home Loan Banks."

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, it would seem to me that the gentleman from New York [Mr. GWINN] would be willing to accept my amendment or to agree to it. Certainly, if the chairman of the committee, the distinguished gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WOLCOTT] is not going to oppose the Gwinn amendment, under no conditions would there be any justification in opposing this amendment because the only purpose of this amendment is to treat all persons with equality and equal punishment under the law. So, under my amendment, we have the entire broad question presented to the committee.

Mr. HAYS of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCORMACK. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. HAYS of Ohio. As I understand it, the gentleman's amendment applies to Communists all up and down the economic scale, not just to those at the bottom of it.

Mr. McCORMACK. It applies to all of them. A Communist is a Communist whether he has not got a nickel or has a million dollars.

Mr. McDONOUGH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCORMACK. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. McDONOUGH. Has the gentleman's amendment provided for the case of a Communist who now occupies such a house and who should be evicted?

Mr. McCORMACK. I assume that the amendment, by implication, would cover that.

Mr. McDONOUGH. But it does not state that.

Mr. McCORMACK. My amendment is comprehensive. It meets the whole situation. It does not single out one segment of our American society. It applies to everybody and I am sure my friend from California [Mr. McDONOUGH] agrees with the objective of the amendment.

Mr. McDONOUGH. I do. In order to show that it is the gentleman's intent in his amendment to evict any Communist who is now living in such a house, I think it should be so stated in this RECORD, so that anyone later who reads the RECORD will know that that is the case.

Mr. McCORMACK. Of course.

Mr. McDONOUGH. The gentleman will agree to that?

Mr. McCORMACK. I agree with that, for the RECORD.

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCORMACK. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. SCOTT. I am curious to know how much this overall brain washing will cost the Federal Government?

Mr. McCORMACK. If we are going to have any brain washing it ought to be overall.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the substitute amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. McCORMACK] to the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. GWINN].

The substitute amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman man from New York [Mr. GWINN] as amended.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. FISHER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. FISHER: On page 204, after line 6, insert a new section to read as follows:

"SEC. —. Section 15 (8) (a) of the United States Housing Act of 1937, as amended, is hereby amended by adding a proviso as follows: 'Provided, That maximum income limits for admission to such low-rent housing project may not exceed $2,000 per annum, and for continued occupancy may not exceed $2,300 per annum.'"

Mr. FISHER. Mr. Chairman, many Members have the misconception that the public-housing law limits occupancy of the federally subsidized dwellings to families earning under $2,000 a year. This is not true. The fact is that there are no statutory income ceilings in the law. This is one of the major defects of the law. Under the present wording of the law, the public is open to being misled by discussions like those on the floor here the last few days indicating that public-housing use is restricted to families earning $2,000 a year or less. I recall that among others the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. RABAUT] on Tuesday on the floor of this House in speaking for public housing said he was representing the "little people of this Nation, those receiving $2,000 a year and less."

Now, what does the law actually say? Section 301 of the 1949 act—Public Law 171, 81st Congress—states in part:

The public-housing agency—

Meaning the local public-housing authority—shall fix maximum income limits for the admission and for the continued occupancy of families in such housing, that such maximum income limits and all revisions thereof shall be subject to the prior approval of the Authority—

Meaning the Federal Public Housing Administration—and that the Authority may require the public-housing agency to review and to revise such maximum income limits if the Authority determines that changed conditions in the locality make such revisions necessary in achieving the purposes of this act.

Section 306 of the 1949 act states in part:

The dwellings in low-rent housing as defined in this act shall be available solely for families whose net annual income at the time of admission, less an exemption of $100 for each minor member of the family other than the head of the family and his spouse, does not exceed 5 times the annual rental (including the value or cost to them of water, electricity, gas, other heating and cooking fuels, and other utilities) of the dwellings to be furnished such families.

Some time back an attempt was made to obtain the income limits in Federal public housing in one of our largest cities. The official of the housing authority in that city when asked what the ceiling on income limits was, stated "5 times the rent." He was then asked what is the rent. The answer came back, "one-fifth of the income." Now that is the kind of runaround we get when we try to get specifics regarding these claims that public housing is restricted to those families earning under $2,000 a year.

This uncertainty ought to be cleared up once and for all. The original 1937 act—Public Law 412, 75th Congress—to which the 1949 act was an amendment states as a definition for the families to be served by the housing developed under the program in subsection 2 (2):

The term "families of low income" means families who are in the lowest-income group and who cannot afford to pay enough to cause private enterprise in their locality or metropolitan area to build an adequate supply of decent, safe, and sanitary dwellings for their use.

Regardless of how we feel about public housing, let us at least try to see that it does the job that it is advocated to do. I have chosen the figure used by the gentlemen who favor the program and ask the support of these gentlemen and all Members to see that statutory limit is set in the law in accordance with the written and spoken claims made about public housing so that as long as we have it it will at least be doing the job that its advocates said it was going to do.

How can you justify housing families earning $4,000 and $5,000 a year and more in these units in practice when all of the sales talk by the friends of this program has been that it was going to help the really bottom group of the citizens and they have used over and over the figure of $2,000 a year and under.

Mr. HOLIFIELD. Mr. Chairman, I offer a substitute amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Substitute amendment offered by Mr. HOLIFIELD for the amendment offered by Mr. FISHER: "Provided further, That the President shall from time to time set the annual maximum wage level for occupants of public housing units, taking into consideration the number of persons in each family, the current purchasing power of the dollar in relation to the cost of living and wage levels of each locality."

Mr. FISHER. Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order against the amendment on the ground that it is not germane to the amendment which the gentleman from Texas offered, and which is now pending.

Mr. HOLIFIELD. Mr. Chairman, I have offered it as a substitute amendment. I do not offer this amendment as an amendment to the gentleman's amendment.

Mr. FISHER. It is not germane to the bill.

Mr. HOLIFIELD. Mr. Chairman, I ask for a ruling on that, and I would like to be heard on the point of order.

Mr. FISHER. It relates to wages and has no reference to rents. It is not germane to the subject matter covered in the pending bill nor to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. HOLIFIELD. Mr. Chairman, the amendment of the gentleman from Texas set a rigid level of wages without any regard to the fluctuation of the purchasing power of the dollar nor the cost of living, and the level of wages in each community which vary throughout the United States. It is obvious, it seems to me, that if the gentleman can set a rigid wage level that a sliding wage level, which would depend upon the annual reevaluation or a periodic valuation in order that a large family of 6 or 8 or 10 children might be given a consideration of wage earning commensurate with the needs of the families and a small family likewise could be given a smaller wage level in view of their decreased need for the necessities of life.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. REECE of Tennessee). The Chair is ready to rule. Both amendments would appear to deal with the financial income of the applicants for occupancy in these facilities. One amendment fixes income limits. The other delegates authority for the income to be fixed. Both amendments seem to deal with the same subject matter. The Chair holds that the amendment is germane and overrules the point of order.

The gentleman from California [Mr. HOLIFIELD] is recognized to speak on his amendment.

Mr. McDONOUGH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLIFIELD. I yield.

Mr. McDONOUGH. I wonder if the gentleman considered this in writing his amendment. I do not know where in the law the President has any jurisdiction over public-housing authorities at all. The public-housing authorities are established by the States, counties, and cities, and they are under the jurisdiction of the State legislatures or the counties or the cities, which appoint them in some instances, or they are autonomous, if there is no provision in the law. There is no place in the law that I know anything about where the President could declare or set the scale on which a person could be admitted to rent these facilities. This is a new law, in my opinion.

Mr. HOLIFIELD. The gentleman may be right about this. I am not prepared to pass judgment on that particular point. I merely tried to make equitable what I considered was an inequitable amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas. If it is beyond the power of Congress to set up conditions in this act which is being passed by the Congress, which shall be complied with by Federal and local housing authorities, it is obvious it could not be in order. However, it is my own opinion, it is probably in order because I believe the Congress has the right to set conditions which shall be complied with by those agencies that avail themselves of the benefits of Federal assistance. In my argument on the point of order, I stress the human values which I hope to protect here. It is very simple. It is merely this: To set up a rigid wage level by law, in my opinion, is a very unwise thing in view of the variable factors that are involved. I will only address myself to one factor and yield back the balance of my time. It is obviously unfair and inconsiderate and inhumane to ask a family of 10, a man and his wife and 8 children, to live on $2,300, if it is fair to ask a man and his wife in a public-housing unit of the same type to live on $2,300. It is obvious that the larger family needs a higher wage level. I believe in the administration of the law, justice could be done, and a wage level could be set which would be more humane and more in line with what the Congress would like to do.

Mr. CONDON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLIFIELD. I yield.

Mr. CONDON. In answer to a question by the gentleman from California [Mr. McDONOUGH], you indicated you are not prepared to state whether or not your substitute amendment would be permissible under existing law, which sets up these housing authorities as local, autonomous bodies. Would the same objection that the gentleman from California [Mr. McDONOUGH] raised apply to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. FISHER]?

Mr. HOLIFIELD. Of course it would. The logic of his argument is the same in each instance, equally applicable to the two amendments.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from California has expired.

Mr. SECREST. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I did not intend to say anything on this, and will take only a minute, but I hope this House will not do anything in fixing a rigid standard that would destroy in many areas housing projects of long standing. This amendment should be defeated.

I have a housing project in Zanesville, Ohio. There is also beside it a temporary housing project for veterans, which the Government has ordered closed, and must be vacated by January 1. We have made arrangements to move those veterans out of the temporary housing over into the permanent housing project. One of those veterans I know has seven children. If they move him over into the other project, with living conditions such as they are in the city of Zanesville, Ohio, he would be compelled to move out of the permanent housing project under the terms of this amendment. There is a great difference in the cost of living in Zanesville and in some other cities, and if you set a rigid standard as low as this minimum proposes, you will throw out of existing housing projects many families who cannot make ends meet now.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SECREST. I yield.

Mr. JAVITS. Is it not a fact that the rate of income, what it costs costs to live for a poor family in New York, could be around $2,700, whereas a family earning $2,700 in the West-Central area would be doing quite well; therefore I think it should be clear that this amendment will just cause wholesale evictions from public-housing projects and will knock the whole thing over the head. You can kill something in many ways, and this is one way to do it.

Mr. SECREST. Certainly. I think the only sensible thing to do is to do the way it is being handled now. It is administered, in Zanesville for instance, by a housing authority. I think the best way is to let them say what they think should be the standard of rent in that particular community.

Mr. McDONOUGH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SECREST. I yield.

Mr. McDONOUGH. The gentleman will agree that if a man has a family of 5 children, and is earning $5,000, and is occupying a public housing unit, and a man in the same community with the same number of children is earning only $2,500, the man earning $5,000 should get out. Does the gentleman not agree with that?

Mr. SECREST. Yes. That conforms to present regulations. There is a ceiling placed on income.

Mr. McDONOUGH. There should be some point at which a man's earning capacity, no matter how many children he has, should designate that he should look out for himself.

Mr. SECREST. I agree that the intent is to take care of those who need it most.

Mr. HOLIFIELD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SECREST. I yield.

Mr. HOLIFIELD. My substitute amendment seeks to do just exactly what the gentleman is arguing for; that is, to leave this up to the Authority to handle from the standpoint of equity and regulation, rather than to write in a rigid sum of $2,300 which would apply unequally throughout the United States.

Two thousand three hundred dollars in some areas might be too high; in others it might be too low. The only way to decide it is to leave it to the housing authority to determine.

I believe that is what the substitute amendment does.

Mr. SECREST. Then I submit that the substitute amendment should be adopted because I think it would be a terrible situation if we set a standard for this whole country under which some communities might benefit and others not.

Mr. HAGEN of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SECREST. I yield.

Mr. HAGEN of California. The gentleman understands that this amendment does not specify whether it is gross income or net income. The two are entirely different.

Mr. SECREST. I think it would completely destroy the housing program and automatically throw 90 percent of the veterans out of Coopermill Manor in Jonesville, Ohio.

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SECREST. I yield.

Mr. COOLEY. The substitute definitely states that the President shall make this determination. No legal authority would exist therefor in the local authorities to make the determination.

Mr. SECREST. I certainly hope the original amendment will be defeated.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment and all amendments thereto do now close.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the substitute offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. HOLIFIELD].

The substitute amendment was rejected.

The question recurs on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. FISHER].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the balance of the bill from pages 204 to 226 be considered as read and open for amendment at any point.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

(The balance of the bill reads as follows:)

TITLE VI—HOME LOAN BANK BOARD

Sec. 601. The National Housing Act, as amended, is hereby amended—

(1) by amending section 402 (c) (4) to read as follows:

"(4) To sue and be sued, complain and defend, in any court of competent jurisdiction in the United States or its territories or possessions, and may be served by serving a copy of process on any of its agents or any agent of the Home Loan Bank Board and mailing a copy of such process by registered mail to the Corporation at Washington, D. C.";

(2) by adding the following new subsection to section 405:

"(c) No action against the Corporation to enforce a claim for payment of insurance upon an insured account of an insured institution in default shall be brought after the expiration of 3 years from the date of default unless, within such 3-year period, the conservator, receiver, or other legal custodian of the insured institution shall have recognized such insured account as a valid claim against the insured institution and the claim for payment of insurance shall have been presented to the Corporation and its validity denied, in which event the action may be brought within 2 years from the date of such denial."; and

(3) by striking out of title IV of the National Housing Act, as amended, the words "Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation" at each place the same appears therein and inserting in lieu thereof the words "Federal Savings Insurance Corporation".

Sec. 602. The Federal Home Loan Bank Act, as amended, is hereby amended by striking "$20,000" in section 10 (b) (2) and inserting "$35,000."

Sec. 603. The Home Owners' Loan Act of 1933, as amended, is hereby amended—

(1) by striking "$20,000" wherever it appears in the first paragraph of subsection (c) of section 5 and inserting "$35,000";

(2) by amending subsection (d) of section 5 to read as follows:

"(d) (1) The Board shall have power to enforce this section and rules and regulations made hereunder. In the enforcement of any provision of this section or rules and regulations made hereunder, or any other law or regulation, and in the administration of conservatorships and receiverships as provided in subsection (d) (2) hereof, the Board is authorized to act in its own name and through its own attorneys. The Board shall have power to sue and be sued, complain and defend in any court of competent jurisdiction in the United States or its Territories or possessions. It shall by formal resolution state any alleged violation of law or regulation and given written notice to the Association concerned of the facts alleged to be such violation, except that the appointment of a Supervisory Representative in Charge, a conservator or a receiver shall be exclusively as provided in subsection (d) (2) hereof. Such association shall have 30 days within which to correct the alleged violation of law or regulation and to perform any legal duty. If the association concerned does not comply with the law or regulation within such period, then the Board shall give such association 20 days written notice of the charges against it and of a time and place at which the Board will conduct a hearing as to such alleged violation of duty. Such hearing shall be in the Federal judicial district of the association unless it consents to another place and shall be conducted by a hearing examiner as is provided by the Administrative Procedure Act. The Board or any member thereof or its designated representative shall have power to administer oaths and affirmations and shall have power to issue subpoenas and subpoenas duces tecum, and shall issue such at the request of any interested party, and the Board or any interested party may apply to the United States district court of the district where such hearing is designated for the enforcement of such subpoena or subpoena duces tecum and such courts shall have power to order and require compliance therewith. A record shall be made of such hearing and any interested party shall be entitled to a copy of such record to be furnished by the Board at its reasonable cost. After such hearing and adjudication by the Board, appeals shall lie as is provided by the Administrative Procedure Act, and the review by the court shall be upon the weight of the evidence. Upon the giving of notice of alleged violation of law or regulation as herein provided, either the Board or the association affected may, within 30 days after the service of said notice, apply to the United States district court of the district where the association is located for a declaratory judgment and an injunction or other relief with respect to such controversy, and said court shall have jurisdiction to adjudicate the same as in other cases and to enforce its orders. The Board may apply to the United States district court for the district where the association affected has its home office for the enforcement of any order of the Board and such court shall have power to enforce any such order which has become final. The Board shall be subject to suit by any Federal savings and loan association with respect to any matter under this section or regulations made thereunder, or any other law or regulation, in the United States district court for the district where the home office of such association is located, and may be served by serving a copy of process on any of its agents and mailing a copy of such process by registered mail, to the Home Loan Bank Board, Washington, D. C.

"(2) The grounds for the appointment of a conservator or receiver for a Federal savings and loan association shall be one or more of the following: (i) insolvency in that the assets of such association are less than its obligations to its creditors and others, including its members; (ii) violation of law or of a regulation; (iii) the concealment of its books, records, or assets, or the refusal to submit its books, papers, records, or affairs for inspection to any examiner or lawful agent appointed by the Home Loan Bank Board; and (iv) unsafe or unsound operation. The Board shall have exclusive jurisdiction to appoint a supervisory representative in charge, conservator, or receiver. If, in the opinion of the Board, a ground for the appointment of a conservator or receiver as herein provided exists and the Board determines that an emergency exists requiring immediate action, the Board is authorized to appoint ex parte and without notice a supervisory representative in charge to take charge of said association and its affairs who shall have and exercise all the powers herein provided for conservators and receivers. Unless sooner removed by the Board, such supervisory representative in charge shall hold office until a conservator or receiver appointed by the Board after notice as herein provided, takes charge of the association and its affairs, or for 6 months, or until 30 days after the termination of the administrative hearing and final proceedings herein provided, or until 60 days after the final termination of any litigation affecting such temporary appointment, whichever is longest. The Board shall have the power to appoint a conservator or receiver but no such appointment of a conservator or receiver shall be made except pursuant to a formal resolution of the Board stating the grounds therefor and except notice thereof is given to said association stating the grounds therefor and until an opportunity for an administrative hearing thereon is afforded to said association. Such hearing shall be held in accordance with the provisions of the Administrative Procedure Act and shall be subject to review as therein provided and the review by the court shall be upon the weight of the evidence. A conservator shall have all the powers of the members, the directors, and officers of the Federal association and shall be authorized to operate it in its own name or conserve its assets in the manner and to the extent authorized by the Board. The Board shall appoint only the Federal Savings Insurance Corporation as receiver for any Federal savings and loan association, which shall have power as receiver to buy at its own sale subject to approval by the Board. With the consent of the association expressed by a resolution of the board of directors or of its members, the Board is authorized to appoint a conservator or receiver for a Federal association without notice and without hearing. The Board shall have power to make rules and regulations for the reorganization, merger, and liquidation of Federal associations and for such associations in conservatorship and receivership and for the conduct of conservatorships and receiverships. Whenever a supervisory representative in charge, conservator, or receiver, appointed by the Board pursuant to the provisions of this section, demands possession of the property, business, and assets of any association, the refusal of any officer, agent, employee, or director of such association to comply with the demand shall be punishable by a fine of not more than $1,000 or by imprisonment for not more than 1 year, or both, by such fine and imprisonment." and

(3) by striking out the second paragraph of subsection (c) of section 5 and inserting in lieu thereof the following new paragraph:

"Without regard to any other provision of this subsection except the area requirement such associations are authorized to invest a sum not in excess of 15 percent of the assets of such association in loans insured under title I of the National Housing Act, as amended, in unsecured loans insured or guaranteed under the provisions of the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944, as amended, and in other loans for property alteration, repair, or improvement: Provided, That no such loan shall be made in excess of $3,000."

TITLE VII—VOLUNTARY HOME CREDIT PROGRAM Declaration of policy

Sec. 701. The Congress hereby declares that the purposes of this title are to encourage and facilitate the flow of mortgage credit into remote areas and small communities, through the voluntary cooperation and effort of private lending institutions, and to assist in the development of a program whereby private financing institutions engaged in mortgage lending can make a maximum contribution to the economic stability and growth of the Nation through extension of the market for insured or guaranteed mortgage loans.

Definitions

SEC. 702. As used in this title, the following terms shall have the meanings respectively ascribed to them below, and, unless the context clearly indicates otherwise, shall include the plural as well as the singular number:

(a) "Insured or guaranteed mortgage loan" means any loan made for the construction or purchase of a family dwelling or dwellings and which is (1) guaranteed or insured under the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944, as amended, or (2) secured by a mortgage insured under the National Housing Act, as amended.

(b) "Private financing institutions" means life-insurance companies, savings banks, commercial banks, cooperative banks, homestead associations, building and loan associations, and savings and loan associations.

(c) "Administrator" means the Housing and Home Finance Administrator.

(d) "State" means the several States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, and the territories and possessions of the United States.

National Voluntary Mortgage Credit Extension Committee

SEC. 703. There is hereby established a National Voluntary Mortgage Credit Extension Committee, hereinafter called the "National Committee," which shall consist of the Housing and Home Financing Administrator, who shall act as Chairman of the National Committee, and 14 other persons appointed by the Administrator as follows:

(a) Two representatives of each type of private financing institutions;

(b) Two representatives of builders of residential properties; and

(c) Two representatives of real estate boards.

The Administrator shall also request the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System and the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs to designate a representative of the Board and the Veterans' Administration, respectively, to serve on the National Committee in an advisory capacity.

In selecting and appointing the members of the National Committee, the Administrator shall have due regard to fair representation thereon for small, medium, and large private financing institutions and for different geographical areas. Members of the National Committee appointed by the Administrator shall serve on a voluntary basis.

Regional subcommittees

SEC. 704. (a) As soon as practicable, the National Committee shall divide the United States into regions conforming generally to the Federal Reserve districts. The Administrator, after consultation with the other members of the National Committee, shall, for each such region, designate five or more persons representing private financing institutions and builders of residential properties in such region to serve as a regional subcommittee of the National Committee for the purpose of assisting in placing with private financing institutions insured or guaranteed mortgage loans as hereinafter set forth. In designating the members of each such regional subcommittee, the Administrator shall have due regard to fair representation thereon for small, medium, and large financing institutions and builders of residential properties and for different geographical areas within such regions. Members of each regional subcommittee shall serve on a voluntary basis.

(b) The Administrator is authorized and directed, upon the request of a regional subcommittee, to provide such subcommittee with a suitable office and meeting place and to furnish to the subcommittee such staff assistance as may be reasonably necessary for the purpose of assisting it in the performance of the functions hereinafter set forth. In complying with these requirements, the Administrator may act through and may utilize the services of the several Federal Reserve banks.

Function of National Committee and of regional subcommittees

SEC. 705. It shall be the function of the National Committee and the regional subcommittees to facilitate the flow of funds for residential mortgage loans into areas or communities where there may be a shortage of local capital for, or inadequate facilities for access to, such loans, and to achieve the maximum utilization of the facilities of private financing institutions for this purpose by soliciting and obtaining the cooperation of all such private financing institutions in extending credit for insured or guaranteed mortgage loans.

SEC. 706. The National Committee shall study and review the demand and supply of funds for residential mortgage loans in all parts of the country, and shall receive reports from and correlate the activities of the regional subcommittees. It shall also periodically inform the Commissioner of the Federal Housing Administration and the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs concerning the results of the studies and of the progress of the National Committee and regional subcommittees in performing their function, and shall to the extent practicable maintain liaison with State and local Government housing officials in order that they may be fully apprized of the function and work of the National Committee and regional subcommittees. The Administrator shall, not later than April 1 in each year, make a full report of the operations of the National Committee and the regional subcommittees to the Congress.

SEC. 707. (a) Each regional subcommittee shall study and review the demand and supply of funds for residential mortgage loans in its region, shall analyze cases of unsatisfied demand for mortgage credit, and shall report to the National Committee the results of its study and analysis. It shall also maintain liaison with officers of the Federal Housing Administration and of the Veterans' Administration within its region in order that such officers may be fully apprized of the function and work of the National Committee and regional subcommittees. It shall request such officers to supply to the subcommittee information regarding cases of unsatisfied demand for mortgage credit for loans eligible for insurance under the National Housing Act, as amended, or for insurance or guaranty under the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944, as amended. Such officers are authorized to furnish such information to such subcommittee.

(b) A regional subcommittee shall render assistance to any applicant for a loan, the proceeds of which are to be used for the construction or purchase of a family dwelling or dwellings, upon receipt of a certificate from such applicant, stating that—

(1) application for such loan has been made to at least two private financing institutions, or in the alternative to such private financing institution or institutions as may be reasonably accessible to the applicant;

(2) the applicant has been informed by the above-mentioned private financing institution or institutions that funds for mortgage credit on the loan are unavailable; and

(3) the applicant is eligible for insurance or guaranty under the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944, as amended, or consents that the mortgage to be issued as security for the loan be insured under the National Housing Act, as amended.

Upon receipt of such certification from an applicant the regional subcommittee shall circularize private financing institutions in the region or elsewhere and shall use its best efforts to enable the applicant to place the loan with a private financing institution. It shall render similar assistance to any applicant for a loan, the proceeds of which are to be used for the construction or purchase of a family dwelling or dwellings, upon receipt of information from the Veterans' Administration to the effect that the applicant has applied for a direct loan, if he is eligible for such a loan, and that he is eligible for insurance or guaranty, under the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944, as amended. In order to encourage small or local private financing institutions to originate insured or guaranteed mortgage loans, it may also render similar assistance to private financing institutions in locating other private financing institutions willing to repurchase such mortgage loans on a mutually satisfactory basis.

(c) In the performance of its responsibilities under subsection (b) of this section, a regional subcommittee may at its discretion (1) request the National Committee to obtain for it the aid of other regional subcommittees in seeking sources of mortgage credit, and (2) request and obtain voluntary assurances from any one or more private financing institutions that they will make funds available for insured or guaranteed mortgage loans in any specified area or areas within its region in which the subcommittee finds that there is a lack of adequate credit facilities for such loans.

Regulations of Administrator

SEC. 708. The Administrator, after consultation with the National Committee, shall have power to issue general rules and procedures for the effective implementation of this title and for the functioning of the regional subcommittees, pursuant to the provisions hereof and not in conflict herewith.

General provisions

SEC. 709. No act pursuant to the provisions of this title and which occurs while this title is in effect shall be construed to be within the prohibitions of the antitrust laws or the Federal Trade Commission Act of the United States.

SEC. 710. If any provision of this title, or the application thereof to any person or circumstances, is held invalid, the remainder of this title and the application of such provision to other persons or circumstances, shall not be affected thereby.

SEC. 711. (a) This title and all authority conferred hereunder shall terminate at the close of June 30, 1957.

(b) Notwithstanding subsection (a), Congress, by concurrent resolution, may terminate this title prior to the termination date hereinabove provided for.

TITLE VIII—URBAN PLANNING AND RESERVE OF PLANNED PUBLIC WORKS

Urban planning

SEC. 801. To facilitate urban planning for smaller communities lacking adequate planning resources, the Administrator is authorized to make planning grants to State planning agencies for the provision of planning assistance (including surveys, land-use studies, urban renewal plans, technical services, and other planning work, but excluding plans for specific public works) to cities and other municipalities having a population of less than 25,000 according to the latest decennial census. The Administrator is further authorized to make planning grants for similar planning work in metropolitan and regional areas to official State, metropolitan, or regional planning agencies empowered under State or local laws to perform such planning. Any grant made under this section shall not exceed 50 percent of the estimated cost of the work for which the grant is made and shall be subject to terms and conditions prescribed by the Administrator to carry out this section. The Administrator is authorized, notwithstanding the provisions of section 3648 of the Revised Statutes, as amended, to make advance or progress payments on account of any planning grant made under this section. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated not exceeding $5 million to carry out the purposes of this section, and any amounts so appropriated shall remain available until expended.

Reserve of planned public works

SEC. 802. (a) In order (1) to encourage municipalities and other public agencies to maintain a continuing and adequate reserve of planned public works the construction of which can rapidly be commenced whenever the economic situation may make such action desirable, and (2) to attain maximum economy and efficiency in the planning and construction of local, State, and Federal public works, the Administrator is hereby authorized, during the period of 3 years commencing on July 1, 1954, to make advances to public agencies from funds available under this section (notwithstanding the provisions of section 3648 of the Revised Statutes, as amended) to aid in financing the cost of engineering and architectural surveys, designs, plans, working drawings, specifications, or other action preliminary to and in preparation for the construction of public works: Provided, That the making of advances hereunder shall not in any way commit the Congress to appropriate funds to assist in financing the construction of any public works so planned.

(b) No advance shall be made hereunder with respect to any individual project unless it conforms to an overall State, local, or regional plan approved by a competent State, local, or regional authority, and unless the public agency formally contracts with the Federal Government to complete the plan preparation promptly and to repay such advance when due.

(c) Advances under this section to any public agency shall be repaid without interest by such agency when the construction of the public works is undertaken or started: Provided, That in the event repayment is not made promptly such unpaid sum shall bear interest at the rate of 4 percent per annum from the date of the Government's demand for repayment to the date of payment thereof by the public agency. All sums so repaid shall be covered into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts.

(d) The Administrator is authorized to prescribe rules and regulations to carry out the purposes of this section.

(e) There is hereby authorized to be appropriated not exceeding $10 million to carry out the purposes of this section, and any amounts so appropriated shall remain available until expended. Not more than 5 percent of the funds so appropriated shall be expended in any one State.

Definitions

SEC. 803. As used in this title, (1) the term "State" shall mean any State, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, and any Territory or possession of the United States; (2) the term "Administrator" shall mean the Housing and Home Finance Administrator; (3) the term "public works" shall include any public works other than housing; and (4) the term "public agency" or "public agencies" shall mean any State, as herein defined, or any public agency or political subdivision therein.

TITLE IX—MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

SEC. 901. Section 607 of the act entitled "An act to expedite the provision of housing in connection with national defense, and for other purposes," approved October 14, 1940, as amended, is hereby amended by adding the following new subsection at the end thereof:

"(g) The Administrator may dispose of any permanent war housing without regard to the preferences in subsections (b) and (c) of this section when he determines that (1) such housing, because of design or lack of amenities, is unsuitable for family dwelling use, or (2) it is being used at the time of disposition for other than dwelling purposes, or (3) it was offered, with preferences substantially similar to those provided in the Housing Act of 1950 (64 Stat. 48), to veterans and occupants prior to enactment of said act, or (4) it is to be sold with a requirement that it be removed from its present location."

Sec. 902. (a) The Housing and Home Finance Administrator shall, as soon as practicable during each calendar year, make a report to the President for submission to the Congress on all operations under the jurisdiction of the Housing and Home Finance Agency during the previous calendar year.

(d) The first sentence of section 7 (b) of the United States Housing Act of 1937, as amended, is hereby amended to read as follows: "The annual report of the Housing and Home Finance Administrator to the President for submission to the Congress on the operations of the Housing and Home Finance Agency shall include a report on the operations and expenses of the Authority, including loans, contributions, and grants made or contracted for, low-rent housing and slum-clearance projects undertaken, and the assets and liabilities of the Authority."

(e) Section 106 (a) of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended, is hereby amended by striking "; and" at the end of paragraph (3) thereof, inserting a period in lieu thereof, and striking paragraph (4).

(f) The Federal Home Loan Bank Act, as amended, is hereby amended by striking the second sentence of section 20.

Sec. 903. The Housing and Home Finance Agency, including its constituent agencies, and any other departments or agencies of the Federal Government having powers, functions, or duties with respect to housing under this or any other law shall exercise such powers, functions, or duties in such manner as, consistent with the requirements thereof, will facilitate progress in the reduction of the vulnerability of congested urban areas to enemy attack.

Sec. 904. Title V of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended, is hereby amended as follows:

(a) In the first sentence of section 511 immediately following the phrase "July 1, 1952," strike the word "and", and insert at the end of the sentence just before the period a comma and the language "and an additional $100,000,000 on and after July 1, 1954."

$10,000,000 on July 1 of each of the years 1950, 1951, 1952, 1953, and 1954."

Act of controlling

SEC. 905. Insofar as the provisions of any other law are inconsistent with the provisions of this act, the provisions of this act shall be controlling.

Separability

SEC. 906. Except as may be otherwise expressly provided in this act, all powers and authorities conferred by this act shall be cumulative and additional to and not in derogation of any powers and authorities otherwise existing. Notwithstanding any other evidences of the intention of Congress, it is hereby declared to be the controlling intent of Congress that if any provisions of this act, or the application thereof to any persons or circumstances, shall be adjudged by any court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid, such judgment shall not affect, impair, or invalidate the remainder of this act or its applications to other persons and circumstances.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. SPENCE: Page 223, after line 4, insert the following new section:

"Public health functions

"SEC. 804. Notwithstanding any other provision of this title, all functions, powers, and duties under this title with respect to health, refuse disposal, sewage treatment, and water purification shall be exercised by and vested in the Surgeon General of the Public Health Service: Provided, That the Surgeon General shall have power to delegate to any other Federal agency, functions, powers, and duties with respect to construction."

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, this amendment is taken verbatim from the Defense Housing Act of 1951. There is a comprehensive provision for construction under this bill. But the amendment provides that the planning for construction which involves control of polluted waters disposal of sewage and waste, building of water systems, and all matters pertaining to health and sanitation should be administered by the Surgeon General and the Public Health Service.

The Public Health Service has for a long time had control of these functions of Government and has done a good job. In the Ohio valley, for instance, there was a compact entered into by eight States to cooperate in the attempt to clean up that river. Sanitary districts have been incorporated, districts that have the power to levy taxes, build sewers, and provide for sewage disposal.

Public Health is the only agency of the Government that is equipped to meet it by skill and experience. I cannot see how there could be any objection to the adoption of this amendment. We who live in the Ohio valley and have to drink the waters of the Ohio River know how serious the condition is. Unless all of the new construction comes under the jurisdiction of the Public Health Service it might undo what has been done through the years to clean up the river. We are making real progress in that matter now.

A great laboratory has been constructed at Cincinnati which is a laboratory to assist in controlling the pollution of waters all over the United States. They are making progress all the time. It is a great problem that is of interest to all the people everywhere because unless this is controlled the waters of almost all the streams will finally become polluted and filled with industrial waste which is harmful to the health of the people.

I hope the amendment will be adopted.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. SPENCE].

Mr. Chairman, this amendment was discussed in committee. We are quite sympathetic with the gentleman's position. I think perhaps we should have in mind that under the planning program this question becomes one of this nature: Will the Director of Health, Education, and Welfare administer the program, or will the Administrator of the Housing and Home Finance Agency administer the entire program?

The matter was submitted by Mrs. Hobby to me as chairman of the committee and the matter was submitted also by Mrs. Hobby to the Bureau of the Budget. The amendment was not adopted by the Committee on Banking and Currency for the reason that we received the following letter from Mr. Belcher, Assistant Director of the Bureau of the Budget:

EXECUTIVE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT,
BUREAU OF THE BUDGET,
Washington, D. C., March 26, 1954.
HON. OVETA CULP HOBBY,
Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, Washington, D. C.
(Attention: Mr. Reginald G. Conley,
5462 Health, Education, and Welfare Building.)

MY DEAR MRS. HOBBY: This will acknowledge Mr. Conley's letter of March 19, 1954, enclosing a copy of a report sent to the chairman of the House Committee on Banking and Currency on H. R. 7839, a bill to aid in the provision and improvement of housing, the elimination and prevention of slums, and the conservation and development of urban communities.

The report recommends that the advance planning provisions of the bill (sec. 702) be amended to provide that "all functions, powers, and duties * * * with respect to schools and health facilities, including hospitals, public water supply, and sewerage systems, shall be exercised by, and vested in, the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare."

The question of the administrative arrangements for the proposed new advance planning program was considered by this Bureau in the course of review and clearance of the original draft legislation. At that time we concluded that the objectives of the program could best be realized by placing responsibility for its administration in a single agency of the executive branch. This decision reflects experience gained in the administration of the previously authorized advance planning programs. The Housing and Home Finance Agency was chosen to exercise this responsibility because it is now charged with the administration and liquidation of the earlier advance planning programs, and because it is the agency of the executive branch most broadly concerned with the planning and provision of community facilities.

In endorsing unified administration by the Housing and Home Finance Agency, this Bureau contemplated that the Housing Administrator would provide for consultation with other departments and agencies in the review of applications for categories of public works in which those agencies have an interest under other Federal programs. Such interagency consultation has been employed in the administration of the earlier advance planning programs.

Since the receipt of your report, we have reviewed the entire question and remain convinced of the importance of providing for unified administration of this program. We have been assured that the Housing Administrator will fully utilize the services of departments and agencies having an interest in categories of community facilities for which advances are sought by State or local governments under this program, and will avoid the creation of staff and facilities which duplicate existing staffs and facilities of other Federal departments or agencies. For these reasons the Bureau of the Budget recommends against the enactment of the proposed amendment.

Since your report has already gone forward to the House Banking and Currency Committee, copies of this letter are being sent to the committee, and to the Housing Administrator.

Sincerely yours,

DONALD R. BELCHER,
Assistant Director.

Apparently the Bureau of the Budget is recommending that we follow through with this provision that the Administrator of the Housing and Home Finance Agency be the central agency designated by the Bureau of the Budget to administer and coordinate the whole program.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOLCOTT. I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. SPENCE. The amendment submitted was not the amendment submitted to the budget. It was an amendment she drew that was submitted to the budget. The building of houses and the control of the pollution of water are very different occupations. I do not think the Housing and Home Finance Agency is equipped to do it. I think the only agency in the United States that is equipped to do it is the Public Health Service, which has been doing it for years.

Mr. WOLCOTT. This planning program should be coordinated by the Housing and Home Financing Administrator as the President desires. We have to recognize the fact that this is the President's overall program, and the President wants the agency to function in this particular. The substance of the two amendments is, of course, identical.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. SPENCE].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, we have informed ourselves as to the number of amendments pending at the desk in connection with the remainder of the bill. My information is that there are 7 in addition to 3 perfecting amendments that I shall offer as chairman of the committee, which I assume are not controversial.

Mr. HAYS of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will yield, I have an amendment which is not at the Clerk's desk.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on amendments to the balance of the bill and amendments thereto close at 6 o'clock.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

Mr. RAINS. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, how about making it 3 minutes on each amendment? Then we will have a chance to discuss them.

Mr. WOLCOTT. How about 2 minutes on each side?

Mr. RAINS. On each side?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Mr. RAINS. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. RAINS: On page 223, after line 5, insert the following new section:

"SEC. 901. (a) The Federal Housing Commissioner and the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs, respectively, are hereby authorized and directed to require that, in connection with any property upon which there is located a dwelling designed principally for a single-family residence or a two-family residence and which is approved for mortgage insurance or guaranty prior to the beginning of construction, no mortgage shall be insured or guaranteed under the National Housing Act, as amended, or title III of the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944, as amended, unless the seller or builder, and such other person as may be required by the said Commissioner or Administrator to become warrantor, shall deliver to the purchaser or owner of such property a warranty that the dwelling is constructed in substantial conformity with the plans and specifications (including any amendments thereof, or changes and variations therein, which have been approved in writing by the Federal Housing Commissioner or the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs) on which the Federal Housing Commissioner or the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs based his valuation of the dwelling: Provided, That the Federal Housing Commissioner or the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs shall deliver to the builder, seller, or other warrantor his written approval (which shall be conclusive evidence of such approval) of any amendment of, or change or variation in such plans and specifications which the Commissioner or the Administrator deems to be a substantial amendment thereof, or change or variation therein, and shall file a copy of such written approval with such plans and specifications: Provided further, That such warranty shall apply only with respect to such instances of substantial nonconformity to such approved plans and specifications (including any amendments thereof, or changes or variations therein, which have been approved in writing, as provided herein, by the Federal Housing Commissioner or the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs) as to which the purchaser or homeowner has given written notice to the warrantor within 1 year from the date of conveyance of title to, or initial occupancy of, the dwelling, whichever first occurs: Provided further, That such warranty shall be in addition to, and not in derogation of, all other rights and privileges which such purchaser or owner may have under any other law or instrument: And provided further, That the provisions of this section shall apply to any such property covered by a mortgage insured or guaranteed by the Federal Housing Commissioner or the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs on and after July 1, 1954, unless such mortgage is insured or guaranteed pursuant to a commitment therefor made prior to July 1, 1954.

"(b) The Federal Housing Commissioner and the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs, respectively, are further directed to permit copies of the plans and specifications (including written approvals of any amendments thereof, or changes or variations therein, as provided herein) for dwellings in connection with which warranties are required by subsection (a) of this section to be made available in their appropriate local offices for inspection or for copying by any purchaser, homeowner, or warrantor during such hours or periods of time as the said Commissioner and Administrator may determine to be reasonable.

And renumber the succeeding sections accordingly.

Mr. RAINS. Mr. Chairman, this is a long amendment to attempt to discuss in 2 minutes. In brief, it is this, and if my distinguished and genial chairman will listen to me, I hope he will agree to the amendment.

It is the exact unanimous recommendation of a Subcommittee on Housing of the Committee on Banking and Currency and one that was in the bill which went from this House last year to the Senate. This amendment was stricken out in conference. It is an amendment which I intended to offer in the executive session.

It is an amendment which says a builder shall give to the man to whom he sells the house a copy of the plans and specifications so he will know what he has; and that the builder says, "This house is built in substantial conformity with the plans and specifications." That is all it says.

This amendment meets in principle the practice and has the approval of all good homebuilders of this country. They have certain fears about how it might work, but in many sections they give their own warranty. It is not a guaranty; it does not guarantee the house against defects or anything of the kind but merely says that this house is built in conformity with the plans and specifications.

A veteran is entitled to that if the Government is to insure the loan.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. RAINS].

The amendment was agreed to.

(Mr. HOWELL asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD at this point.)

Mr. HOWELL. Mr. Chairman, I strongly support the amendment offered by the very able gentleman from Alabama [Mr. RAINS]. From personal experience and observation of projects in my own congressional district, I believe a proper warranty provision would go far toward solving many of the serious deficiencies and difficulties encountered in connection with homes purchased under both the VA and FHA loan programs. Several instances have occurred in the years since World War II, in which veterans in particular have received shabby treatment from builders and mortgagors who were more interested in a "fast buck" than they were in providing decent homes for returning veterans and others desperately in need of housing.

Mr. HAYS of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. HAYS of Ohio: On page 220, line 25, strike out "$5,000,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$10,000,000."

Mr. HAYS of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, in the interest of conserving time, there is another amendment on the next page and I ask unanimous consent to have it read and considered with this amendment.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the amendment as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. HAYS of Ohio: On page 222, line 16, strike out "$10,000,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$20,000,000."

Mr. HAYS of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, these two amendments simply double the amount of money now in the bill for urban planning and public works planning. There is nothing in there that says that the Administrator has to give out the money unless he approves the purposes for which the money is going to be used.

It seems to me it is very uncertain about how much public works may be necessary. It may be that the Administrator will not find it necessary to use this money.

On the other hand, we cannot determine exactly what is ahead of us in the way of unemployment. I think it would be good insurance to have that money in there if the subdivisions and the urban areas need it; and if the Administrator decides that they need it, he will be able to allocate it to them so that plans can be made for substantial—and by substantial I mean permanent types of public works, something that will be useful and something that will last.

I talked about this yesterday. I do not want to belabor the point any more. I think it would be good insurance to have that amount of money there if they find it necessary to use it.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.
